Last year, less than 100,000 Alberta farmers produced $167 million of new wealth. Of that total $118 million came from field crops, mostly wheat.

Where would Alberta's 775,000 people get a living if it were not for agriculture? Yet this great industry must struggle along under the burden of marketing methods which, more often than not, provide inadequate prices. Sophistry and advertising avail little. Action is needed. The Wheat Pools and the farm organizations got the Wheat Board. This was a great forward step in marketing wheat, to which all now subscribe.

But it is just a step. The Board must be perpetuated. The agricultural industry must have greater all-round price protection. There must be no return to the laissez-faire methods. An aroused agriculture can make progress by uniting its strength. The best way to do this is to build up farm organizations and co-operatives.

Extra Large Belt Installed

The largest leather belt in Canada has just been installed at the plant of the Ogilvie Flour Mill in Medicine Hat.

The hides of three hundred mammoth steers went into the making of this belt, reverting to the ancient practice of turning the mill that ground the wheat—not, at the time, by gently plodding around a large pair of stones, but by flying at sixty miles an hour around a twenty-two foot pulley.

There are three plies in this belt, each 72 inches wide. It has a length of 126 feet and weighs exactly one ton.

The old belt, which this replaces, was a source of interest and wonder, as it was shown to the mill. For forty-five years it did its duty. The new belt is expected to function for as long or longer, during which time the 300 steers used in the making of it

NAPOLEON'S QUERY FOR CANNED RATIONS

Canning of food owes its inception to war. In 1795 Napoleon offered a prize of 12,000 francs for an improved and practical method of preserving food from one harvest to another. The prize was won in 1804 by Nicholas Appert, a confectioner of Paris, whose containers were made of wired and corked glass jars. The introduction of a metal container was due to an Englishman, Peter Durand, who was granted a patent in England in 1810. He called his container a tin can, as the pattern was based on that of a tea container. Most of the recent improvements in canning have been made in the North American continent.

The link with Napoleon, says the Imperial Economic Committee in its world-wide survey of the industry in canned food, and the fact that canned foods were used on a large scale in the Crimean War, the American Civil War, and in British colonial wars may perhaps emphasis to be laid on military necessity as a factor in the development of canning. It has undoubtedly played an important part, but the most powerful stimulus was the demand created by the industrial and agricultural expansion in the second half of the nineteenth century, and the development of new areas of food production remote from consuming markets. As the demand in these markets increased, local industries were established for the canning of home-grown produce.

The commercial marketing of canned foods began about 1820, among the first foods so marketed being preserved meats and pate. In Canada commercial canning is one of the oldest of the large organized industries. The first canning factory in Canada was established at Grimsby, Ont., in 1878. Canada is now one of the leading countries of the world in the canning of food, particularly vegetables and fruit.

Alberta dairymen won numerous prizes for butter at the London, Ontario Western Fair. In competition for 14 lb. solid pack Northern Alberta Dairy Pool took first prize; for 30 lb. prints, the following were in the first prize group: Woodland, Edmonton; Lacombe Creamery, Lacombe; Burns and Co., Stettler; Burns and Co., Hay Lakes; and Burns and Co., New Norway.

This Little Pig Went To Market

And this one stayed at home. Well, sometimes it did and sometimes it didn't. You see, a farmer might have inserted a classified ad "pigs for sale", and then Mr. Pig or Messrs. Piggies would simply have a change of home. Many farmers who have pigs or other kinds of livestock for sale make use of classified ads to let other farmers know of it. Classified ads are cheap, effective, and cover a wide range. Implements, hay, greenfeed or grain in fact almost any used saleable article can often be sold by meanns of the humble "classified." Classified ads "produce" things sometimes too. Somebody wanting something simply say so through the medium of a classified, and presto, somebody bobs up with just the wanted article for sale.

There is a liberal allowance of thirty words, and rates are low.

Joseph Rogers Passes On To His Reward

On Tuesday night Mr. Joseph Rogers passed away at his home at Tofield, after a brief illness, at the ripe age of 83.

Joseph Rogers have been a familiar figure in Tofield for nearly thirty years, and during that time made a host of friends who will be sorry to hear of his passing. For many years, despite his advanced age, erect of carriage and springy of step, he would cheerily greet all and sundry whenever meeting occured. A liberal of the old school, he never gave up strict allegiance to political beliefs which he believed to be in the best interests of the country as a whole. A rendy speaker, for many years he was in continuous demand as chairman for meetings of all kinds in the early years he made it a special point to extend a hearty welcome to newcomers to the town and district and quite often he bore the "looked better" to new comers after meeting Joseph Rogers. To the last he maintained a keen interest in matters of general interest and could converse intelligently on a wide variety of subjects.

Joseph Rogers was born December 31st, 1855 in Tecumseh Township, County of Simcoe, Ontario. While still a young man he followed farming in York County, where he commenced battery life as a mere clerk, later turning to farming as an occupation. He was among the first Canadian battery settlers in Alberta. He was united in marriage to Josephine Proctor and in 1918 with Mrs. Rogers, came to Alberta. Mrs. Rogers will be remembered by many residents of Tofield and district. She passed away about two years ago. Joseph Rogers leaves to mourn his loss, three sons, Ernest of Tofield; Walter of Grenson, Alta., and Harry of Tofield. There are also a number of grandchildren.

The funeral will be held on Friday

HASTINGS LAKE

Thanks to the interest taken in the school Fair by Mr McKinney who taught the school last year and by Mr. Coward the new teacher, plus the co-operation of all the students, Hastings Lake School was represented place standing at the Fair held last Tuesday at Minisih Hall. Miss Isobel Kyle captured the Girl's scholarship. The entries her to a week at the Vermilion School of Agriculture next summer The little folk did their best to boost up the poinus in favor of the home school just as the other pupils did by having three first amongst their several sines. Miss Lorraine Donald and Master Charlie Lindberg each won first place for their penmanship, while Miss Jean Bruce won a first for her stick print.

Due to the number of students entering school this year, grade nine has been discontinued Messrs. Jack Ellis and Ernest Tough will continue their studies at Lindbrook High, but the others at the opposite end of the district have had to resort to correspondence courses, the Lindbrook school being too far away for daily attendance during the cold winter months.

Mr. Coward is putting on a dance in the schoolhouse Friday night, October 6th. This will be the first dance held there the new floor was put in. Come and try it.

OUR TRIP TO NEW YORK
By A.B.C.

At the request of the Tofield Mercury we will try to give you some of the High Lights of our recent trip to The World's Fair—In five weeks we covered some 7000 miles, passing through some 18 of the United States (without a flat) through the Hills of old Montana and on to the Red Lands of the Dakotas, to St. Paul, Minn., where we saw our first ball game under flood lights. We visited around Chicago, as no Small Town Driver should try and drive in the Metropolis—The Detroit, Michigan and on to Toronto, Ont. The Toronto Fair was on when we arrived. Took in Niagara Falls on the way, and along the St. Lawrence River to Montreal, Que. crossing the border to Albany, N. Y. and to Springfield, Mass., and on to Hartford, Conn. up home town, where I met a number of my Old School Friends, spent part of the day on a visit to Hampton, Conn. where we had quite a visit with Tom Mix' Murray Hamm. Murray is coach of the Hockey Team and Director of Sports at Yale College, New Haven, Conn. We drove on to Newark, N.B. Just across the Hudson River from New York City, where we had our headquarters for 7 days, with an old school friend, Pat Mandel. Pat is employed as a clerk in the Royal Bank Club, and in the off season, one of the foremost referees in Big Time Football. He really knows his way around, and under his direction we saw New York City, what we will try and give you some of the Highlights. The sons of the ground is about 1 1-2 miles wide by 3 1-2 miles long, and covers 1918 acres. The Theme Centre is the Trylon and Perisphere. The Trylon is a 700 ft. pyramid, the Perisphere is a huge ball 200 feet high and connected to the Trylon by a ramp 60 feet above the ground. But let us go into the Ball or Perisphere, 12 stories high and as broad as a city block., swept upward on the longest moving staircase in the world, to the level entrance 50 feet above the ground. Here you step into one of the revolving balconies, seemingly unsupported in space, it just take 6 minutes to make

Warn Motorists Of Deadly Poison

This is a danger period of the year for motorists, particularly on account of the possibilities of carbon monoxide poisoning. It is pointed out by officials of the Alberta Motor Association

Each season, upon the advent of colder weather, this deadly poison takes its toll of drivers in Alberta and other parts of the country.

Every possible care should be taken to avoid the deadly effects of this gas. It is emphasized by officials

Drivers who know of the dangers make certain that defects in engine [illegible] are checked over carefully and everything possible is done to forestall the circulating of carbon monoxide. Also, it is necessary to make certain that a window is kept open in the car, and fresh air is assured.

At this time of the season there is a tendency to keep all car windows closed. Particularly when starting the car it is advisable to have windows open

Officials of the A.M.A. are determined to bring the carbon monoxide toll to a minimum in Alberta this year, if it is at all possible.

We Owe It To Britain

It is the duty of every Canadian to help the product of British industry in preference to a non-Empire product throughout the war, says The Globe and Mail, Toronto, or we have no right to expect Britain to make large purchases here

Under the heading, "We Owe It To Britain" that newspaper mentions that the British trade commissioner in Canada has been urged to press for the largest possible flow of exports from the United Kingdom, which means, of course, the largest possible flow into Canada of United Kingdom commodities

He points out that last year the adverse British trade balance in visible goods was around $2 billion.

In the four years from 1935 to 36, inclusive, Britain spent $670 million more in Canada than Canadians spent in Britain. For the first half of 1939 the balance was $97 million and $60 million We are more than $1 billion in the hole in the result of commercial transactions with the Mother country in 4 1-2 years.

From 1914 to 1918 Canada sold Britain commodities to value of $2,514 million, while purchasing from Britain only $488 million worth of goods. This gave Canada a surplus of $2 billion in trade accrued in the two years.

The Albert Wheat Pool is very much please to see a prominent newspaper fr m prote tionist Toronto [illegible] Globe and Mail, give [illegible] Britain 's a buyer" in trade relations. The Wheat Pools and the farm organizations of Western Canada have been pressing out for many years that Canada must buy in Britain if we expect Britain to buy our farm products and other goods. The prairie farmer has known for years that Canada has never treated Britain fairly in her trade relations. This attitude has been inspired by the grandiloquent [illegible] manufacturers.

Farmers of the prairie provinces want Canada, now and always, to be most of the time made in Britain are cheaper and better than those made in Canada, but also because the farmers of the west know that in order to buy Britain must sell.

The British market has been the stand-by of western agriculture ever since the prairies and [illegible] alternative sale

Keep it up and down to "brass tacks", seeing that there seems to be agreement between east and west on the desirability of the British market as [illegible] exports.

The Globe and Mail points out that by exports of virtually everything that furnishes the life blood of British industry declined heavy by [illegible] Canada, together with [illegible] declined by 25 per cent. Within five minutes after he had sent his message, he was interviewing the key man.

A NORTH AMERICAN—

The Editor broke away Friday and Saturday from the rather dingy building which houses the Mercury to attend the Convention of the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Assn. (Alberta Division.) In earlier days we would go travelling off to conventions at considerable distances, Halifax, Toronto, Vancouver, but of late years have been content to let convention trips simmer down to one every two years, in part at least to let the convention come to us in preference to travelling long distances to the convention. Edmonton is but a short journey either by train or bus. At all newspaper conventions a certain amount of entertaining occurs both as regards gustatory delights and intellectual inspiration. At the convention held on Friday and Saturday, those attending were entertained to luncheon on Friday by the Edmonton Dailies, to a dinner Friday evening by a number of wholesale paper houses and on Saturday to a dinner by the Grain and Milling Advertising Service, Winnipeg. At all three functions, those assembled were addressed by men of keen intellect and fluent tongue. Main addresses were given, Friday noon, by Mr Freedman of the Edmonton Bulletin; Friday evening by Professor D. Cameron, Director of Department of Education U. of A.; and Saturday afternoon by W. Brockington K. C., Counsel North West Grain Dealers Association and Chairman of Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. The addresses could be summed up in their respective order, as ultra eloquent and inspiri g; practical and absorbingly interesting; and exceedingly clever and thought creating.

And it is with reference to one of the thoughts expressed by I. W. Brockington, K.C., that this editorial deals. Mr. Brockington made reference to the shadow of war that now envelopes us. He recalled the war of 1914 and described the parade down Jasper Avenue upon the outbreak of war in which he and the late Lionel Gibbs participated. He contrasted it to the present day resolute calmness. He said that twenty-five years had come and gone since that enthusiastic parade down Jasper Avenue and during that time each of us Englishmen alive with thoughts of England and of things English, had evolved a North American! To us this was a very significant statement, more to us perhaps, because it put into words exactly what had been running through our minds for some months, perhaps years past.

During the years 1907—1914 many thousands of people from the British Isles came to Canada which to them was a land of promise. Many were young, in their teens or early twenties and, as is the natural way of men and women, in due time married and established homes of their own. Into those homes came children to be raised in an environment vastly different to the environment in which their parents were raised. Their school life w. different in many respects too. Still British of course, they were not led to believe, whether at any time that true or otherwise, that "one Englishman was as good as three foreigners". Even here worship in the time of their parents centering around National figures, Gladstone, changed to names like Montcalm, Wolfe, MacDonald, Laurier. In thousands of cases, one might safely say a big majority, their early working years were different too. Trades, outside of the land, were not in terms of wages, hours, shops, factories or mines, but rather in terms of homesteads, horses, cows, acres, yields and prices per bushel or per pound. The literature coming into the home too changed a lot from that going into the childhood homes of their parents. In contrast to Boy's Friend, Girl's Friend, Answers, Tidbits, Sphere or Strand periodicals, these Canadian children were, as regards literature raised on such publications as Youth's Companion, Onward, Canadian Courant, Maclean's' The Saturday Evening Post, almost an equal mixture of Canadian and United States literature. Outside the home a pavement became a sidewalk; a palisade, a fence; a store; a grocery; a street car; a milk bar, a soda fountain; a public house, a beer parlor; a chapel, a church; the cinematograph, the movies; the wireless, radio; and a motor car an automobile.

Not anyone of the above mentioned things in particular, but a blend of them all together, has as expressed by Mr. Brockington created out of many native Britishers, a new type with thoughts of Britain and all things British, many North Americans. The reasoning is equally true of those coming from other European countries.

To use an every day expression "and so what?." What does this twenty-five years or more of slow transformation from a typical European to a typical North American mean to those who have changed, the children who have grown up and to those now in the British Isles. It means much. It means that with a North American outlook we look across the Atlantic and see a country in which we have ties of blood and affection, fighting, not a war of aggression so that the spoils of war may fall to her hand, but a war to stabilize international affairs and to bring about a condition where international treaties really mean what they say, are lived up to and changed when necessary without resort to force. And seeing this, not through the glasses of Europeans who constantly dwell in an atmosphere of military and naval activity, but through the glasses of North Americans whose natural bent is the path of peace and whose inward hearts tell them war is futile and rarely ever permanently settles a problem. North Americans—Canadians—voluntarily offer to help.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

Peace, that blessed state, is already at this early date being talked about. Let us hope it will come on favorable terms upon which peace can be made have been set out concisely and simply by the leaders of Great Britain and France. They are that Hitlerism and Nazism shall be eliminated, that Poland and Czechoslovakia shall be restored as independent nations, and that disarmament shall take place

When Peace eventually is to be made, it should not be left to the politicians alone, but the nations who have risked their lives, and the farmers who form the bulk of the people of the world, themselves should have something to say about it; all to the end that not only shall a political peace be made, but what is perhaps more important, that economic justice shall be done; so that it shall be possible for the nations overwhelmed and under-fed people of Europe to obtain all the wheat and foodstuffs they require from the Canadian and other prairies, in exchange for their own products and products.

If these things are done, then the world truly, and at least, will have a just and lasting peace.

The Press And The Crisis

By Arthur Baker, Chief of the London Times Parliamentary Staff

The world's state of crisis calls for good heads and strong nerves. The present heat help to build up a hate-free, fear-free, peace-loving race. There is only happen if we newspapermen are prompted with these qualities.

Journalists have a great function for the state the world is in, we must start with ourselves and our own profession. How can we expect war in the world to cease when we still have conflict in our own lives, in our offices and offices, in our own profession and in our own minds.

As a guide during this prolonged and difficult period of tension, many of us newspapermen in Fleet Street have taken the following sentences from Rudyard Kipling's poem on "The Press and Moral Re-Armament" which was published in Editor and Publisher and Journalist. The Manifesto is signed by the President of the British National Union of Journalists, whose motto goods to the Newspaper Gold, and by the Immediate Past President of the Institute of Journalists, along with many other well-known newspapermen.

"In its dual capacity of educator and interpreter of the people," it says, "the press has great opportunities as well as great responsibilities. It can prepare a united, fair-minded, and panic-proof public opinion. It can also do much to build bridges of international understanding."

Magazine which produce negative papers. Prejudiced minds produce prejudiced papers. Positive minds make positive papers. In general public are tired of reading, and we newspapermen are tired of having to record negative news. They and we know this news by heart—depression, famine, suicide, murder, war, armed warring. Readers and writers are sick and tired of the woes of the world. Journalism with positive news—lives changed, homes remade, strikes settled, employment rate, wars averted Nations morally re-arming, that is the news that is the journalism of the future.

Moral re-armament means we have the answer, and we can fight the world without fear and yet leave a positive love in the public mind. We can have hope not hate in the headlines.

Moral Re-Armament makes us quick to seize on the positive rather than the negative and to put up positive headlines. A crash on a street car; a paper work by the four MRA standards of absolute honesty, unselfishness, purity, and love. In this way I find I can play a part in standing for and not helping to create war. It means that my relations with my self are happy and harmonious. A day-by-day existence in God's guidance helps me in my work as well as in my home.

The great privilege of still having a free press carries with it a great responsibility of seeing that that press is also a fair press. A press that is re-armed against hate and fear and through capitals of Europe are working to remove from the minds of ground-free nations. Moral Re-Armament is the fulfillment of our calling, the highest service we can give to our nation and the world.

Winter Eggs For Poultry Profits

(Experimental Farm News)

The production of winter eggs is a specialized business and since many of the farmers of Canada are producing the winter, the price rises and the thrifty poultryman may capitalize on the condition.

The first step in the production of winter eggs is to make sure that the pullets to be used are from a good laying strain and hatched sufficiently early to start laying before winter weather comes. Two other main points to be considered are housing and feeding. An effort should be made to have the house wind-proof on the north and sufficiently well ventilated by adjustable openings on the south to keep moisture from collecting. Cleanliness is conducive to good health and higher production

At the Dominion Experimental Station at Scott, Sask., states E. Van Slyke, Assistant in Livestock, the following experiments were made during the winter of 1937-38 to determine what would be the most economical ration for laying pullets in winter production. Pullets were divided into 4 pens of 100 birds each. Pen 1 got 100 lbs. oat chop, 100 lbs. barley chop 100 lbs. bran, 100 lbs. screenings, 100 lbs. of the above mixture, the following supplements were added 4 lb. of fine salt, 8 lb. of bone meal and 2 lb. of cod liver oil (or pilchard oil) Pens 2, 3 and 4 received the same mixture as pen 1 but the amount of cod liver oil was gradually reduced in each succeeding pen, while a small amount of fish meal was substituted for the cod liver oil. The birds were fed in open pastures, but for winter conditions they would be confined while the birds are running outside on the open pastures, but for winter conditions they would be confined while the birds are running outside on the open pastures, but for winter conditions they would be confined while the birds are running outside on the

Cornhill M. D. Held Regular Meeting

The Municipal District of Cornhill held a regular council meeting at the District's Office, Tofield on Friday, October 13th.

There were present Reeve Walker (in the chair), Councillors Anderson, Coombes, Holmberg, Kertzman and Bawtey.

The minutes of the last regular meeting together with a list of the accounts passed for payment were read and upon motion formally adopted.

In conformity with the Municipal District's Act, a deputy reeve for the ensuing six months was appointed. Councillor Anderson was re-appointed deputy reeve he having been elected to this position earlier in the year to include needed advice and compensation for the opposite department at $50.00 per year, including needed advice and compensation for the opposite department at $250.00 per year, including needed advice, conveyancing and all court work with the exception of Supreme Court There offers did not include out of province work.

After some discussion in which the advantages and disadvantages of the two positions were fully dealt with it was moved by Councillor Anderson that Mr. A. T. Mclean be retained as legal advisor to the District from July 1st 1939 to March 19th, 1940, at a sum of $175.00 to be made in two payments. Carried.

During discussion of the above it was brought out that judging by past experience and immediate future expectations, the District would be better and more economically served by having a legal retainer, than by intermittent engaging of a solicitor.

Communication from McKernan's Ltd. asking for the 10 per cent discount on taxes. It appears the tax notice had not been received in time as the parties concerned had moved and had not notified the municipal office as to change of address. Council were of the opinion that the discount could not be granted now.

Letter was received from Department re the application of Mr. Yakish Kozak of Ringman for old age pension. Department asked for particulars and the letter was tabled pending the securing of the requested information.

On motion of Councillor Anderson T. Kozak was recommended for old age pension.

The resignation of Mr. Wm. Sydenham as pound keeper was read. Mr. Sydenham said he regretted he could not continue the booth as they had been destroyed by fire when his home burned last winter.

On the motion of Reeve Walker, Mr. Sydenham's resignation was accepted.

A communication was read from the Department of Public Health re the Provincial Health Unit. Three were now in operation and a fourth in formation. A meeting was to be held at Camrose September 16th, to which representatives of the Council were invited. It transpired that Reeve Walker and Councillor Holmberg had attended this meeting. A brief report of the meeting was given.

OUR TRIP TO NEW YORK

By A.B.C.

New York, America's greatest cosmopolitan city, drive with throbbing industry by day, and bright with lights and gay laughter by night, pouring its hordes into countless attractive consumer resorts close by. Its waterfront eases most of the great steamers of the world. A view of the traffic-congested Hudson River, with its background of the colossal skyscrapers of Manhattan, is a scene never to be forgotten. No city is so thrilling, so filled with points of interest as New York. Thrusting across the island are Fifth Avenue and Broadway, the latter a continuous street of people. In lower New York is crowded together the heterogeneous collection of towering skyscrapers dirty tenements, Plaza of Nations (Irving) across the Brooklyn Bridge (tell me it is just the family wash) At Broad and Wall St. is the stock exchange, at Board of Trade Tavern, where Washington took farewell of his officers. This is the Old Post building in lower York. The Aquarium, which contains a collection of marine life. The Foreign and Tyrannest sections are of great interest, on Mott Street is Chinatown. It still retains some of its old picturesqueness. The Ghetto, occupied principally of Russian, Polish and Hungarian immigrants, affords a rachi sketch of Jewish organizations in the world. Atmosphere of a different type is that of Greenwich Village, it is favorite community for writers, artists and Bohemians. Midtown New York is the centre of shopping Central Park. The Park contains several lakes, drives and monuments statues. Our trip would not be complete without a visit to Rockefeller Centre, the Home of Radio City, and housing the largest theatre in the world. A visit to the Stata Building the tallest structure in the world. Other interesting places to see are Madison Square Garden, The Metropolitan Opera House, and Greenwich Town and Seaport drive. In upper New York are three famous universities Columbia, Fordham and New York University. New York's gay and glittering night life always attracts visitors. Times Square and along Broadway pulses quickness to the dazzling lights and eager tempo of the theatres, restaurants and night clubs, where gaiety and excitement run high at all times. At the Polo Grounds, and Yankee Stadium the big league baseball games are held, while at Jamaica and Belmont Park, horse racing holds sway. One of the show places of the city is Coney Island, the famous playground with amusement facilities of all kinds and so we leave New York and travel on to Washington D. C. Passing along past the State, Capital, The Mint, White House, and the several department buildings, we journeyed on past the Lincoln Memorial to the Gee. Washington Memorial Bridge, where we crossed the Potomac River into Virginia where the Jim Crowe Law seems to be still in effect. At all the colored folk, have the back seats in all modes of conveyances reserved, it almost seemed to take one back to the slave days. Carry me back to Old Virginia, The Trail of the Lonesome Pine, The Shenandoah Valley, and the Blue Ridge Mountains. Virginia the Land of Romance; there is

TOWN COUNCIL

A regular meeting of the Council of the Town of Tofield was held on Monday evening October 16th. Present were Mayor Swift, Councillors Law, Lowell, Taylor, Burke, Hammond and Bellamy.

Some routine business was transacted, and a few accounts passed and ordered paid.

A communication from Board of Public Utility Commissioners indicated the holders of Tofield debentures were now prepared to negotiate a refunding of the town's and school district's debenture debt at reduced rates of interest It will likely be some time before a settlement of this problem can be finally effected, but negotiations as to a settlement will be proceeded with The Utilities Board has been requested to place the town on the matter before the representatives of the owners of the bonds

CANADIANA

THE SKY'S THE LIMIT

Ottawa:—Hundreds of millions of dollars will be spent in Canada to make her the new air centre of the Empire. The plan was announced in London recently and involves training air force recruits from Britain, Australia, New Zealand and Canada, as well as manufacturing all types of aircraft in the Dominion. Building and training will be adaptable for both war and civil aviation.

AID FOR ALLIES

Ottawa:—Canadian mines are being stepped up to peak production, according to statements of mining officials here. Compared with 1914, gold production is vastly increased. Production of copper has been stepped up almost eight times, nickel has been increased five times and lead production is ten times what it was at that time

FREE SPEECH

Ottawa:—Answering a protest from the C.C.F., in which M. J. Coldwell expressed alarm at the "sweeping character" of censorship regulations in Canada, Prime Minister King assured the national chairman that there was no threat against criticism of government policy beyond the regulations of the Defence of Canada Measures.

"Subject to this protection," said Mr. King's letter, "party political controversy will not be restricted or impeded."

PRICE PROBLEMS

Ottawa:—Fixing the prices of particular commodities has not been considered by the wartime prices board, it was announced here recently. The board has been holding daily sessions. Complaints of profiteering, several prosecutions for food hoarding, and general problems are said to have been engaging the attention of board members.

OIL UP

Calgary:—Allowable production from 86 wells in Turner Valley has been increased to 26,000 barrels of crude oil per day. This was announced recently by the Alberta Petroleum and Natural Gas conservation board. Proration of individual wells now sets an output of from 65 to 350 barrels per day

MORE SURPRISES

Ottawa.—Afterasts who have been telling of potato shortages find no confirmation in the latest estimates of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. This report sets 30,373,000 cwt. as the production for 1939 as compared with 35,333,000 cwt. for 1938. The same report estimates an increase of 10 per cent in sugar beets, bringing

GENERAL OVERHAUL

Ottawa:—Governor General Lord Tweedsmuir is to undergo medical examination and special treatment in New York, it was announced at government house. These sources felt no serious concern about Lord Tweedsmuir's health but said he would undergo "a general medical overhaul."

WHAT ALBERTA MAKES

Edmonton:—Addressing members of the Alberta Provincial Sheep Breeders' Association here recently S. P. Tanner, general manager of Alberta's only woolen mill, asked for the co-operation of the sheep breeders in the venture. He said they should take care of the mill, now employing between 30 and 40 persons, to produce goods in Alberta woolen goods.

BUTTER UP

Calgary:—Price of Butter jumped another cent a pound here recently to bring total increase to 6 cents during the last month. This is due to "legitimate" causes rather than speculation, according to creamery men. Poor pasturage following a dry July is responsible for a drop in cream receipts, they said.

Board Says Continued Sugar Hoarding May Bring Restrition On Sales

Ottawa, Oc 16—Continued hoarding may bring restrictions on sugar sales, the wartime prices and trade board said last night in a review of the sugar situation.

"There will be no such shortage of sugar as occurred during the last great war," the statement said "When the World War began, world sugar production was estimated at about 16,500,00 tons. In the crop year ended August 31, 1939, world production was reported at 29,642,000 tons, an increase of well over 50 per cent in total output.

"Hence there exists good reasons for believing that no acute shortage is in view or is possible. But if some of the Canadian public continue to hoard sugar, the board may find it necessary to restrict sales in order to provide for a more and equitable distribution."

The review said there was a decided easing in the sugar situation. Sugar from the 1939 beet crop is already beginning to reach the markets in eastern and central Canada. Supplies of raw cane sugar, now en route to Canada, will shortly reach

"The Toy Wife" For Next Tuesday

Those that like romance will find it here aplenty. Luise Rainer in the "Toy Wife" lived only to be loved and to the end paid with her heart for a lifetime of recklessness. Splendor against the heroic background of old world New Orleans, this romantic drama will hold your interest through out its entire length. Luise Rainer is supported by Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young and Barbara O'Neil. Other features include: comedy, news reel, etc. Show starts at 8:30.

"During the past week, the arrival of over 1,000,000 pounds a day of beet sugar on the Ontario and Quebec markets has done much to reduce the shortage," the statement said.

Large industrial consumers have also co-operated by releasing nearly 6,000,000 pounds of sugar for retail distribution. During the past five weeks the board co-operated with refiners in emergency distribution and allocation of sugar supplies.

"Our immediate task was the allocation of a large proportion of the available sugar for the canning and preserving of fruit," the statement said. "Small establishments found it extremely difficult to obtain normal requirements and in some instances grocers in outlying districts were unable to obtain a bag of sugar without the board's intervention.

"The Alberta beet sugar supply is also coming on the market. The two sugar beet crops will produce over 150,000,000 pounds of sugar. In addition, substantial quantities of raw sugar are exported to arrive within the next fortnight. Thus, Canada is assured of its normal supply of sugar during the coming year."

LINDBROOK

The sympathy of the people of the Lindbrook district is extended to Mrs. Letourneau and members of the family on their sad loss. The late Mr. Letourneau was well known to many here, the majority of whom knew him in his official capacity as secretary-treasurer of this municipality.

We hope by now that the other two occupants of the car, Messrs. J. Tough and F. Carter have recovered from the shock and will experience no ill effects from same.

Miss Jean Leahy, of New Westminster B.C., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Leahy, Lindbrook's pioneer merchant, passed through here on Tuesday night's flyer enroute to Ottawa where she has joined up for service with the Red Cross. Miss Jean was born and spent her early girlhood here and will be remembered by many here, all of whom wish her the best of luck in her new venture.

The "winter" spasm No. 1 is over and now its warm again. There are quite a few stooks out yet to be threshed so we hope it keeps fine long enough to allow these to be finished with. Another thing, several parties are finishing the Blogo one and we hear the usual L.C.C. meeting

LAKESSORE

A number of young people gathered at the home of T. W. Ferguson on Monday evening for a social hour. They had a jolly time and have plans for organizing so that such pleasant times can be had regularly.

A very successful Hallowe'en party was held at the school last Friday when Miss Hardy and her pupils entertained parents and friends. Some of the older ones played bridge while others joined the kiddies in games and stunts. The Junior Red Cross mentioned some articles as a means of raising money for their worthy cause. A delicious lunch closed the evening—and no one really missed the coffin that wouldn't boil. (Maybe some Hallowe'en spell bewitched the stove.) Among the guests was Mrs. McEwen of Calgary who was spending some time with her niece Mrs. T. E. Seale. A number of old friends especially enjoyed visiting with her.

Mr. and Mrs. Stan Yakabuski spent a day or two with Mrs. Seale this week.

Our deepest sympathy is extended to Beth McDonald whose mother passed away in Tofield, October 17th.

There will be a variety of entertainment at the amateur contest being sponsored by the Ladies' Aid at Lakeshore School this Friday (Nov. 3rd.) No need to go to "New York or its vicinity" to display your talents to Major Bowes. Just head for Lakeshore School on Friday, November 3rd.

The Book Club is being reorganized this Fall and as before each member will start with a book of her own and pass on the books every two weeks beginning November 15th. Anyone interested is welcome to join the group.

Mr. John Murray and two children, Geraldine and Ann from Biggar, Sask., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Murray this week.

Cory Knabosh and Trueman Johnson motored to Edmonton on Tuesday to see Cary's sister Annie who was rushed to the Misericordia Hospital for an operation a few days ago. Friends of Annie will be glad to know she is progressing well.

BRIDAL SHOWER

A large bridal shower was held at the curling rink on Saturday night last, when Miss Pat Burnett, who is to be married November 10th was the guest of honor. Nearly 100 ladies were present and the shower of gifts for the bride to be included a large number of both beautiful and useful articles. Mrs. Barden made a brief speech of presentation and Miss Burnett, though almost overwhelmed, suitably thanked those present. An entertainment bridge was played.

Buy a Poppy from the Local Branch of the I.O.D.E. for Armistice Day. They will be available soon.

KINGMAN

The young people are very busy preparing the ground for the skating rink.

A large crowd attended the wedding dance which was held in the Kingman Hall for the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Schroder. They were recipients of many nice gifts. Lunch was served at midnight and everybody had a good time.

Rev. Vinge held services at the Lutheran Church last Sunday evening. He will hold the next service at Kingman on November 12th at 8:00 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Vagne moved to Tofield last week as Mr. Vagne has a job with the Searle Grain Co.

Mrs. Leland is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Alex Asp for a few days.

A charivari was held at Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Simonson's in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Merlin Simonson last Monday evening.

The snow has gone again and we hope that the people that have not finished threshing will be able to finish now.

Mr. Abe Wideman passed away on October 27th. He leaves to mourn his loss besides his wife, four sons and five daughters. The funeral was held on Monday service being conducted at the Monnonite Church.

We extend our deepest sympathy to the Abe Wideman family in their recent sad bereavement.

HASTINGS LAKE

We are having an awful time keeping track of Jack Ellis and Earnest Tough. The last report was that they had sent for their grade nine correspondence courses. On Friday night we were informed that Mr. McKinney had arranged to have them taught at North Cooking Lake High School and therefore they were sending back the courses and returning to North Cooking Lake School on Monday morning. Let's have them there wishing them the best of luck no matter how, when, or where they get their grade nine schooling.

The program of the supper, hammer, bingo and dance completely filled last Friday night. Considering the road and the weather the turnout was very good and the evening can be considered a success, the ladies realizing a nice little profit for their efforts.

The annual meeting of the local Social Credit Group was held on Wednesday evening. The officers elected for the coming year were: President, Mr. J. Gladue; Vice-President, Mr. G. Anderson; Secretary, Mrs. N. Paterson. The group is putting on a pie social and dance in the school house on Friday, November 3rd. Now that the weather has turned milder, a good crowd is look for.

Red Cross Committee Hold Enthusiastic Meet

COMMUNITY SALE PLANNED

Wednesday night at the Town Hall a group of interested citizens met to complete arrangements for Red Cross activities in Tofield and district. All the committees appointed at the previous meeting were represented and there were in addition quite a number of other interested people.

A general discussion took place as to the best means of organizing the resources of the district into a real working unit.

Information was at hand from headquarters that the call at present was for socks, mitts, sweaters, bandages. Material for these may be procured from headquarters, the local organization buying the material. These articles have to be made strictly according to instructions supplied in circular form from headquarters. The following preliminary set-up was therefore decided upon.

1.—That while membership in the Red Cross can be obtained by the payment of $1.00, membership is not compulsory for working co-operators.

2.—That town and country ladies' organizations be requested to meet and decide for themselves to what extent they, as organized groups, desire to assist the Red Cross Branch.

3.—That sort group appoint a representative, preferably an experienced knitter or sewer, to call on Mrs. Hammond of Tofield. Mrs. Hammond will explain the kind of work desired, the procedure necessary in the handling of headquarters supplies. She will also have samples of work done and typed instructions for knitting sewing etc. in addition to the town organizations, the following district organizations were listed as likely to assist, Lakeshore, McEwanie, Spiteful, Ketchamoot, Dodds, Lindbrook, Bardo, Amisk Creek, Hastings Lake, Kerchamoot Young People's Society

It was decided to hold a dance on Friday, Nov. 10th, net proceeds to go to the fund of the Red Cross Branch. A dance committee of three Messrs Chapman, Allan and Bruce were appointed.

It was also decided to make preliminary arrangements for a community sale Messrs McCarthy, Bellamy and Stimson were appointed to take care of this. Residents will be invited to donate articles past their usefulness to them but still of value to others and when a sufficient quantity has been assembled, a sale will be announced.

The Tofield Golf Club made a handsome gesture to the branch, making a donation of their remaining funds, about forty dollars.

The following are the officers and convenors of committees any of whom will be pleased to give any further information desired.

Hon. Mr. Gardiner Tells How Canadian Farmers Can Best Help In War

Farmers in Canada can best serve the Dominion and best serve the Empire and the Allies during the war by doing the things best that they have been doing since they started farming says Hon. James G. Gardiner, Dominion Minister of Agriculture when he spoke at the banquet at Brockville, Ontario, on October 18, at the conclusion of the international Ploughing Match. He emphasized that while he thought that the farmer should get a price that would advance production he felt sure that in a time of war price is not the first consideration, but supply.

Continuing Mr. Gardiner said—"Average production is assured by good farming in an area where the seasons and rainfall are reasonably constant. The individual can, in such areas, be assured if certain return which will depend upon the nature of the soil, provided he farms well.

"If such areas are fully occupied in as only possible it increase production by improving farming including fertilizing methods. Good Ploughing which you are encouraging tends toward that end.

"A year ago, I addressed a number of ploughing matches and thought it my duty to explain the low returns we were receiving from farm products by the fact that there was a war on. I advised the best farming and increase in production on the ground that if confidence were restored through the establishment of peace Europe's markets would again be thrown open to us and Europe would go back to purchasing what she is best suited to produce and trade her surplus for ours. I also stated that if the other alternative followed and the war came Europe would require all we could produce during the conflict to feed the Allies and their armies while fighting made production in those lands only possible in a limited way.

MAY BE DEATH STRUGGLE

"I hoped we would be met by the first alternative. It so happens that we are confronted by the latter—war, through an organization set up under a Food Department. No matter what such war may be, there is only one way by which we can be assured of getting any products into Britain and that is by way of some Board under the control of that Department.

"Canada along with Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and India, is entitled to and will receive a preferred place in that market provided she produces the quantity and quality of product required. The decision to stand shoulder to shoulder with Britain and France guarantees that place. Canada has an advantage over all others in that the shortest safest route from any great food producing country to Britain is across the North Atlantic from Canada.

"We can hold that place by—keeping up and improving the quality of our product; increasing the volume of the essential products as necessity arises; pushing our supplies constantly across the ocean when the route is open and insure if such are light against the day when the ocean may be hard to navigate.

"While I think we should get a price which induces production I do not think price is your first consideration. Personally, I am prepared to trust Britain to the utmost of push the food forward, knowing that, through the way becomes harder if it does and she cannot draw upon the stores of the outside world, she will be prepared to give us the returns which may enjoy the British market as highly honoured, quoted and bought as any market in the world.

"The food products entering Britain today are or will be purchased through an organization set up under a Food Department. No matter what such war may be, there is only one way by which we can be assured of getting any products into Britain and that is by way of some Board under the control of that Department.

"You are going to take your place as farmers in the great struggle before you. To do so you will organize to produce well and much and to store and deliver.

"To make it possible for you to do this becomes the duty of the British and Canadian Governments to relieve you from great financial worries while the task is being performed. You will not require of governments great profits provided they do but permit them to others, but you will look to better advantage if you are free from the worries which lack of reasonable returns brings."

Many New Improvements In Ford, Mercury Cars

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 21—With a new fingertip gearshift, controlled ventilation, Sealed Beam Headlamps, improved ride and advanced styling in all models, Ford V-8, Deluxe Ford and Mercury 8 cars for 1940 are announced by Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited.

The new Ford cars are big and powerful in appearance. Body lines are pleasingly streamlined. Front ends are distinctively modern with low radiator grilles, long hoods and deeply rounded fenders. The trimly tailored interiors are attractive with plenty of room, big rear doors, silver rear arm shoulder room.

The 1940 Mercury 8 enters its second year with a unique Ford power record behind it. Three months after being introduced it was among the first five best sellers. Before the year ended there were more than 60,000 Mercurys.

A car of striking beauty, the Mercury 8 for 1940 has a gracefully flaring V-type radiator grille, hood and fenders, fully moulded hood and smoothly streamlined body and rear deck. Interiors are particularly attractive with the new blue and silver tone upholstery fabrics harmonizing with the interior color scheme.

The Mercury line is comprised of four Ford V-8 and five Deluxe body types. A car of business coupe as well as a Fordor sedan, two-door and coupe are available in both. There is also the popular convertible coupe with automatic top as standard equipment. Three station wagons are also in the Ford V-8 and six in the Deluxe line.

The Mercury is presented with a choice of five body types. These are a new convertible coupe, a sedan (two doors), sedan coupe and club convertible coupe. There is also a new passenger car while the club convertible coupe has a fully automatic power top. There is a choice of eight attractive body colors.

The Ford body has been improved spring suspension with a longer, more flexible front spring. A new rubber shock stabilizer provides an exceptionally comfortable steady ride. The ride-stabilizer also controls front wheel, motor steering. Front and rear spring of Deluxe cars are equipped with metal covers. Large double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers with self-locking construction is fitted to all cars.

Comfort features are emphasized throughout the design. Seats are built for restful riding. The front seats have a new resilient type. Cushions have a new "floating" edge. Driver seats are adjustable two ways—they rise as they are moved forward. Backrests are scientifically contoured. Rear seat cushions are deep and soft. An "easy shift" transmission, permitting speeds to be changed silently; new design of service disc wheels also contribute to quietness. Quick stopping hydraulic brakes are continued on all models.

Instrument panel, harmonize with the interior styling. Gauges are grouped in front of a two spoke steering wheel. A trifle for installation of radio speaker, glove compartment with lock, two ash trays and a cigar lighter are provided on the panel. Deluxe cars also have a clock on the glove compartment door.

The 1940 Mercury has a new straightline speedometer with gauges and headlight beam indicator grouped in front of the two-spoke steering wheel. A choice of upholstery in a rainbow—either blue-gray bark weave broadcloth or two-tone Bedford cord in blue, gray, saddle brown or red—is optional. Exceptional roominess is a feature of all the body types.

A new controlled all-weather ventilation system permits gentle, draftless circulation of air. The "lifting wing" front section of windows close may be swung outward. The rear half, together with its metal support bar in closed models, can be lowered, permitting better vision and unobstructed ventilation.

The new Mercury, effectively insulated from road bumps, provides extraordinary riding comfort. Steering cushions have soft edge, with deep soft inner section. Improved type, rapid shock absorbers, with new self, sealing construction, cushion spring action. The car rides quietly even at high speed. Noise is minimized by numerous rubber-cushioned mountings and the effective use of body insulation developed as the result of close engineering and sensitive sound-proofing research.

The 95 horsepower V-8 engine is unusually flexible, enabling the car to travel in traffic, flash away from traffic lights or maintain cruising speed on the highway.

A large luggage compartment, reached by a wide door in the rear deck, provides ample room for family luggage. The compartment is lighted automatically when the door is lifted. The spare tire is carried vertically against the front wall.

AMERICA'S PEACE AIMS—
(Christian Science Monitor)

The new British Ambassador issues a friendly challenge to Americans which should be accepted. The Marquess of Lothian, meeting the charge of propaganda head on, says frankly that he wishes to present the British view and invites Americans to come back with theirs. Declaring that if the "free peoples cannot speak frankly to one another about what is deepest in our hearts and what most affects the future of the world, then there is no possibility of arriving at a sane policy for peace," he states Britain's peace aims as far as they have been defined and asks: "What do you think should be the settlement we should aim at?"

This is a fair and effective approach to American opinion. It is fair because it does not ask the United States to play Britain's tune but to set the key herself for the kind of world Americans want to see come out of the war. Indeed, Americans who are keenest to resist British influence can welcome this invitation; for the surest way of not being dragged into support of any other nation's war aims is to establish clearly America's peace aims. The ambassador's approach is effective because even Americans who believe their country should not contribute arms to the war have very strong views on what kind of peace they would like.

He sees that many Americans—and many of his fellow Englishmen—are looking for something more than Prime Minister Chamberlain's general statement: "to redeem Europe from the perpetual recurring fear of German aggression and enable the peoples of Europe to enjoy their independence and their liberties." Naturally those engaged in breaking the fear of aggression are first of all concerned that successful. What follows will depend on how that is done.

Countries like the Netherlands and the Scandinavian democracies have not joined the fight "to preserve their independence and their liberties." Yet they are surely, vitally concerned. Even should they maintain their neutrality it is unlikely that the peace would be merely a Franco-British peace. The Poles and Czechs already have a stake in it. And should the Netherlands or Scandinavia or Rumania be invaded the peace will manifestly be one which Britain and France cannot now outline. Moreover specific plans might well increase the opposition, as for instance from Russia if Poland were promised complete restoration.

Any American picture of the kind of world that should be sought grows most naturally out of those ideals and interests which are inherently American. Freedom will be the inescapable keynote —freedom of speech, of religion, of individual initiative and economic enterprise. The United States would prefer a world in which such freedoms have as full play as possible.

To such a world America could and should make a greater contribution than it did to the post-Versailles world. Lord Lothian rightly pointed out that the economic sins of Versailles were far greater than its political mistakes. We might go farther and say that with more active operation of the Covenant's plans for political adjustments and without such economic blindness the political mistakes would never have caused war. And on both counts the United States has a share of blame proportionate to its power.

The American dream has had three main ingredients—Christian idealism, political union, and economic freedom. Americans are bound to think in those terms. In whatever settlement is made there will be need for reliance on what Lord Lothian called the "everlasting arms of justice, mercy and love"—essential of peacemaking that nothing fosters so well as Christianity.

Already in peace plans there is prominent mention of federation, either of democratic peoples or of all nations. Here American experience should be useful in finding practical forms.

One of America's most essential contributions to the peace should be co-operation in economic disarmament and economic federation. For what ever the hopes of political union, they must necessarily be harder to achieve than economic co-operation. America in her own experience has proved the tremendous value of freedom of trade among her states. Indeed, political federation for the United States has been rooted in economic union.

But America has not so far effectively applied this lesson in the international sphere. Her tariff barriers have been among the worst offenders in the economic warfare which has denied freedom of economic opportunity and access to raw materials to nations that have become warmakers. In any peace planning this fact must be borne in mind and Americans may well attempt to promote in a new international order the economic freedom which has been so vital a part of their own national strength.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

One of the most remarkable features of this last crop in Western Canada has been the—to some—amazing recovery of the semi-arid or so called desert area of Southern Sask.

It will be remembered that many thought that normal rainfall there would never occur again, and others said that even if good rains did come, that normal yields could not be produced because soil blowing and "soil mining", they believed, had permanently destroyed fertility.

Yet this last year normal rains did occur, and the normal rains brought with them once again normal yields.

Students of agricultural history are not surprised for they have built in the wise observation of Ecclesiastes, having noted that natural conditions never ever and ever again in this world, and as they believe that any piece of land which once produced a good crop can certainly do so again.

History and Ecclesiastes suggest too, however, that some day drought, and no poor farming will be able to save against these there is but one real safeguard, which is the "Law of Averages" by saving up something during the periods of good rainfall and of good crops.

Registration of Canadian Women

Canadian women everywhere! The National Organization for Registration for Canadian Women has been formed for the purpose of compiling, by voluntary registration, a complete and accurate record of all female citizens of Canada, so that they can be used for national service in any crisis capacity, in case of possible emergency. Even if you have registered previously some organization through its branch are donated without charge to anyone. The organization has never made any profit from any of its dealings. Neither is it true that the Red Cross and its auxiliaries wish to sell cigarettes and tobacco during the last war."—Lt.-Col. D. H. Tennant, Provincial Director, Alberta Division, Canadian Red Cross Society.

Canadian Red Cross Society Alberta Division

By the time the Canadian Red Cross war fund campaign gets under way on November 13th, citizens in all sections of the Dominion will have become Red Cross conscious through the work of the society's national campaign committee. Here are some of the accomplishments already announced by the committee's chairman: Dominion-wide newspaper display advertising; one thousand 24 sheet posters to be displayed on billboards from Pacific to Atlantic borders; seven score over Canadian Press releases to all papers; Canadian magazines agree to co-operate with feature articles; window posters arranged for in every province; radio programmes over the C.B.C. coast to coast network and over independent stations; screen publicity in all Canadian movie houses; automobile stickers to be used during the campaign, with provision of special window stickers for homes which subscribe to the Red Cross fund.

All branches of Alberta Division, Red Cross, are being asked to co-operate with provincial headquarters by November 1st, or as quickly following that date as possible, how many of such article they have finished and how many in process of making. This is necessary in order that clean check may be kept on supplies on demand.

Members of Alberta Junior Red Cross are helping with supply work. Their special field is the making of string vest shields, personal property bags, scarves and socks (for good weather).

A Word From The Commissioner—

"It is untrue that the Red Cross sold socks and sweaters to the soldiers during the last war. The Red Cross has never sold anything. All supplies sent through its branch are donated without charge to anyone. The organization has never made any profit from any of its dealings. Neither is it true that the Red Cross and its auxiliaries wish to sell cigarettes and tobacco during the last war."—Lt.-Col. D. H. Tennant, Provincial Director, Alberta Division, Canadian Red Cross Society.

Wood Farms Beavers' Diet On Ocean Trip

Vancouver, Oct. 29.— Forty hundred of poplar wood arrived here by Canadian National Express recently, strictly as an item of diet.

They were food for two steel beaver from Jasper National Park waiting in and next week for Wellington, B. C., where they will be added to the municipal zoo. Arriving with the beaver were also three year-old bear as playful a consignment as ever reached the coast. All are the gift of Jasper Park, Canada's largest outdoor game sanctuary. So an one will be fooled by their only-puzzling states agree to co-operate with feature curred in the expert papers "Do not put your fingers through the wire. A bear is faster than a cat."

The beaver, who dine at night, get four to six sticks of poplar, a quarter to a half pound of carrots daily. The sticks have to be removed when peeled.

Doing their best for current apple propaganda, the bear consume a pound of the fruit each day together with two loaves of bread and a pound of carrots. All food supplies are travelling with the animals on the same consigned to E. F. Norman, Town Clerk, Wellington.

Marketing Turkeys

Turkeys thrive best in the open, even during the fattening period, and the fattening period should start a month before it is intended to sell them. Fattening should be commenced gradually with meshes in the morning and at noon, and wheat grain in the evening. When turkeys are shut up in pens they very often go off their food and frequently die.

A recommended mash for turkeys is made up of equal parts of ground oats, barley meal, cornmeal, and wheat bran. Buck-wheat may take the place of barley. Mix thoroughly and moisten the mash with water or skim milk about two hours before feeding. Enough liquid should be used to make the food crumbly and not sticky or sloppy. The mash should be given thoroughly-cleaned V shaped troughs and no more food should be served than the turkeys can clean up. The same mash may be used for the morning and noon feeds. Whole corn is the best grain for fattening but it should not be fed heavily if the weather is warm. Along with the regular feed, the turkeys should have plenty of fresh water and grit.

A very successful track meet consisting pupils from schools in the Tofield Division was held Saturday, October 11th. The meet was the second of a slate meets previously held in the various districts and at the all-day finals, considerable budding athletic talent.

The cup awarded the individual winning the most points was won by Tofield. This includes Tofield and schools in the immediate vicinity.

In all there were 84 separate events, in all of which several cooper-liner took part.

Considerable organizing ability had to be brought into play to ensure a smooth running meet, and the teaching staffs of the various schools are to be congratulated upon the success of the event.

CANADIANA

CANADIAN VIEWPOINT

Ottawa.—Major General Mc-Naughton, in command of Canada's first overseas division, declared that the war was a job that had to be done once and for all. "That's why we are going to enjoy civilization and live as we like, we must put Hitler and those who think like him out of power," said the general. "But let's get done with it, once and for all, and get back to things some of us want to do."

CHURCH PARADE

Toronto:—Attorney-General Conant has ordered an investigation of the manifesto in which 75 United Church clergymen disapproved of "this or any other war" as "incompatible with the Christian spirit and aims."

Meanwhile Dr. Sinclair, general secretary of the United Church of Canada, has issued a statement from the sub-executive of the church apologizing for the manifesto and reaffirming their loyalty to the Empire.

LOGICAL AND EVENTUAL

Calgary—Turner Valley production now justified the construction of a pipeline to Regina, according to L. N. Lefleur, vice president of Imperial Oil, before the McGillivray royal commission recently. Such a pipe would serve refineries at Moose Jaw and at Regina and would reduce rents on that Turner Valley might supply the Winnipeg market.

At another session, Dr. C. Bowen, University of Michigan professor, went further. He declared the Turner Valley's crude potential could be built up to 100,000 barrels per day in 20 months. This, said Dr. Bowen, would justify construction of a pipeline to Port William.

RESTORED

Ottawa.—Hon. Charles Dunning, former dominion finance minister, returned from a health seeking trip and reported he was in better health than he had been for a number of years. Mr. Dunning went to England last July. He is still a member of parliament for Quebec. Prince Edward Island, but declared he "had not thought about returning to political life."

FORWARD PASS

Ottawa:—Hon. W. D. Herridge has accepted the invitation to stand as new Democratic candidate in his former constituency. The seat became vacant with the resignation of H. H. Ellis, Social Credit sitting member.

In his letter of resignation Mr. Ellicott stressed the need for "men of experience in international affairs" and active war service in fill re-sponsible positions." Mr. Ellott's resignation brings the total vacancies in the Commons to seven.

BIG MEAL MARKED

Winnipeg.—Embargo on an wheat shipments has been extended to course for grains according to announcement by railway officials. This means there will be no grain shipments from western Canada farms to elevators at Fort William "for an unspecified period." Officials pointed out that while there was no shortage of railway cars, the lack of storage space made the embargo necessary.

NO SECESSION

Saskatoon.—Discussion of relative virtues which might be expected to follow from eastern Canada was suspended by the annual convention of the United farmers' of Canada, Saskatchewan section.

At the 1938 convention the central executive was instructed to carry out an investigation of the issue but "in view of the present war situation" discussion was withheld.

MACKENZIE

Nick Hawrylocks, 15 years old, had a runaway with his team. He had taken his sister to the school Tuesday night for the Hallowe'en dodge. While he was unhitching, his horses became frightened and bolted. He was run over with the buggy, his head being badly bruised and it was feared one leg broken at first aside. Dr. Law was called and he took him right up to Edmonton for further examination. We hope that he gets along all right.

Mrs. Weatherall Sr. is home again, but we regret to say has been on the sick list again. We hope she will soon be feeling better.

Margaret Martins has been assisting Mrs. Steen for the past two weeks while Mrs. Steen was south of town. She is now helping Mrs. Jacobson for a few days.

Some of the neighbors went over to Mrs. Glen Bailey's on Saturday night to help to celebrate Mrs. Bailey's birthday. A very nice time was spent.

HASTINGS LAKE

The farmers around here who were caught with no threshing done when the snow fell were quick to take advantage of its less days that followed to rush it through.

Another Friday night was jollied away when a good crowd turned out to the pie social and dance put on in the school house by the local Social Credit Group. When supper time rolled around Vince Bebo was given an opportunity to display his talents by being appointed auctioneer and a great deal of good natured bitchering sallied back and forth as he held the pies up to a good price.

His next dance to be held around here will be at the Spiletal school-house on Friday, November 17th, and is being put on to raise funds for Christmas tree funds. This will be the first dance held at the Spiletal school for some time and the teachers are hoping everything possible to make it a success. As it is a large school house with a sandy floor and good music. They are informed there is no doubt but that there will be a large crowd there, so now is the time you will be helping the kiddies with their Christmas funds.

Mrs. A. Bowland and Miss Ruby Bowland visited Saturday afternoon visiting at the Hoovers.

George Campton and Gordon Tough returned home last week after spending the summer working in a lumber camp.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Leverson and their two children, Henry and Elsie, motored out from Edmonton on Saturday and spent the day at the Anderssons. Mr. Petersen and Vince Bebo were also visitors.

Dorothy Peterson and Doris Anderson came as near to the wrong end of a bridle as they will ever want to as while out walking last Monday. They heard a shot and by and turned just in time to see a bullet hit a tree just about two feet behind them. They let out a holler and jumped just as a second bullet followed the first one. Quicker'n a wink down the girls went and a bit hurt, but what an opportunity it sounded for a "bright here home" I can't understand how anyone who knows Dorothy and Doris could ever shoot at them, but pair for a couple of little "deers."

The Week in Edmonton

Edmonton, November, 6.—Greetings of a charter to Edmonton Progressive Credit Union brings the provincial total of these co-operative savings and loan associations to 23, according to a report issued by the Department of Trade and Industry. Twelve other groups are almost ready for charters, seven have remained the necessary studies, and a great number of others have opened preliminary discussions with a view to forming groups later.

Growth of the movement since its inception in Alberta has been highly encouraging. Capital assets of $53,000 are now held by Alberta Credit unions. Loans totaling $70,000 —equal to a double turnover of the money have been made to date. All repaid is built up by the systematic savings of members, who either purchase shares or make deposits with their small savings. Loans are granted for provident or merchandising purposes.

Scope of the movement is evidenced by the identities of the various groups chartered or studying for charters. Federal, provincial and civic employees, packing plant workers, community leagues, U.F.A. locals, church parishes, and co-operative stores are represented. One of the "most" clauses in application for a credit union charter is that the prospective union must be composed of individuals who have a common bond interest. This is annexed the co-operative spirit that is necessary for the smooth working of the group.

Total wheat yield of 148,800,000 bushels for Alberta is the estimate contained in the Department of Agriculture autumn survey recently released. This compares favorably with 142,000,000 bushels in 1938. Barley estimates are given as 25,000,000 bushels and oats at 77,000,000. Owing to poor climatic conditions and disease, the potato crop was reduced 50 per cent from 1938 figures.

Butter stocks at October 1 showed a marked increase over last year's figures, both for Alberta and the dominion. Alberta has 5,782,212 lbs. and the Dominion, compared with 5,500,276 lbs. and 56,818,000 lbs. in 1938. January to September production of butter in Alberta was 24,777,-252 lbs.—nearly one million lbs. less than the same period of 1938. Cheese production for this year's period was 1,936,419 lbs., a gain over last year's figures.

Fish and game production was reported to have shown gains during the year. Value of pelts taken is placed at $1,241,139.70 an increase over previous year's figures. Fur farms increased from 843 to 1,005, and the largest fish restocking program ever conducted in the province was carried out in the interests of the fishers and angling interests.

Belief that approximately 150,000 men will be required to provide labor looking for the gigantic Empire Air Training scheme in Canada was expressed by Embogenist officials in Edmonton this week Lord Riverdale, British head of the Air Mission in Canada stressed that between 20,000 and 25,000 pilots, gunners and wireless operators would be in training at one time, and from five to six men were required to keep each flying man in the air.

The employment program for skilled and semi-skilled workers in the Empire Air Scheme is expected to be underway by mid-November. Draft of application forms is in the printer's hands, and registrations will commence immediately the forms arrive. Stressing that the scheme will provide Canadian workers with a great new chance to apply their talents, Capt. Mark Robertson said the public would be notified immediately the time for registration arrives.

Elimination of preliminary and abolition of committee prizes were major topics for discussion at the recent conference called by Hon. Norman McLarty, minister of labor, in Ottawa. This was made known by Hon. E. C. Manning, who represented Alberta at the conference. The War-Time Prices Board will use existing provincial machinery in an effort to protect the ultimate consumer against exploitation, Mr. Manning declared. Mr. McLarty praised all powerses for their co-operation with the dominion in regard to the carrying out of price regulations.

More than 2,000 Edmonton women have signed Voluntary Registration of Canadian Women questionnaires, it was learned during the week. While these are not final figures, officials said they would approximate the Saturday total. Last minute rush to register was extremely heavy in downtown centres late Saturday.

With Britons reduced to a basic allowance of four ounces per week, Alberta honey growers are turning business-like glances in the direction of their beg pens. Already producing the highest percentage of colonies of all provinces, they will be enabled to improve the quality still further by taking advantage of the revised export policy now in operation. Farmers may now obtain an approved honey net at cost in Edmonton or Calgary, and the Province will absorb the freight charges within the province. "If 20 or more gifts are bought by one group, a bacon type hone may be obtained free," said Hon. D. R. Mullen, announcing the revised scheme.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars will be spent by provincial states next year to attract tourists, said Dr. E. C. Campbell, publicity director, when he returned from Spokane convention of the Pacific Northwest Tourist Association. Mr. Campbell, who was Alberta's delegate, said that many of the things we sell as British Columbia were represented at the convention.

Due to war conditions having cut off all American tourist travel to European and Near Eastern vacation spots, a tremendous influx of summer visitors is expected in Canada next year, according to Lister Sinclair, travel director, British Columbia is preparing for this new revenue by spending $60,000 for tourist publicity in order to attract business to the province.

Mr. Campbell reported delegates to saying that Alberta would be the extreme point of travel for many tourists from the east. Establishment of the Banff-Jasper highway and the Trans-Canada highway were items of discussion too, he said.

Call for conservation of all natural wealth of the province was made by Lands and Mines Minister N. E. Tanner this week, Pointing out that of 521 forest fires breaking out last year, 500 were caused by man's action, he said government was giving a lead to all citizens by conserving natural resources so as to secure the greatest good for the greatest number for over the longest period of time. He appealed to settlers, hunters, trappers, fishermen and pioneers' society to co-operate fully in observing all regulations designed to protect the natural wealth of the province.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

Mr. Broomhall, in the latest issue of his "Corn Trade News" writes as follows on the wheat situation:—

"It is a happy augury for the success of the Allied cause that in a huge surplus of some 400 to 500 million bushels exists on the other side of the Atlantic, within a fortnight's steamer journey of these shores. The British Government and the British people are thankful now that Canada did not reduce her acreage in any wholesale manner, such as would have been necessary if a system of international control had been enforced."

This Column on October 19th, expressed the same sentiments, but it is also to know from Great Britain herself that our Canadian surplus is so valuable to the Allies.

It does seem, therefore, so though it would be only fair if Great Britain and her Allies would pay a bare "cost of production" price for the Canadian wheat they use during the war, just as they are paying a fair price for meat, if not all other war commodities, and $1.15 I believe would be about such a price. Certainly the present price of 70 cents a bushel is far below the present cost of wheat production.

A Hearty Main Dish

Here is homely dish which will add prestige to your cooking. That may not sound important but it's not because we mean "homely" in the very best sense of the word. What we do think is plain and wholesome, economical, very tasty and just the thing to set before a hungry family on a cold night. Baked Fish and Vegetable Dinner

1 lb. fillets, steaks or pan-dressed fish
½ lb. each turnips, potatoes, onions or carrots
1 lb. cabbage
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ cup diced salt pork (fat back)
2 cups water

In a heavy kettle, fry the pork in a golden brown, add 1 cup water and all the vegetables except the cabbage, which is cooked separately. Allow the vegetables to cook for 20 to 25 minutes, add the salt, pepper and second cup of water. Lay the fish (which is first dawn) across the vegetables, cover with cooked cabbage, and cook the whole about 5 minutes more. Place the fish in the centre of a hot platter, surround by cooked vegetables. The liquid remaining in the kettle may be served in a side bowl.

Famous Skier Comes To West

Edmonton, Nov. 6.—One of the most famous of the world's skiing coaches, Peter Vajda of Zurich, Switzerland, has been signed as 1939-40 instructor for the Edmonton Ski Club. The noted athlete, a product of Hannes Schneider's ski school in the Alps, will take up residence here shortly.

Colorful as he is expert, Vajda first came to Canada last year and immediately created a sensation. The New Zealand coach he produced two Dominion champions, Doreen Devlan, who won the men's championship and pretty Gertrude Wepnah who copped the ladies' crown.

During the past summer, Vajda and Miss Wepnah, aided in the Columbia Icefield region of Jasper National Park and assisted in a survey of the new Whistlers run near Jasper town. The new downhill course in the only one in Canada which meets F. I. I. championship requirements and opens the way to miles of skiland skiing in the vast snow regions above timberline at Jasper.

WHAT THE BOYS THINK

The work being done by Alberta Junior Wheat Clubs is fairly well known throughout the province. This year 1,400 young folk seeded 8,500 acres to registered, certified, and approved seed lots. Under the sponsorship of federal and provincial departments of agriculture and the Alberta Wheat Pool the boys are given every encouragement and training in the production of seed, and a consistent reservoir of good seed is made available to the farmers of the province.

What do the boys themselves think of this movement? The following are a number of replies to the above question from Junior Wheat Club members, which give a fair cross-section of youthful opinion.

James Dier, Rumsey, Alberta—"This is a splendid work and I hope it is continued. It is a wonderful education and I have learned a considerable amount about registered grain."

Crystal Clausen, Rumsey, Alberta —"I enjoyed the work and have learned quite a lot about wheat, barley and oats. I think it is a wonderful thing for boys and girls."

George Upton, Rumsey, Alberta—"The work has been a great help to all young men, because it teaches them how to farm well and to select different types of grain."

Louie Tolman, Rumsey, Alberta—this district has proven a great aid to the farmers in regard to increasing the quality and yield of the various seed before."

Florence Bee, Rumsey Alberta—"I have enjoyed the work very much and think it is very beneficial for everyone to take it. In this way we are able to seed pure seed on our land."

Leonard Anderson, Rumsey, Alberta—"This club is a great benefit to the farmers, because it is helpful to the country a supply of good registered seed, and it gives you new ideas on farming methods."

Gordon Primrose, Scollard, Alberta —"I have enjoyed the club work very much and have enjoyed the speeches of the speakers very much."

Ed Sengaus, Rumsey, Alberta—"A. increase of field and quality of the wheat harvest has been quite noticeable."

Lloyd Tolman, Rumsey, Alberta—"I believe the club is doing excellent work in raising the standard of the community's grain delivered to the elevators."

Gordon Johnston, Rumsey, Alberta—"I think it is a good idea to continue with the club."

Ben Sedlar, Rowley, Alberta—I enjoy club work and I have learned lots of things about its wheat farmer."

Arthur Tedor, Rumsey, Alberta—"I believe that this club work is very helpful toward the making of good farmers for the future. It is very educational."

Calvin McGhee, Ghost Pine Creek, Alberta—"I think it is a good way to get good seed and good farmers, and it should be kept up. I think most boys will like this work because I do."

Gordon Stranger, Munson, Alberta —"Junior Wheat Club is great work and I like it."

Peter F. Bergen, Ghost Pine Creek, Alberta—"In being members we have found that they have been fresh seed, so have had better yields than just average wheat sown. It has been very interesting at different shows where I have exhibited in the past five years."

Kenneth Ferguson, Ghost Pine Creek, Alberta—"I think the club work is all right."

Stewart Mair, Drumheller, Alberta —"I think it is fine."

Elmer F. Dunlaw, Ghost Pine Creek, Alberta—"I want to continue in my club work, it is interesting and I have learned a lot in my two years of experience."

Kenneth T. Lowen, Drumheller, Alberta—"I think it is fine work to do. It helps a lot to show you how to raise grain. I like it fine."

Harry Stranger, Munson, Alberta—"Junior Wheat Club work is a great help and I think it is improving the district's wheat greatly.

Bill Cole, Drumheller, Alberta—"I think the club is a great help to farming in this district, is that the farmers are using good seed, usually third or fourth generation, and do not have to buy the seed."

Donald Sharpe, Munson, Alberta—"This club work creates team work and it develops better farmers out of the club members. It is also educational."

Don Sharpe, Munson, Alberta—"I think that this club work is a great help and it is educational."

Fred Adsett, Munson, Alberta—"I think the Junior Wheat Club is definitely a great benefit. I have benefitted by it and I know this wheat is all through our district.

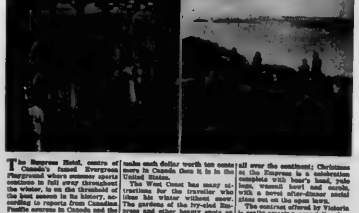
Victoria, Canada's Evergreen Playground Calls to Country's Sports Loving People



The Empress Hotel, centre of Canada's famed Evergreen Playground where summer sports continue in full sway throughout the winter. In on the threshold of the best season in its history, according to reports from Canadian Pacific caverns in Canada and the United States.

There are several reasons for the promise of greatly increased travel to beautiful Vancouver Island but the most important one at the moment seems to be that international exchange hospitality will be brought about by the war, make each dollar worth ten cents more in Canada than it is in the United States.

The West Coast has many attractions for the traveler who likes his winter without snow. The gardens of the Ivy-clad Empress and other beauty spots on the Island retain their beauty and freshness all year round; riding, golf, tennis, swimming, fishing and lawn bowling continues throughout the winter; the Mid-Winter Golf Tournament, from March 2 to 9, is an annual event which attracts enthusiasts from all over the continent; Christmas at the Empress is a celebration complete with boar's head, yule logs, wassail bowl and carols, with a novel after-dinner social affair on on the open hearth.

The contract offered by Victoria is truly amazing, especially after a long ride across the country. From the windows of the trans-train the traveller will see typical Canadian winter scenery, — and then Victoria with its flowers, its magnificent weather, and its year-round golf and other summer sports.

More Canadian Apples

Restrictions on the export of apples from the Dominion of Canada has resulted in a surplus of this commodity on Canadian markets, and the Canadian Department of Agriculture is endeavoring to stimulate the consumption of apples in Canada.

Normally, Canadians consume 20 pounds of apples per capita, which is surprisingly low. If this amount could be raised to 40 pounds, the surplus of the crop could be disposed of and the action would benefit in health. Our export markets, normally demanding the highest quality of our products, and since those are not being shipped this year, the type of apple which the Canadian consumer will be able to buy will be higher than is usually the case.

THE RED CROSS

IN COMMON with a very large number of other communities throughout Canada at the present time, Tofield and district has become or is becoming actively engaged in Red Cross work. Therefore it should be interesting to read of its origin, its general activities, and the position it occupies in the minds and hearts of the Canadian people.

The Red Cross Society was the outcome of the horrors of the Crimean and Austro-Italian wars. These were graphically described by M. Jean Henri Dunant in 1862, and in his book he suggested that nurse, be trained and supplies collected in every country. Acting on this suggestion an international congress was held at Geneva in 1863, delegates representing different nations agreeing upon a program. The action taken at the convention was later ratified by over forty nations. The work of Red Cross societies in the field is purely neutral and all connected with them are considered as noncombatants. The action at Geneva in 1863 in the midst of time brought into being the Canadian Red Cross, of which the Alberta Society is a branch, and which in turn is composed of many local and district units.

When a citizen joins the combatant forces of His Majesty's Government, the government assumes responsibility for his well being. Food, clothing and shelter are as far as war conditions permit, provided him. But while a man on active service may get those things which are vitally necessary to him, he does not get many things and services which a voluntary organization is best able to provide. Government allowances are of necessity more or less rigid, and are based on requirements under normal conditions. But in wartime, conditions under which men live may vary so much that no preconceived plan could hope to keep pace with all man's requirements. Hence a part of Red Cross work is to provide those added comforts at a time when they are most needed. These services do not, as do the things supplied him by his government, constitute his "right", but rather are extra comforts given in time of need. These extra comforts may take any form but are generally associated with socks, mitts, sweaters and kindred supplies. In addition to the above which may be classed as field services, the Red Cross in co-operation with the Canadian Army Medical Corps, assist in the building and equipping of hospitals to take care of those wounded in combat. The Canadian Army Medical Corps a purely official body, and the Red Cross, a purely voluntary organization, working together, give what service and comfort they can to wounded men.

There is another angle to Red Cross work which is often less than not overlooked. It is the impression made on the minds of the civilian population by having an opportunity to serve. It is true that requests if not demands are made by Military authorities upon the Red Cross, a voluntary organization. For supplies; despite the fact that an enlisted man is a care of his government from the moment he is accepted for service. The truth is that there are thousands of people among the civilian population who desire an opportunity for service, and the Red Cross organization provides it. Furthermore through its wide spread activities on the home front, it creates and quickens interest in the task that the nation has set its hands to. An army in the field or a navy upon the waters are greatly heartened by the interest and support of those at home.

The Red Cross during war time collects and disburses very large sums of money and very large amounts of supplies. It is very necessary that at headquarters and divisional headquarters that there be full time paid executives and assistants. Even so, it is hoped that those employed by the Red Cross are necessary, capable and earn their pay. In literally hundreds of homes ladies will snatch time from other household duties to do their bit towards increasing the comforts to the men on active service. Across the Dominion hundreds of thousands of dollars will be collected dollar by dollar from men who in many instances are hard pressed for ready cash. The Red Cross has a duty to itself to see that this wave of practical generosity is expended in the right direction, and only the minimum amount used to pay for help needed in the distribution of articles voluntarily supplied and money voluntarily contributed.

CLOSE CALL

The pilot of a "leaflet" plane reported back at headquarters two hours before he was due. His astonished C. O. asked for an explanation.

"Well, Sir," the young officer replied, "I flew over enemy territory as instructed and tipped out the parcels over the side."

"Do you mean you threw them out still roped up in bundles?" said the C. O. in an anxious voice.

"Yes, Sir."

"Why, man, you might have hit somebody!"—London Telegraph.

TIME

A backwoods farmer was met in a field one day by a modern agriculturist. When asked what he was doing, the farmer said he was driving his pigs down to the woods where they could eat acorns and fatten up for market.

"Why, that's not the thing to do," informed the agriculturist. "The modern way is to build a pen in a yard and carry the acorns to them. It'll save lots of time."

The older man looked at the other for a moment and then in utter disgust said: "Why, what's time to a pig?"

New National Cars Studied By Americans

Winnipeg, Nov. 6.—Keen interest by research and engineering departments of United States railways was shown recently when new refrigerator cars of the Canadian National system were given test runs from Winnipeg to Montreal. Constructed in the Trans-con shop, the cars are a radical departure from the old type and the tests were watched by noted American experts who accompanied the trip East.

The new cars are equipped with overhead bins, underslung heater using charcoal as fuel, and liquidometers, the method of refrigeration resulting in both cooler cars and consistently even temperatures. The important innovations also include economical operation and assurance of uniform temperature without the necessity for re-icing while en-route. On a recent checkup from Winnipeg to Montreal, a distance of 2160 miles, it was found there was less than one degree difference in the temperature of the most range over the entire journey.

Storing Vegetables For Winter Use

The essential points in the successful storage of vegetables are favourable temperature, good ventilation and sound well matured crop. The proper storage temperature varies somewhat for the different vegetables but generally speaking it should be low enough to prevent growth of the vegetables and also fungi and bacteria which may cause decay. Root crops and cabbage keep best between 34 degrees and 40 degrees and will withstand a slight amount of dampness. Pumpkin, squash and onions should be stored in a dry place and will keep well at temperatures up to 45 degrees.

Free circulation of air is essential to carry off the accumulated moisture given off by the stored vegetables but cellars should be left open as long as possible during early winter (this would, well matured vegetables should be expected to keep well in storage.

The use of fine sand will aid materially in the successful storage of root crops as beets, carrots and parsnips. If the storage cellar is not to be damp, dry sand should be used, but if the storage room is dry, very slightly dampened sand should be used.

If only a few cabbages are to be stored they can be suspended by the roots. If the quantity is large the cabbages can be piled, preferably on slatted shelves. Some of the outer leaves should be left on to prevent the heads from touching. Turnips (rutabagas) can be piled in bulk like potatoes, or may be stored in soil. Before being stored they should be well dried and all loose soil removed. Pumpkin, squash and vegetable marrow should have the stems left on and require a dry location.

Comments On The October Wheat Situation

The price of No 1 Northern Manitoba wheat, in store Fort William, declined 1½ cents a bushel during the month of October. Canadian wheat was quoted at Liverpool on 1 October 31st at 81¼ cents a bushel at point of shipment—Atlantic ports—in Canada, whereas Argentine wheat was offered similarly at 84¼ cents f.a.b. Argentine and Australian wheat at 88¾ cents f.a.b. Australian ports.

Taking into account the difference of freight rates and insurance between Argentina, Australia and Canadian ports respectively, and destination Liverpool, and difference in qualities of these wheats, it will be observed that Australian and Argentine wheat can be purchased at Liverpool at a cheaper price than Canadian wheat, whilst accounts for the drop in price of 1¾ cents, which occurred on the Winnipeg market during the month of October. Indeed it is surprising that the drop in price of Canadian wheat has not been more than 1¾ cents, as large as wheat purchases in the U.K. are to be made on a basis of world with competitive offers There seems to be a growing appreciation in Great Britain, as noticed by Mr. H. Wise, recently, of the importance to the future of a large supply of Canadian wheat closer to hand. That any other source of supply of many in Canada are hopeful of, because of this appreciation of a return of British Empire trade. To-day the British Government pays for the Canadian wheat bought, during a year that will at the end of the year will be sent out of production Britain. As the submarine and raider menace is brought better under control and trial these last normal shipments in the first further note 20 million October will unquestionably be made good by the end of 40 million up with better than normal ship ments in future months, for 12 months of Canadian shipments were by armies and the peoples of the world, for first half does not decrease in comparison with 24 million during the wartime, but instead rather increase. Total marine casualties during the first three shipments show a war risks on cargoes from Argentina large increase from October last to Australian and American ports year for comparing the increase to U.K. ports vary from 3 to 4 per cent of the value which is an indication that the risk from submarines and raiders while existing, is far from excessive, revealing a substantial measure of confidence that have faith in the protection provided by the united navies from Canada the British and French Navies

Canadian Red Cross

On Monday, November 13 the Canadian National Red Cross Society opens its $1,250,000 war fund campaign. Alberta's allotment in the Canpaign is $150,000. In the north part of the province Mr. W. J. Dick, of Edmonton, is campaign manager, with Capt. K. C. McLeod, Manville, as assistant. In the south Mayor A. Davidson, Calgary, is manager, his assistant being Mr. W. A. Austin, of Berkeley.

While the actual fund campaign does not begin until the 13th, the Society has not only organized for war service on an auxiliary of the C.A.M.C., but has finally established through its volunteer workers in practically every community in Canada for. This advance activity has been financed through cash advances, guaranteed by the chartered banks of Canada to the extent of $500,000. Besides the $1,250,000 for which it is authorized depend upon the Red Cross Society to provide hospitals in the fighting field, surgical and medical supplies and comforts for the fighting forces, money from the fund campaign are confident Alberta people will respond readily and willingly to the campaign slogan, "Give till it hurts."

From the French Red Cross and the Legation of the French Republic at Ottawa, the Canadian Red Cross Society has received communications emphasizing their needs. These include medical supplies, dressings, clothing, bed coverings, masks, food, absorbent cotton, bandages, surgical instruments, splints and sterilizing equipment.

The American Red Cross has supplied the French Society with 3,000 blankets, 20,000 suits of underwear and 30,000 other garments. In addition the American Society has provided $30,000 worth of medicines for Polish sick and wounded as well as underwear and blankets for Polish refugees in Hungary and Rumania.

The Canadian Red Cross has accepted the generous offer of Viscount Astor for the use of ground on his "Cliveden" estate upon which the Society will erect and equip a 300 bed hospital. It will be used to house wounded Canadian soldiers during the present war. By agreement with the Canadian Cross the Canadian Department of National Defence will approve and operate the hospital.

Canadian railway and other transportation companies have agreed to give free transport to all war supplies for the Red Cross samples during the war period.

Supplies of material for Red Cross workers have already been bought to the value of $45,000. Orders for future delivery to the value of $75,000 have also been placed.

Members of Canadian Clubs in United States cities will be able to contribute to Canadian Red Cross war funds. An application to the United States Secretary of State will bring a permit to collect and forward money for the assistance of sick and wounded among Canadian forces. This concession was secured through the office of the American Red Cross Society.

Should hospitals for the use of the Medical Corps in the war zone be needed the Canadian Red Cross will build them if funds are available. This is a important decision of the society's National War Committee.

Attention is drawn to the fact that the $1,250,000 fund for which the Canadian Red Cross is now campaigning, is intended to cover both peace and wartime activities of the Society. All official canvassers in the campaign will carry official permits or identification permits for identification purposes.

The Sheep Industry Of Alberta

The sheep industry of Alberta is one of greater magnitude than is generally recognized. At the present time the population of sheep and lambs is 834,300 head, having increased from 513,200 in 1928 and 332,000 in 1918. Of the total number of sheep and lambs in the province, 85 per cent are found in the extreme south and south east districts, the remainder being quite evenly distributed throughout the rest of Alberta, except in the Peace River district where only about 5,000 are found.

In 1938 Alberta marketed 199,000 head of sheep and lambs, with 72 per cent, of them grading "good handyweights", which is an excellent record. The annual consumption of mutton and lamb for Canada is 6.16 pounds per capita, whereas the consumption of beef is almost 60 pounds, and for pork it is 42.35 pounds.

Alberta produced 3,829,000 pounds of wool in 1938, Alberta standing first among the provinces. The highest average clip per sheep was also obtained in this province, being eight pounds per head. In 1930 the province estimated that approximately 1,000,000 pounds of wool is produced, which is exported. In 8 4 pounds per sheep, both figures again being higher than those of any other province. In both 1937 and 1938 Alberta lead in the total number of sheep shorn.

Hunting White Whale Is Test For Marksmen

Churchill, Nov. 6.—Hunting white whales in Hudson Bay challenges the skill of any sportsman and promises to become a favorite sport among tourists who load northward in the annual Churchill excursion. This year, in August, many fine catches were recorded. Two sportsmen from Des Moines, Iowa, landed a huge specimen after a long fight in the open Bay while a medical doctor from The Pas, Manitoba, brought in two after a morning's hunt.

The initial expeditions, the hunter generally takes two guides, one to operate the canoe and the other to harpoon the fast swimming mammals. Later, after a demonstration kill or two, the hunter himself does both the harpooning and shooting of the whale. Deadly harpoon bits sink deep into the blubber and wild rides ensue as the hunter attempts to shoot the whale between the eyes. Industry, particularly in view of the present world situation, is not to be minimized and as time goes on, the relative value of the sheep industry is likely to increase.

The Careful Driver

"If our automobile drivers, and our pedestrians, too, could visit the hospitals where in to-day's traffic victims, is they could realize that all of these needless accidents occur and these lives are destroyed because of inconsistency or neglect or because of inadequate protection of some kind—then I am confident that the constructive program of traffic accident prevention would be achieved much faster."

Monument To Honor Tofield And District War Dead Unveiled

Major General Griesbach, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., V.D., K.C. acompanied by Lieut.-Col. T. C. Sims, V.D., Capt. H. J. Tewerton and Capt. D. Sims, visited Tofield on Sunday and officially unveiled the recently erected monument in honor of Tofield and district war dead.

Included in the ceremony were Tofield and district members of the 1914-18 Canadian Expeditionary Force under command of Capt. Geo. Graves, M.M.; Tofield and district members of the present Canadian Active Service Force under command of A. M. Bailey; the Tofield Bobcat Cadets under command of Cadet Lieutenant M. Tofield; members of the Tofield I.O.D.E. under direction of Mrs. Brass, Regent. Mrs. H. Chapman was standard bearer for the I.O.D.E. All units attended in parade formation, the entire ceremony being both collectival and solemn. A firing party under the direction of Mr. L. A. Broughton led the singing. The ceremony took place in the presence of a large and very much divided people.

The ceremony commenced with the singing of a hymn by the choir, which was followed by prayer by Rev. D. E. Allen, which in turn was followed by another hymn by the choir.

Major General Griesbach, Major General Griesbach attended a wolf-roast and dance in the Victoria Hall in their attendance at the unveiling ceremony and said that the presence of so fine people there in inclement weather was a new sense of responsibility to the soldiers' cause. He felt Canada was in a very intimate way provided comfort and relief to the soldiers.

Remembrance Day was observed so that we would not forget the sacrifices of all who died in the great war and the Memorial would remind us of those from this district who made the supreme sacrifice. Mayor Dwight then asked Major General Griesbach to perform the unveiling and to address the gathering.

Major General Griesbach said in part: He was very pleased to be able to come to Tofield and take part in this ceremony. He knew this also when there was not a bonus upon it and was personally acquainted with the late Dr. Tofield. He was also very glad to greet the old soldiers, many of whom he had met during the years of the Great War. He also was pleased to see the young soldiers present, upon whose shoulders would fall the duties of the present year as the old soldiers won. He was pleased indeed to see the smart troop of school cadets who were the comrades of this country. He was also glad to greet the members of the I.O.D.E. and paid tribute to the services of that organization to the Empire.

The Remembrance Day which we commemorated yesterday will remain in our thoughts for many years to come. To-day our thoughts go back to days that are passed. And also into the future we look toward days that are to come. Germany and Russia are Germany stood ready to dominate the world. Germany planned the Great War and willed it. By insisting them we believed we had ensured a lasting peace. In those days we were told it was the Kaiser. If we could get rid of the Kaiser, all would be well in Europe. Today it is Hitler, and we are told that if we defeat Hitler, all will be well. To-day, however, in reality we are confronted with the fact that Hitler is the idol for which we stand. We must obtain victory

Wherefore put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day. Let us remember, yes by all means, remember those who have gone on before, and let us not forget to pay their sacrifice even yet shall not be in vain.

WEDDING

On Friday, November 10th at three o'clock Miss Patricia Burnett, second daughter of Mr and Mrs. J. G. Burnett, was united in holy matrimony to Mr Norman Glover in the church by the Rev. W. G Glover and the late Mr Glover.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. W. Wallis, of Camrose.

The Holy Trinity Anglican church was filled in the presence of immediate friends of both families and a large number of interested friends of the bride and groom. The church was given a pretty appearance by the decorations of the chancel and pews and the altar with a background of lighted candles.

The bride, preceded by Miss Mary Burnett, bridesmaid, entered the church on the arm of Mr W. Worthington, best friend, to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March played by Mrs McCarthy

The bride was attired in a corset blue crepe tailored dress, backs bow at back with burgundy accessories. She wore a corsage of talisman roses and lily of the valley. The bridesmaid was attired in a burgundy crepe dress with back bow at back, and black accessories. She carried a corsage of talisman roses.

Mrs. Burnett, mother of the bride, wore a dress of olive green crepe and black accessories.

The groom was supported by Mr Lee Glover, as best man. The groomsman was in the uniform of His Majesty's Royal Canadian Navy.

During the signing of the register, Miss Cleo Wilson sang beautifully, "I Love You Truly."

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents when a large number of guests assembled Mr Bert Lowe, uncle of the bride and Mrs Lowe and both bride and groom were recipients of gifts of value from all present. The bride cut a beautiful wedding cake and a dainty lunch was served.

The happy couple left on the evening train for a short honeymoon at Edmonton. Quite a number of friends were at the station to see them off.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Glover will reside at Tofield, where Mr. Glover will continue to conduct his barber business.

MORE MORTAGES

Edmonton:—Business prospects in the western provinces with a near record grain crop are particularly bright in the opinion of Morley Ayloworth, general manager and director of Huron and Erie Mortage corporation and of the Canada Trust company. Financial conditions in Saskatchewan and Manitoba particularly are excellent he said. Mr Aylsworth is inspecting western branches of his companies.

PROGRAM FOR WHEAT

Regina:—Wheat marketing program in war time was outlined and approved at the annual meeting of the Saskatchewan wheat pool. Under the terms approved, complete control should be given to the Canadian wheat board. Because of "the impossibility of the futures market reflecting a proper price for Canadian wheat" it was suggested that speculators trading be suspended and the futures market be closed. The program also suggested direct negotiation with the United Kingdom to establish the price in proportion to other commodities. Adoption of 1938 price level was urged.

YOUTH TRAINING

Ottawa:—Changes in the Dominion-provincial youth training program were announced recently by Hon. Norman McLarty, minister of Labor Projects will be carried on in more than 400 centres for an estimated 40,000 young people and will build up the physical condition and morale of Canadian youth.

Besides physical training, first aid and citizenship, industrial training will concentrate on occupations where there will be an increased demand as a result of war contracts. An effort to carry out a survey of available labor is being made to help in determining the type of training.

TRUE PATRIOTISM

Montreal:—Canadians went put aside the pursuits of peace and devote their whole minds to war, said Major General A. G. L. MacNaughton, commander of the first Canadian overseas division in an address here. The general thought the alternative was danger of being submerged.

"Unpleasant, distasteful and wholly undesirable, the situation is upon us," he said, "and to good purpose will be served by bemoaning our fate and seeking a place to blame on those who have moulded the public opinion of the world for their failure to stabilize the safety of democracy."

HOARDING DEFINED

Ottawa:—Buying wave which started with the outbreak of the war will continue "for a month or two" according to a Dominion government survey. Laying in a stock of sugar canned goods and other supplies is not regarded as hoarding unless a scarcity of necessities of life results. In this case, it was said, the war time prices and trade board would take necessary steps to restore normal flow of supplies

NEW PROSPECTS—

Ottawa—Inquiries as to the ability of Canadian manufacturers to supply new export markets are reported in a journal published by the department of trade and commerce. Australia is seeking new sources of commodities formerly obtained from Europe and Southern China wants commodities formerly obtained from Germany Products concerned are chemicals, minerals, newsprint and glass.

REASON FOR DELAY

Owen Sound:—It might be some time before the United Kingdom would need Canada's great stores of wheat, declared Hon J. G. Gardiner, Dominion minister of agriculture. Great Britain, he said, realizes that this Dominion possesses the best storage facilities in the world and is now taking advantage of supplies that might later be closed.

ONE WAY OR ANOTHER

Toronto:—Representative of the Ayrshire, Jersey, Guernsey and Holstein Breeders' Associations meeting here warned that unless the price of cream for buttermaking could be raised nearer the cost of production, dairymen will soon owing to more remunerative lines of farming. This would soon reduce supplies of butter, they said, thereby causing an upswing in prices.

N. R. ELECTION

Fredericton:—Co-operation with the Dominion government in plans to improve agriculture on an empire scale was pledged by a recent unanimous vote of the New Brunswick legislature. The premier said the provincial agricultural policy will be "based on the empire's war needs."

New Brunswick voters will go to the polls on November 20.

The Week in Edmonton

Edmonton, Nov. 13:—Alberta's Capital City this week experienced one of the quietest civic elections held in its history. Mayor Fry and his entire slate of candidates were returned without being seriously challenged by any other candidates. The vote on the major attraction was blamed for public apathy in the contest.

Of far-reaching importance to persons on military service and their dependents was government's order declaring a moratorium on soldiers' taxes and debts, announced as signed by the Lt. Governor. The order also provides for administration of a soldier's affairs if he so wills. "These regulations are extensive in effect and depart from the usual practice in that they provide in simple and inexpensive way for a soldier to have his estate managed by the public administrator without his enlistment," said the Premier.

The Premier added that legislation may be required to make the regulations effective as well be brought down at the regular session, in the meantime, the government gives immediate protection without incurring the expense of a special session.

Vet-craft poppies—poignant reminders of the soldiers' readiness to sacrifice in the cause of Empire, went on sale on Edmonton for a full week prior to Remembrance Day. Due to the day tauitif being a public holiday, the Vet-craft will observe the customary Re...ocial Service in the Memorial Auditorium Building instead in view of the plaques which bear the names of their dead on Friday afternoon.

Edmonton stands in fourth place among cities of 60,000 inhabitant and over for loans under the H.I.A. project, a recent announcement from Ottawa has revealed. Alberta is in third place among the provinces.

Youth Training projects have been organized at Beaverlodge, Irvine, Bruton, and Standard, it was stated here this week. On 1st February is scheduled to open Nov. 15, three instructors of the dominion-provincial scheme, some 7,000 rural boys and girls have received training in occupational, social and cultural projects.

Growth of Alberta's fur farming industry was emphasized Saturday, when Edmonton fur field day was held at the Oliver Experimental Fur Farm. Held under auspices of the Department of Agriculture and the Alberta's Fur Breeder's association, the affair attracted a great number of exhibits and interested visitors. Provincial experimental fur farm at Oliver is the largest and most up-to-date in the British Empire, and a policy of site exchange, similar to that in the live stock fields, is doing much to improve the quality of fur raised in the province.

An all-time record in wool production, which places Alberta on the head among provinces in this phase of agricultural activity, was not this year. Announcing that the current year's production has reached 2,025,000 lbs. Agriculture Minister D. B. Mullen said that the present sheep and lamb population is 854,000 head, an increase of over 300,000 head in two years and 500,000 in twenty years. During 1938, Alberta marketed 199,000 head of sheep and lambs, with 72 per cent grading "good handyweights".

Appointment of Public Works Minister W. C. Fallow to the position as the Alberta Irrigation and Drainage councils formerly occupied by Hon. Solon E. Low was made known this week. Hon. D. B. Mullen is another member. A third will probably be named when government formally appoints someone to the position of water resources director left vacant by the retirement of L. C. Charlesworth. This latter post is now held by the commagership of the Lethbridge N. I. Project.

Still another agricultural record is claimed by Alberta in the approval of $1,367,500 to sugar beet growers of the south. This is the largest payment in the province's history. It represents the initial portion of the $5.50 a ton on 248,000 tons of this year's estimated 270,000 ton crop. Last year's initial payment was $3.50, later brought to $6.50 a ton. Sugar sales are holding up well, officials of the refineries state.

Survey of foodstuff costs is being made by the relief branch of the public welfare department, Hon. Dr. W. W. Cross stated this week. Object is industry will be licensed after December 1, under wartime prices and trade board on producer, manufacturer, importer, exporter or distributor will be allowed to operate without a license under the new order. The licensing has been adopted to provide the government with information concerning the industry, to "secure an adequate distribution of coal, and to protect the public against undue advance in price."

FIRE PRICE LIST

There has been an advance in the prices of some farm products and there is an idea in some quarters that prosperity is sweeping over the farming areas of the west.

Actually the prices of farm products, as a group, have lagged so far behind the general price level that a substantial advance is justifiable to bring prices to a parity

Last year the farm price level was down below the best level of 1913 In other words, if the incomes of farmers had kept pace with those of the remainder of the population, the farmers should have received during 1939 double the prices actually prevailing.

The farmers' inclination is to go on producing more and more food notwithstanding the fact that the low prices produced keep down the farm price level. This is directly contrary to the practices of every other class in the community.

Farmers who give the present situation serious thought know that the industry will profit little in the end from the war. If the prices of their products rise substantially there is more to be disastrous over-expansion and the prices of other goods and services will advance in part, and faster. The farmers experiences go to show that once the price level of the goods and services they have to buy is increased it becomes almost impossible to appreciably insure relief recipients enjoying an average of 2 per cent increase is made quarterly, when reports from the R.C.M.P., municipal authorities and other officials are consulted, but owing to war conditions, more care is being taken in this section for the next three months will be based on the service estimate of recipients' needs.

THE ONLY WAY—

It is very necessary at this time that Mr. and Mrs. Average Canadian Citizen keep their thinking clear. Thinking is the prelude to conclusions and unless thinking is kept clear of error, to say nothing of falsehood, the conclusions reached are bound to be half wrong or wholly wrong.

It is only natural that this war is repugnant to a great many people in Canada. With memories of the last great struggle still fresh in many minds, and with many Commissions, Boards and kindred bodies still grappling with the problems created by the last great war, it is not at all surprising that the announcement of a second great war should have a terrible sobering effect upon citizens and upon some of them a reluctance great enough to cause them to cry out against it.

Perhaps there is no one single thing that can be charged with the cause of the present war unless it is the apparent general inability of mankind to enjoy the bounties nature has provided without recourse to bloodshed. It was ever thus. But superficially at least there are many causes. The age old struggle for the balance of power is one, but standing aloof clear and distinct in "splendid isolation" is the cause of freedom. Freedom of speech, of religion, of political thought and expression, freedom of the press. In short a society where private individuals would not be coerced. compelled, spied upon, informed against and wrongfully convicted, imprisoned and as it has so happened in many cases, executed.

No war was commenced with greater reluctance by Great Britain than the present one. With nothing to gain except a measure of protection and the maintenance of humane, public and political ideals, and with much to lose, it is no wonder that effort after effort was made by Great Britain to maintain peace. The events at Munich in September 1938 were the climax of previous protracted efforts, and while for a time the Munich agreement brought relief, it too before the year had spent itself was to be thrown into discard.

To many people the cause of the present war is blamed on the Treaty of Versailles. Perhaps they are right. But it should be constantly borne in mind that Germany had been allowed to break clause after clause of that treaty without serious protest from the Allies. The Munich agreement, serious and far reaching as is was, was virtually a concession to German demands and was made on the understanding and hope that the leaders of Germany would pursue a reasonable course as to foreign policy, having regard to the rights of weaker and smaller nations. But then came the invasion of Poland. There was nothing in the issue between Germany and Poland that could not in the course of time been straightened out to the satisfaction of both nations. What is five years, ten years, or even twenty years compared to the devastation and loss of life inflicted on Poland by the German invasion and conquest?

Again referring to the treaty of Versailles. If Germany had won the 1914-18 war, would that country have been any easier on the Allies than the Allies were on Germany? Well, here's the answer. The following is an extract from a letter appearing in a recent issue of the Christian Science Monitor, written by Henri L. Courteron, Chicago.

"But if you think that the Versailles document was a little 'tough,' and I do not say that it was or was not better, the Brest Litovsk treaty was a terrible thing. For it forced the Russians, while the Germans held a pistol at the Russian's heads, to give up to Germany about 90 per cent of their coal production and more than half of their industrial establishments. Then the treaty with Rumania came along, in the same sweet vein, and that gave Germany 99 year leases of Rumanian oil fields, and put the Rumanian factories and agricultural output into German hands, and furthermore, made Germany 'boss' from Baltic to the Bosphorus.

And these men who were charged with the responsibility of making what is now called the Versailles treaty, knew all of this, and further knew that Germany intended, if she won the war, to 'take over' all of Belgium, Northern France, Western Russia and all of the British and French Colonies.' With all of this in their minds, the Versailles treaty naturally was certainly bound to be severe. At the same time those keen minds of the Allies certainly knew that at sometime or other, there would be some proper revisions of the Versailles treaty. Had a less severe treaty been made, the people of the Allied countries never would have ratified any treaty, and the war would have started again.

Is it not about time, for the decent people of the world, either to keep silent, or throw all of their moral force—if only moral it is to be—on the side of that type of government where all men and women and children have the right to live their lives? And certainly Hitler's country at present does not offer men and women that right."

The duty of Canadians to-day is to think clearly. President Roosevelt said a short time ago that "the American people are the best informed people in the world." He could have, with truth, added Canadians. A proper understanding of the cause of this war, forces one to the conclusion that having pledged its word to protect Poland, Britain had no choice. And being a daughter of the Mother country, Canada had little choice either. What we as Canadians should do now, is not to bother our heads about pamplets and such like, but rather calmly but resolutely set our hearts and hands on winning the war. And this resolve does not by any means begin and end with uniforms, guns, etc., vitally important as they undoubtedly are. The citizens of Canada should so govern their lives that they can back to the limit the armed forces of the Dominion. And when victory finally comes, hope for a just and enduring peace based on humane considerations for all mankind.

SOON BE IN POSITION TO GIVE DEFINITE DIRECTION TO AGRICULTURAL EFFORT SAYS HON. JAMES G. GARDINER

"I note that most farm papers and some farm organizations are becoming restless in a desire to know definitely with some definite form of farm endeavor related to the war", said Hon. James G. Gardiner, Dominion Minister of Agriculture in a statement issued on October 30th.

Cautioning he said "I have already stated, and it is still true, that farmers can best serve in this war by continuing to do well what they have been doing, namely, producing cereals, meat, dairy products, poultry products, fruit and wool and thus there is the best quality and greatest volume possible.

"I realize, however, that more direction will be necessary as we proceed, We have been discussing the Canadian British requirements with possible Canadian accomplishment before becoming specific in pronouncements other than warning farmers to prepare to produce what they are already producing in greater volume without detracting from quality.

"We have already consulted with the provinces and have been guaranteed their undivided co-operation in carrying out an effort thought advisable by the Dominion Government. We intend to utilize provincial staffs as well as the many voluntary farm organizations so far as possible in carrying out any program decided upon.

"We do not desire, however, to start a Donnybrook. Co-operation will we are fairly certain so to the end that the objective toward which we are driving.

"We now think that by the middle of November we will be in a position to give more definite direction to an already interested farmer. I am, therefore intending to take advantage of an invitation to address the annual meeting of the United Grain Growers to be held in Winnipeg on November 15th to outline what the position is so far so that can be done and the direction we believe farmer effort should take to be of the greatest service."

BREEDING SOWS FOR WINTER FARROWING

(Experimental Farms News)

In North Saskatchewan and elsewhere a good crop has just been harvested. In view of this situation farmers should consider the advisability of breeding more sows than usual, advises W. J. McFaul, Superintendent Dominion Experimental Station, Melfort, Sask. Furthermore, conditions at the close of the war between Great Britain is likely to require large quantities of bacon from Canada.

Hogs farrowed during the winter months and properly reared will generally reach the proper weight when marketings are light. This in turn increases the likihood of a fair price. Proper winter quarters, of course, are essential if winter pigs are to be raised. Extra stalls in a warm barn can easily be prepared as farrowing pens, but if comfortable in quarters cannot be made available, sows should not be bred to farrow during cold weather.

In decking on a hog program, a man should have a basis on which to estimate the value of grain marketed through hogs as compared with selling direct as grain. At the Melfort Experimental Station 181 pigs used an average of 7 pounds of grain to each one hundred pounds of gain. Therefore, by figuring an four hundred pounds of grain as the requirement for each hundred pounds of gain, it is possible to make a fair estimate of the grain value marketed through hogs. By the same method it is possible to calculate the number of pigs that can be carried on the amount of grain available.

Sows farrow about 114 days after service, so in order to avoid neglect it is a good plan to mark the breeding date on a calendar immediately. If a permanent record book is not used. At the Experimental Station, Melfort, brood sows are wintered in cattle shed boxes placed in a sheltered spot and bedded with straw. They should have to walk a hundred yards, or so to

FARM PRICES MAY SOAR

Government officials and private farm leaders in the United States believe that if the European war continues a year, the prices of farm products will soar. At the same time the nation's farmers are warned against overexpansion, which, if it occurred, will inevitably be followed by a post-war collapse like that of 1920.

During the Great War when insecurity line of farm production proved profitable farmers rushed to buy more land and increase expenses. After the war, demand and prices collapsed and thousands were bankrupt.

Many farm leaders believe that the expansion of agriculture during the Great War and high prices then prevailing for food products proved a greater curse than benefit in the end to farmers in Canada and the United States.—Wheat Pool Budget.

AIRMEN SOUGHT FOR LINES AIMED HIGHLY TRADED FOR FLYING DOMINION ROUTE

Winnipeg, Nov. 13.—"Learning to fly is a pleasure, a sport, leading to become an airline pilot is another. Before a young pilot comes to us we like to see him thoroughly. He must have unimpeachable character, a first rate record in his personal life as well as in aviation. Every phase of his previous training is delved into. A charity must be free. Even from Imfreds of hours of northland flying, one of the best schools possible for the teaching of self reliance and an awareness of the responsibility which rests on the shoulders of the aviator. Others trained in aviation colleges, and the flying schools with the Royal Air Force and Royal Canadian Air Force."

These were the words of D. B. Colyer, vice-president of Trans-Canada Air Lines, in a recent interview. He was outlining the opportunities for young men to get into aviation, and the training they would have to complete before becoming eligible for positions with the T.C.A. or any other of the world's commercial airlines.

The task is not an easy one, Dozens of youths clamping themselves for experience today realize that to reach their goal requires months and even years of consistent study and training. When they do get there they must keep abreast of changes in the industry. The amazing progress which has marked aviation in the past decade and will continue to do so in the next. Trans-Canada Air Lines have one of the most intensive training periods of airlines in the world today. For months the pilot station in special ground training, including many hours in the Link Trainer before being permitted to take instruction in food in order that reasonable amount of exercise is assured. Warm water essential and should be provided daily, as pigs will not thrive on snow as their only source of water. Pigs require iodine should also be provided in order to prevent baldness, weak pigs. A satisfactory method is to dissolve one ounce of potassium iodide in a gallon of water and allow four tablespoonfuls of this to each one ounce mixture in their drinking water.

Pigs will consume surprising amounts of leafy alfalfa hay or clover, and this has a particularly beneficial effect on the systems of pregnant sows. Oat sheaves harvested somewhat green are also relished. A supply of sod should be put up that the sows can be given fresh pieces at least occasionally, as this is nature's moth. of supplying hogs with essential minerals.

The brood sow should be brought into the farrowing pen a week before due, in order that she may become accustomed to the new surroundings before the little ones arrive. The sow may become nervous and irritable if moved just prior to farrowing. A bath in used crank case oil will cleanse the skin and eliminate lice.

Careful attention at this period will generally give the sow owner several hundred pounds of extra pork to market.

THE CAREFUL DRIVER

Did you ever figure out how far you have to drive to pass another car that is travelling 30 miles an hour? Assuming your speed is 60 miles an hour, and allowing safe distances for turning out and coming back into your own lane, you must travel 600 feet while the vehicle you are passing goes 400 feet. This is equivalent to passing a stationary line of 12 trucks bend each 30 feet long, standing bumper to bumper. If the vehicle you want to pass is travelling 40 miles an hour the large transport planes.

Health, too, is an important factor for the young man who plan to become pilots. Every thirty days each T.A.C. captain and first officer undergoes complete physical check-up. Airline doctors don't spare the man; the examination is rigorous and the pilot must pass every test before he is permitted to fly. If a pilot is found asleep on one beat."

and you pass it at 50 miles an hour, three distances are even greater. At three speeds you must travel 750 feet while the other car goes 600 feet. In other words, it is unsafe to passing a stationary line of 30 average automobiles or 15 trucker-trailer units, each 40 feet long.

These facts point clearly to the necessity, and knowing that there are no oncoming cars for a long distance ahead. They should also constitute an of the extreme folly of trying to pass an automobile or another truck on a hill or on a curve where the vision is restricted.

BEAT THIS ONE

"Down where I live," said the Texan, "we grew a pumpkin so big that when we cut it my wife used one chest-up. Airline doctors don't spare the man; the examination is rigorous and the pilot must pass every test before he is permitted to fly. If a pilot is found asleep on one beat."

The weather having turned mild again, things are beginning to move again. The Bingo party and dance at the schoolhouse here, sponsored by the ladies of the L.C.C. and the Community Hall Committee was very well attended, and the Bingo game was a very hilarious affair and also we believe a financial success, which was supplied by the ladies of the L. C. C. and after lunch, decks were cleared for action, that is, for the dance to follow. Music was supplied by the Lindbrook Orchestra and was up to snuff alright with the result that everyone was out enjoying a lively and dance immensely and hope for an early repetition soon.

The Week In Edmonton

R. F. Thompson, Dominion supervisor of youth training, was and Edmonton visitor Friday and Saturday. He met the Premier and Dr. Fred McNally, chairman of the Alberta Youth Training Council before resuming his tour of the west.

Praise for the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the first Canadian division was given by Maj.-Gen. A G L McNaughton, G O C. when he came to Edmonton to review local units Of Alberta's garrison he said "I am greatly pleased wit the units I have inspected so far and I feel that they are the highest type of Canadian manhood."

A call for other than active service forces to help Canada in her war effort was sent out by the Alberta Employment service this week, when the immediate registration of skilled and semi-skilled workmen in a wide variety of trades was urged.

oooooo

The official statement said the prosecution of the war can best be attained by co-operation, and that the Service was asking the co-operation of all classes designated at the behest of the Department of National Defence. It was pointed out that this registration is not for military purposes; it is to make available in Ottawa officials complete data on the numbers of trained men available for certain jobs. A list of the trades now being registered follows:

Blacksmiths, boiler makers, buffers and polishers, cabinet makers, carpenters, chemists, core makers and die sinkers, drill press operators.

Draughtsmen, electricians, professional engineers, lathe hands, machinists first class or otherwise specified, ing the week. Either at the main entrance to the Legislature building or on appointment at the Chamber or the rotunda will be set up, bearing an appropriate inscription.

Establishment of a provincial agricultural production committee to co-operate with the Dominion agricultural supplies committee was made known by Hon. D. B. Mullen Tuesday before the annual meeting of Sweeney, deputy minister of agriculture, F. H. Reed, superintendent of Lacombe experimental farm, Dean H. A. Howes, University of Alberta, C. S. Noble, provincial grain commissioner, A. A. Campbell, acting livestock commissioner and J. B. Putman, extension director, who will act as secretary.

At the same time a swine production committee was formed as follows: Mr. Sweeney, N. Curtis, Dominion agriculturist, Dr. R. D. Wilson, botanist and Prof. J. P. Sackville, University of Alberta, H. W. Wiese, Lacombe experimental farm, A. A. Campbell, and Roy Marler, provincial veterinarian, Calgary.

oooooo

The commitments will advise Mr. Mullen on matters pertaining to wartime production in Alberta.

Alberta's bumper crop has allowed a cash increase of $1,500,000 during 1939. Total trade for the season amounted to $4,715,000, or $8.27 per capita for 570,000 visitors. Tourists from adjoining provinces alone numbered 24,500, other cars 12,000; parks entries were 116,000 and train and boat passengers 17,000. All these figures showed substantial gains over previous years. Greatest increase was made in Wainwright Buffalo Park where the increase was said to be 117.97 per cent over the previous year. July was the peak month, with August next, but every month of the year attracted tourists.

Indications are that 1940 will be the greatest year in the history of Alberta's tourist trade. Curtailment of European, Near Eastern and Atlantic travel due to the war, will place Canada and Alberta in a favorable position to receive a vastly greater number of United States visitors. Completion of highway projects in Alberta will in turn attract visitors to the vacations spots of this province.

Let Your Neighbor Know!

It is really very simple and your neighbors will appreciate it. For among them there may be one, there probably is one, who is looking for just the article you have for sale. Articles left unused tend to deteriorate, often become obsolete, yet there are people, in modest circumstances perhaps who would gladly pay a few dollars for the article you have no further use for.

Or it may be Chickens, a Calf, Cow, Horse or any other animal, or Farm Machinery that you are desirous of selling. Everyone appreciates a bargain and there are many bargains scattered throughout this district which would be quickly picked up if prospective buyers knew of them. A CLASSIFIED AD IN THE MERCURY will let your neighbors know if you have anything for sale. The rates are low, the selling average high.

MILLION DOLLARS TO SEEK EXPANDED USES FOR WHEAT

Weal and Motor Fuel to Product of Wheat Kernel

More than a million dollars will be spent in 1940 by research into finding new industrial uses for wheat according to a report made today by the North-West Grain Dealers' Association, and C. W. F. Hedlefinger, president of the Association.

Acting on behalf of the Lion Country Elevator Companies, Cecil Lamont has just returned from visiting the Research division of the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C and the Ford Research Laboratories at Detroit, Michigan. The purpose of the visit is to observe the progress achieved and plans being made for the research into finding new uses for wheat and other farm products following a preliminary survey which he made a year ago.

In reporting to the Association Mr. Lamont said that experiments are now proceeding in the United States for the manufacture of synthetic wool from proteins derived from the kernel of wheat. Synthetic rubber which is more resilient than wool itself has been made in the Ford laboratories from Soya bean proteins. If the plans are successful it is hoped will be soon used in making the velour as fo fez cost, and its use in the production of automobile upholstering of various velours and cloths. A new plastic is being used for making plastic tractor seats from wheat straw. HASTINGS LAKE

The Women's Auxiliary met on Thursday members of the Women's Club of this district will hold a tea to support the Red Cross in every way possible. All the members will join the organization and a quilt, new bedding mods, will be donated and auctioned off to raise funds for the Red Cross. It was also decided to purchase stage curtains for the school and a new quilt will be sent to the Santa Claus in time for his annual trip to the school house, the ones he wore last year being rather a poor-o-boo affair The afternoon apparently was a lucky one for Mrs. Bloomer, for she won both the prize for the lucky draw and for the contest. Tickets were also drawn for an exchange of Christmas gifts at the next meeting. This will be held at Mrs. J. Lindberg's on December 14, one week earlier than usual, owing to the Christmas rush. At the close of the afternoon a delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Kyle and Mrs. Anderson.

The dance at Spitzend on Friday night was a success, all that had been hoped for with a great big happy crowd turning out and enjoying themselves to their fullest extent. The teacher wishes to thank those who helped in any way to make the night a success by giving the kiddies such an enjoyable time with their Christmas Tree.

The young folks of the district are busy shaping up their annual play, which this year is a three act comedy entitled "When Sally Comes To Town" and promises to be a very enjoyable affair. It will be staged in the school house on Friday, December 15th and proceeds will be given to the Red Cross.

LINDBROOK

A dance will be held in the school on Friday November 30th in aid of the Xmas treat for the children. We understand that this is to be a Novelty Dance so it ought to be lots of fun.

The Community Hall Committee is planning on holding a dance in the hall on December 1st. The draw for the radio, on which tickets have been sold at $1 each, will be made during the dance. The Lindbrook Orchestra will supply the music, and the ladies of the L.C.C. the lunch we presume; so roll up, prepared to take home the radio and to have a good time a lot of fun.

The Herbert family of Lindbrook N. seem to be in the wars lately. What with Roy in the hospital with a smashed foot, the result of an auto accident, previously reported; now his father Mr. W. Herbert is laying at home with a broken leg. It seems that Mr. Herbert was getting a load of hay from the Reserve, North of his place, and coming out it tipped and flung him off breaking his leg We believe he was out there some time before anyone knew of it too, we hope the rest of the Herbert family will be extremely careful now lest it be their turn next; for we don't want to report any more casualties from our family, two is plenty.

Mr. Jas. Bracegirdle returned home last week from his trip to Saskatchewan.

Mrs. A. Scott and Mrs' Wagner spent last Friday at the home of Mrs. Gillies at Ardrossan.

New Europe for Future War Aim Of Great Britain

London, Nov 27:—Prime Minister Chamberlain Sunday defined Great Britain's peace aim as the establishment of a "new Europe" but declared in a vein of challenge that the Empire had first a war aim—the defeat of "that aggressive, bullying mentality which seeks continually to dominate other peoples by force."

At the same time he said during a speech broadcast to the Empire that the British Commonwealth's unity in the war "gives us moral as well as material strength" and that Britain has "full confidence in our ultimate victory."

"Members of the British Commonwealth are united as they never have been before in all their history," the Prime Minister said.

It was his first broadcast to the Empire since that fateful Sunday 12 weeks ago when in firm but tragic tones he announced a state of war existed between Britain and the Reich of Adolf Hitler.

KNOW SECRET OF MINES

He told his far-flung audience yesterday that some of Britain's can lesson "suffering over overwhelming naval superiority" and then he made this important disclosure:

"Already we know the secrets of the magnetic mine and we shall soon master the magnetic mine as we have already mastered the U-boat."

Mr. Chamberlain sought to meet criticism of Britain's war menu. He said "we shall not follow the German example of either commuting our own rations from you or inventing ersatz lanes which do not exist."

He added only one qualification: Although news of what is happening will be published "even when the truth is unpleasant," there would have to be omissions when such news "would be helpful to the enemy to have it."

FIGHT FOR THE RIGHT

"We know that in this great struggle we are fighting for the right and against the wrong," he said. "Let us then go forward with God's blessing on our arms, and we cannot doubt that we shall prevail."

Mr. Chamberlain narrowed the Germans of allowing "no consideration of humanity" to deter them from "any form of warfare."

"The latest of these methods," he said, "is the sowing of a new kind of mine indiscriminately in our home waters. It matters nothing to them that what they are doing is contrary to international agreements to which they have subscribed.

"It matters nothing to them that they are daily blowing up neutral ships as well as British, and thereby drowning or mutilating crimes of countries with which they are not at war.

"They hope by these barbarous weapons to cut off our supplies from overseas and so supmons or starve us into submission. You need have no fear that this attempt will succeed. Already we know the secrets of the magnetic mine. We shall master the magnetic mine as we have already mastered the U-boat."

ENCOURAGE SERVICE MEN

Mr. Chamberlain said, "We do not forget that the safety of these islands depends on the untiring watchfulness of our seamen, as it has done ever since the days of Queen Elizabeth."

He then went on to address words of hope and encouragement to the various arms of the Empire's military, naval and air services, telling them to carry on.

Mr. Chamberlain said, the "Empire's unity today gives us moral as well as material strength to win the freedom and establishment of peace for which Britain entered upon the war.

Mr. Chamberlain then defined the Allies' "peace aims," which he distinguished from their "war aim."

The war aim he described as a determination to defeat Germany, not merely its military forces, but also "the aggressive, bullying mentality which seeks continually to dominate other peoples by force. Which finds brutal satisfaction in the persecution and torture of ineffensive citizens and which, in the name of interests of state, justifies repudiation of its own pledged word whenever it finds it convenient."

DEFINES NEW EUROPE

Once this is achieved, he said, the Allies will seek to establish "a new Europe."

"Not new in the sense of tearing up all the old frontier posts and redrawing the map according to the likes of the victors," he explained "but a Europe with a new spirit, in which the nations which inhabit it will approach their difficulties with goodwill and mutual tolerance."

FEAR WILL DISAPPEAR

"In such a Europe fear of aggression would have ceased to exist and pacific adjustments of boundaries or by would be necessary would be thrashed out between neighbors sitting on equal terms at a round table, with the help of disinterested third parties, if it was so desired.

"In such a Europe it would be recognized that there can be no lasting European unless there is a full and constant flow of trade between the nations concerned, for only increased interchange of goods can increase wealth and the standard of living be improved.

"In such a European settlement would have the confidence right to choose its own form of international government, as the present government did not pursue an external policy injurious to its neighbors.

ARMAMENTS WILL GO

"Lastly, in such a Europe armaments would be kept down to the level for the preservation of law and order."

He admitted it might take many years to achieve this goal and acknowledged that the task of building up theory capable of conducting and guiding the development of the new Europe in the difficult years of transition of this machinery he left to the future.

"I would add my hope," he said, "that a Germany animated by a new spirit might be found to take part in which should take part in its operations."

Attributing the war to "Hitler's unbridled ambition," the prime minister said the first 12 weeks of hostilities had been "Very different from what we expected."

NOT GERMAN HUMANITY

"We need not attribute the reluctance of the Germans to begin a great land offensive, or attempt a series of mass air attacks on this country, to their humanitarian feelings. We have had plenty of evidence that no consideration of humanity deter them from any form of warfare that they think will bring them some advantage. They must therefore have come to the conclusion that at present they would loose more than they would gain by such attacks and they have preferred to use methods which they think can be employed without serious loss to themselves."

Mr. Chamberlain said his listeners might perhaps sometimes wonder why the Allies were not attacking more vigorously.

"Well he explained, "I would remind you that the art of war consists in bringing the greatest possible force to bear at the right time at the right place. In our case the place and time will be decided by those who are responsible for the strategy of the Allies.

"But we are not losing anything in delay, for time is on our side. Every week that passes by intensifies the pressure upon Germany of the Allies' blockade, which is slowly but surely depriving her of those materials which are essential to successful prosecution of modern war and which she cannot produce within her own borders."

The Week In Edmonton

Soldiers of the active service forces training in Canada will, just as their fathers, enjoy the comforts provided by the Canadian Army Red Cross Society, Lieut.-Col. Herbert Bruce, said Henry J. Roche, manager of the Alberta Safety League this week. Mr Roche is executive chairman of a drive for funds which will open in Alberta on December 5, and continue to December 11. "The slogan of Everybody welcome . . . Everything free" will once more adorn the lists," he said, "and it will be our endeavor to better the record of the last great war. "While the boys are banging out the washing on the Siegfried line we'll be banging out the shingle on the Maginot line."

The C.A.R. drive is under the distinguished patronage of Premier Aberhart; Most Rev. J.H. MacDonald, D.D., archbishop of Edmonton; Rev. Worship John W. Fry, suppor of Edmonton and Lt.-Col. E. Rome, M.M., officer commanding the Edmonton garrison. All patrons stress the need and the urgency of the work in hand, and invite Alberta citizens and groups to participate in one way during the five days from Dec. 5 to 11. Inquiries should be addressed to Canadian Army Red Cross Columbia Club, Edmonton, where donations and offers will be received. C.A.R.C. has received approval from the late Gen. A. W. Currie in the last war to meet objection on record my appreciation, and in doing so I know I am voicing the sentiments of all Canada soldiers overseas," he wrote. "This organization, as characteristic of the Canadian Corps, is a wonderful and inspiring thing."

Belief that Alberta should endeavor to boost the north during the present time was expressed by Alex McDonald, chief of the Peace River Fur change control Board's intelligence division last week. Visiting Alberta for the first time in a score of years, he said, Mr. Bulkin said the tourist trade was an important factor in establishing the Canadian—U.S. trade balance. "This tourist revenue, to be vital, I should say," he told Calgary interviewers. "They should be attracted here in large numbers next year to see the marvelous beauties of your Rockies, over which I have just flown."

Latest of 300,000 lbs. of whitefish has been planed on the winter season's commercial catch in Lake Athabasca, Hon. D. R. Mellon said a few days ago. This is a 400,000 lbs. less than the total catch. The reduction was decided upon after a conference between Commissioner Mellon and Hicks fisher's officials. The move is designed to stop dumping on the U.S. market, with consequent chaotic price conditions which previously had prevailed. Fishing in Lake Athabasca, Hon. D. R. Mellon said a few days ago. Government is considering the granting of a franchise to a private concern whose obligation it will be to keep the power line at Mellin from Edmonton to the Northern Boundary in return for the privilege, Minister of Public Works A. Fallow said 12th week. The franchise would likely remain in effect only until such time as Edmonton is at a point where consumer and winter demand for power would warrant it will continue to spend as much as possible on this construction work, he was of opinion among interested parties is desired. As provincial participation in the cost of construction co-operation of both governments in the carrying of the project will be necessary.

$8,000,000 Tourist Trade Next Year

An estimated value of $8,000,000 for Alberta's tourist trade next year has been made by provincial government officials.

Figures recently released by the Alberta publicity department show that tourist trade for the present year is this province had a valuation of $4,773,000, which was an increase of $1,193,000 over the previous year.

This year a total of 114,000 motor cars entered the national parks in this province, which was a gain of 18,000 over 1938.

Cars entering customs stations in Alberta for touring purposes in this province reached a total of 34,000, compared with 23,500 in 1938. Total cars entering Alberta this year is placed at 152,000, compared with 136,768 in the previous year.

While tourist trade from the U.S. bound to show a big gain next year, owing to European war conditions causing many people to holiday on this continent, it is believed that Alberta will attract an unusually large number of visitors. Coupled with the fact that the Jasper-Lake Louise and Big Bend highways have been completed, there is every indication that tourists will pour into the province from the east, west and south.

This year's tourist trade increase the demand for hard surfaced roads in Alberta, in the opinion of officials of the A.A.A.

One Winged Bird Sent Warmer Climate of B. C.

Cameron, Alta. Nov. 27:—Animals often ride to destination in cars of Canadian National Express but seamen who "ride the rods" on trains in order to spend the winter at the Pacific Coast are few and far between.

That was the opinion of Peter Hoffer, section foreman here, when seen in Cameron and somebody lost a wing. When cool winds, first warning from the North, his companions took off for warmer climes, leaving Peter to his own devices. Peter is employed by a local school board and sympathized with the plight of his species in Sunday Park legion.

Net Earnings Of Alberta Pool Elevators

The operating earnings of Alberta Pool Elevators for the year ended July 31st, 1939 showed a surplus of $846,581.15. The figure was arrived at after allowing $819,985.17 for depreciation and paying $28,264.54 to the Alberta government as interest on indebtedness. The results for the crop year 1938-39 are the best since the year 1928-29.

Total handlings of Alberta Pool Elevators for the year under review were 44,500,923 bushels of grain, compared with 22,200,712 bushels a year previous. The larger handlings were accounted for principally by the better crop in Alberta in 1938 as compared with 1937.

The net free assets representing the equity of the membership in the Alberta Wheat Pool as at July 31st, 1939, totalled $4,603,783.54 an increase of $1,045,984.04 over the year.

Alberta Pool Elevators operated 421 country elevators in 1938-39 out of a total owned of 426. Two terminals were operated, namely Pool No. 1, owned by the association, and Pool No. 2, leased from the federal government. Both these terminals are located at Vancouver.

The executive personnel given Alberta Pool Elevators by many thousands of Alberta grain producers over the past eight years has resulted in the organization making satisfactory progress in re-establishing itself financially. Each passing year sees Alberta Pool Elevators in better shape to render excellent service to the farm people and to advance the cause of Alberta agriculture.

SMALLER AND SMALLER—

NOT SO VERY many years ago western agriculture, among other things was typified by a very large steam tractor, drawing behind it quite a number of large plows. Anyone who has lived in the Middle West during the past thirty years will easily recall them in memory. Very large units were they and as photographic material were excellent subjects. Surely there are very few who have not seen a photograph of one of these units. The operator, with a confident all powering smile, leaning out of the "cab", the smokestack belching forth smoke, a vivid sign of working power; and the plowman, standing on his plows amid a maze of levers, depicting mechanical ingenuity to the last degree. In those days power farming was in its infancy, and spread out in an ever expanding view were acres and acres of prairie to "turn over." Consequently it was natural for engineers to assume that the larger the unit, the faster and more economical would the work be done. But whether like the pre-historic animals "whose end came from" or whether they were just plain unprofitable, or whether the advent of tractors of the internal combustion type drove them from the fields, or the years passed these large units gradually became fewer and fewer. The early internal combustion tractor to no small degree, followed the old steam tractor style. They were made large and had to pull quite a multiple of plows behind them. But with the passing of the years they began to become reduced in size until there came a time, that of a modern tractor were placed alongside one of the old steam plowing outfits it would be a David and Goliath combination.

Within the last few years tractor design has again noticeably changed. At least in certain lines. Tractors have become smaller until sometimes one wonders whether it is a tractor one is looking at or a strange insect of the engineers' creation. But what they lack in size and impressiveness, they make up in splutter and business-like go. Ready at a moments notice to do the work of several horses, they are rapidly gaining popular favor in the agricultural sections of the United States and Canada. Equipped with rubber tires and mobile to an extreme degree, many comparitively small acreage farmers are falling for their charms. Compared to the old steam units, they are cheap too, ranging in price from $600.00 to $750.00, ready to go. Almost every maker of power farm machinery have one or more models and while they cannot be said to be particularly numerous here yet, judging from the way they have been received in the United States, the time is not far distant when they will be.

Generally, it is the larger and more pretentious mechanical contrivances that oust the smaller units, but these modern, mobile gaily painted mechanical hustlers have supseded something vastly greater in size.

STATE MEDICINE—

STATE MEDICINE is a subject that frequently crops up in forums, discussions, newspapers and periodicals. There is no end of heated argument both for and against, as evidenced several months ago by two speakers, broadcasting over the C.B.C. net work.

A very interesting sidelight was thrown on this subject quite recently when it was announced that almost unanimously one thousand physicians of New Zealand refused to accept a state guaranteed income of $7,500.00 a year. This amount was larger than the income of the average New Zealand doctor. In discussion, it is often claimed that the opposition to state medicine by the general run of doctors, is based on financial considerations. There is of course the occasional doctor who supports state medicine. The decision of the New Zealand doctors not to accept $7,500.00 a year, a sum larger than the average doctors' earnings, would indicate that reasons other than financial are back of their decision. New Zealand, it will be remembered has a government pledged to advanced social legislation.

New 'Wonder' Drug Checks Pneumonia

Memphis, Tenn., Nov 21:—An important step in the battle rages from pneumonia in the United States during the present winter was predicted Tuesday by physicians here to attend the annual meeting of the Southern Medical association.

Sulfapyridine,' the "wonder drug" which came into use last spring, has shown unheard of results in checking the disease, which is estranged only by heart disease and cancer as a cause of death in the U.S.

Canadian Bacon For Allies

Even the hog is playing his part in Canada's wartime preparations. It is expected that the Dominion along with the United States, will be exports to augment supplies of bacon which ordinarily come from the Scandinavian nations, Poland and other countries of the continent. Statistics supplied by the Canadian National Railway show that Canadian bacon exports during the last year rose from 37,313,000 pounds in 1938 to 114,219,000 pounds in 1918.

The Scarlo Fall Moisture Report

Compiled From 864 Precipitation Recording Stations

The precipitation that has occurred over the whole province during the ending the fall months of August, September and October, has averaged only 62 per cent of the normal or long time average. In Alberta the per centage has been 78, in Saskatchewan 68, and in Manitoba 86.

Investigation has shown that the precipitation which falls during the months of August, September and October, or immediately following the harvest and until the ground freezes, forms the foundation for the following crop, inasmuch as this precipitation nearly all penetrates into the soil and is held there fast, available to be drawn upon for the following crop. Precipitation has also shown that a normal wheat crop of 16½ bushels to the acre usually receives the benefit of this fall reserve moisture.

A study of annual records reveals the following:—

In Alberta since the year 1926 (the earliest date that yield figures are available) there have been 11 years when the yield was held below less than normal; 6 of these years produced an average of better than average crop, but 11 years produced less than an average crop.

In Saskatchewan since 1926, there have been 15 years with less than normal fall precipitation, 7 of these years produced average crops, but 11 produce less than an average crop.

In Manitoba since 1926, there have been 10 years with less than normal fall precipitation, 5 of these years produced average crops, but 10 produce less than an average crop.

It appears from this, then, that wherever less than normal precipitation occurs during the fall, crop yields are definitely against an average crop being produced in the following year.

This year, however, the fall precipitation, it will be observed, is not only less than normal, but is also only less than normal, particularly in Saskatchewan. The records reveal that in Alberta there have been only 4 years since 1926 when fall precipitation was as low as it is this year and of these 4 years in only 1 year was an average crop produced, and in 3 years the crops were considerably less than average.

In Saskatchewan, since 1926, when rainfall records were first kept (a period of 14 years) there has been only one single year—the crop year of 1929—when the fall moisture was as low as it is this year. That year it will be remembered, produced a poor yield.

In Manitoba, since 1926 there have been 10 years where the fall moisture was as low as it is this year; in 3 of those years better than normal crops were produced, but in 7 of the years considerably less than average yields were enjoyed.

It will be noticed, therefore, that the probabilities are against an average crop being produced in Alberta and Manitoba next year unless considerably better than average rainfall occurs during the growing season, and as this report shows, these better than normal rains are by no means to be quite hair against a normal crop being produced next year.

This is a serious matter in itself we venture to say, but when coupled with the news of the drought in the American winter wheat area, and the less than average moisture reserves available for next year's winter wheat crop in the United States, it would seem as though the drought, which will have an important effect on forth coming crops, has been continental-wide.

Considering, too, the less favorable reports of harvesting yields in Australia, and in the Argentine, with excess fears of possible stem rust in latter country, and taking into account also the sinkings of vessels containing wheat, then it would appear that the prairie Canadian U.S.A., and the world wheat surplus may be found to be needed, sooner perhaps than many think.

The details of the fall precipitation that has occurred in the various Crop Districts are as follows:—In Alberta all crop districts above less than normal—No 3 being particularly bad—with the exception of No. 8, 13, 15 and 18, which have enjoyed better than normal rains.

In Saskatchewan all crop districts show less than normal, with Nos. 6, 7, 8 and 9 being particularly bad.

In Manitoba crop districts 4, 5, 6 and 13 are better than normal, all the rest having had less than normal precipitation.

On Marketing Turkeys

Alberta farmers will market this year approximately 600,000 turkeys. This is the estimate of Dominion Government officials in the percentage of "A" and "B" birds marketed and less "C's" and culls, largest due to the influence of department instruction and the breeding birds distributed at reasonable prices by the Alberta Turkey Breeders Co-operative. However, there is still room for improvement and the farmers themselves can profit by following a few simple rules, especially for the sake of the export of Canadian turkeys to England will be very high. This does not necessarily mean any drastic drop in prices, but farmers will not be in too great a hurry to market everything on the one except the few to be kept for breeding purposes. Annually we see a large number of rangy, underfleshed and "pinny" turkeys on the market. These must be sold by the trade and the greater the quantity of these poor birds the greater the ill effect on the top grades. If farmers will only realize that turkeys should not be considered as a Christmas and New Year's delicacy, but more as a profitable summer crop, they will make more profit from their turkeys and will be able to cash in on "side line."

BEE NOTES

Every growing simple rules regarding breeding and selling should be observed. Remember that the plump, well fleshed bird is in demand and also that this is the bird that will bring cash in your pocket. Every bird that will grade "A" when dressed. Consequently, when the flock is ready to market, carefully examine each bird and here to be kept for breeders. Given Lamber Co. must be the aim of the flock and the greatest care should be devoted to the selection of these birds. Do not overfeed on fattening mashes but be selected and branded. Selecting in the early season will leave you top grade flock. Foundation stock should be young ones, may be purchased from the Alberta Turkey Breeders Co-op.

FINISHING

Although turkeys cannot stand any great amount of confinement the birds will do better if given a chance to get limited runs and even to pens if the final purpose finish is to be obtained. A mash consisting of ground wheat 50 per cent, ground barley 25 per cent, ground oats thirty per cent, bone scraps fifteen per cent and 1 per cent fine salt should be mixed with milk to a crumbly consistency and fed about noon and evening. All they will clean up in twenty minutes at a feeding. Preferably add fresh milk each time this mash the evening previous to feeding in large enough quantity to moisten. Leave for the birds go to roost feed in a trough all the grain (equal parts wheat and oats) they can eat. Water or milk should be available at all times.

Twenty-four hours before the turkeys are to be dressed all food should be removed but only water given.

Remember to market only those plump, well-fatted birds that are not to be used as breeders. Any bird that is not properly fleshed or is "pinny" should be withheld from the market. It will pay to let these range a while longer and to gradually market them after February and also remember that it is generally possible to get a good deal towards stabilizing the market if they are prepared to market only the well finished birds at this time.

For further detailed information re turkeys, write to the Poultry Branch, Department of Agriculture, Edmonton, for the bulletin "Turkey Raising in Alberta."

High Percentage of Suggestions Are Practicable

Montreal, Nov. 27.—Eighty-four per cent of 24,000 suggestions for improvements received by employees since 1925 were found practicable and later adopted, it was revealed at the 13th annual meeting of the Union Management Co-operative Movement, Canadian National Railways mechanical section.

New Brunswick Votes Liberal Majority

Saint John, N.B., Nov. 21:—The Liberal party polled about 58 per cent of New Brunswick's total vote in yesterday's provincial election, according to preliminary figures compiled by The Canadian Press. Total votes excluding a few polls unreported, was 238,283, compared with 271,844 in the 1936 election. Liberals got 138,488 votes, Conservatives 104,616, other candidates 1,289.

Cookies That Keep

By Francie Lee Borton

The life span of a batch of cookies is short but eventful. Some are devoured by eager children Some are included in the donations by Bridge guests. Others are secretely "doubled" with guests by those males enjoying that "little game" far into the night. No matter who we are or where we are, a good cookie is always welcome company. Here is a cookie recipe that will make cookies that will keep indefinitely—provided you place them in closed tins and hide the containers Otherwise those cookies will disappear like magic

Marvelous Christmas Cookies
3¾ cups sifted cake flour; ¾ cup melted butter or other shortening; 1 cup molasses, heated; 1-2 cup brown sugar, firmly packed; ½ teaspoon cloves; ½ teaspoon cinnamon; ½ tea. spoon nutmeg; ½ teaspoon allspice; ½ teaspoon ginger; dash of salt; ½ cup milk.

Sift flour once, measure Combine butter and molasses, add sugar, spices, salt and soda. Then add flour gradually, mixing well after each addition. Let stand in cold place a week or two. Place small amount of dough on slightly floured board and roll paper-thin. Cut with fluted cookey cutters in fancy shapes Bake on greased baking sheet in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) about 10 minutes. These cookies keep indefinitely in closed tins. Makes 200 cookies

COMMUNICATION

Editor, Tofield Mercury,

Dear Sir—

I see by the last Mercury that the editor was six hours late to the meeting of Mr. H Boutzilier former M. P. for the Vegreville constituency. And he asks anyone to write regarding the meeting. So I will take advantage of his kind request. I am very sorry that he did not have a personal invitation to the meeting.

I might take the liberty to correct that Mr Boutzilier is not the former M P , but the son of the M P

The purpose of the meeting was to start the organization of the United Farmers of Canada (Alberta Section). This is a strictly non-political farm movement and to unite the present four farm bodies in Alberta into one unit.

Mr Boutilier spoke for some time on the need of one farm organization to speak for the agricultural section of Canada to such great political party in power whatever their political ideology. Stressing the need of the farmers being able to speak to any government as an industrial unit and being strong enough to enforce as far as possible if necessary their reasonable requests. He pointed out that labor in any class had only been able to obtain results when they could speak with authority and were ready if and when necessary to take united action.

The meeting was very unanimous in its decsire in support such a movement and a number joined but as it was getting late and many had to go home and as there was quite a large, though inactive, U.F.A. in Tofield who were raring a meeting in the near future, it was decided to postpone organization until an opportunity to enlist the support of the U. F.A. membership had been given.

Thanking you for the interest.

GEO. G. ABERNETHY,

HASTINGS LAKE

Mrs. Bert Spilsted entertained a number of the Ladies of the Spilsted district at tea last Friday afternoon.

While enjoying himself at a dancing party last Wednesday evening, George Drever had the misfortune to fall and suffered a bad cut above his eye. George Washke immediately drove him in to Tofield where Dr. Law put four stitches in the cut.

Plans for the Sunday School Christmas Concert got under way last Sunday and parts have been handed out. The first practice will be held directly after Sunday school next Sunday afternoon. It has been planned to hold the concert in the school house on Saturday night, December 23rd.

We hear that a few of our hockey players wandered up to Minnick last Sunday and took part in a game being played there. The Aces were disappointed by this time last year and are just as anxious to get their team in form this season. However the big drawback this year, is that they have no rink, the old pond having dried up This means they will have to move to the Johnson slough at the far end of the district or else go out on the lake.

However, the boys have come to the conclusion, that having their rink on a slough is not very satisfactory. The members are too widely scattered to expect them to share equally in the work and the care that the upkeep of a rink entails It means that every fall the few close members must take time off to get out the holes and freeze them in place for use and then put up the boards. After a winter's cleaning and keeping the ice in shape then Spring comes and they must tear it all down. This is not done until the last minute for fear of it will freeze or that a day will come when they can all meet to put up

AMISK CREEK

Ladies' Aid held their annual meeting at Mrs. Carrie Berg's home on Tuesday of last week. Many visitors and most of the members were present. Mrs. C. Erickson gave a very interesting report from the W.M.S. Convention held at Holden recently. Quite a little business was done. Some money was divided between our own church and other missions. Among those were, Old People's home at Bawlf, Wood's Orphan Home at Calgary and the Seamen's Mission. The Red Cross will be attended to later on The election of officers then took place. Mrs. C. Berg will be president for the coming year, following Mrs. P. O. Plesten. Mrs. I. C. Olson was re-elected vice-president, and Mrs. C. Erickson re-elected secretary-treasurer. The next meeting will be held in January. No date set as yet.

Marvin Moen and Lloyd Berg motored to Edmonton Wednesday morning. Mr. and Mrs. H. Hillerud accompanied them. Mr. H. Hillerud attended the Municipal Councillors' Convention held in Edmonton for three days last week. Mrs. Hillerud visited with her sister, Mrs. T. Brooks, who with her family have their home in the city. They all returned Friday evening.

Jonas Moen who has had his home in Southern Alberta for many years is now visiting with his brother, P.O. Hatlen.

A large crowd attended the program in the church sponsored by the Young People from Tofield last Sunday evening. We hope they will visit us again in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Holmes and Son from DeMay, Mr. and Mrs. A. Sorensen from Edmonton and Mrs. C. Ellsing from Ryley were visitors for the week-end at Mr. and Mrs. C. Erickson's home.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Moen from Hazeldean visited the E. A. Moen home over Sunday. Edna Moen and Gladys Olson who are attending agricultural school at Vermilion accompanied them. They all started back Sunday evening.

Marvin Moen and Lloyd Berg were placed as third team in grain judging in Edmonton last Thursday.

Mrs. P. O. Plesten visited at the E. Nords home last Friday afternoon.

Mr. E. A. Moen left Monday morning for Calgary. He was elected delegate for the Wheat Pool Convention to be held there this week.

that the boards usually have to be fished out with the lower oxen usually finding their way to the bottom of the pond, thus causing a shortage of boards for the next season. So it has been every year.

This winter the boys are determined to put up a permanent rink. Mr. Washke has kindly donated them a cultivated spot of level land for this purpose but they lack the necessary funds to complete the rink. Now the question arises, are the members of the hockey team going to have to reach down in their pockets for this amount or will the community show the boys that they are good sports and help them out a bit?

We all know that the Aces are fine fellows and that as a team they have proved that they are one of which any district should be proud. But as such a district I do not think we have supported the team as much as they deserved. They have had to hoe their way and we have taken their laurels for granted, not that we weren't proud of them, we sure just can'dow. Now is the time we can prove our loyalty to the team by helping them establish a permanent rink. Such a rink is a boost to any neighborhood. Other years the boys have stood the cost, the work and the clearing of the rink themselves without a grumble and put every person in the district and his dog very welcome to the use of it any time. Now, this year why not show the boys that we appreciated it. It will help them out as well as providing a permanent rink for all to enjoy.

The boys are planning to build it themselves at their own cost, but if they do so, can we expect to use it afterwards? That would be hardly fair, would it? I don't think so. What do you think?

One of the men in the district has contributed also; we think in a nice thought. He says that if the Ladies' Club are determined to aid the Red Cross all they can, and that if the young people of the district are preparing a play will the boys that they can raise some funds to contribute to the same cause, then it is up to the men of the district to turn out in support of the play. The players are naturally all amateurs but they are doing their best with what they have. Now that Mr. Anderson is no longer here to act as director they are doing everything themselves.

DEVILLE

The Deville Hockey team are once more back on the ice and it is plain to see that the team is greatly improved. They have started off with a bang by putting on a Box Social and Dance in the Cooking Lake school on Friday December 1st.

The dance will begin at 9.30 p.m. so come on everybody and enjoy yourself.

U.F.W.A. NOTES

Mrs. A. Hasbedahl entertained the members and visitors at the November meeting of the Local. The roll call was "Suggestions for Christmas Gifts."

It was decided to take advantage of the free correspondence course on Rug Making, sponsored by the the Department of Agriculture After the routine business was disposed of the selection of officers took place. Mrs Hasbedahl was elected President, with Mrs. Ward vice-president and Mrs. I. Nuss, secretary-treasurer.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. H. Soule in Tofield on December 14th. All members are requested to attend as several matters of general interest are to be discussed.

Lettuce: A Plant Of Paradoxes

(By Ernest Douglas, Phoenix Ariz.)

If the nights didn't get chilly in Arizona and Southern California Easterners could not have their head lettuce in cold weather. This rounds paradoxical, but lettuce is a plant of paradoxes and superlatives. Growers do everything to keep it from behaving as a normal plant should. Its production and packing are more highly specialized and industrialized than those of any other farm product. It is probably shipped farther and distributed over a wider area than any other perishable crop.

To our fathers and grandfathers, lettuce was just a garden vegetable that they planted in the spring. Crisp green leaves were gathered for the table until warm weather made them rough and bitter.

It was noted that if cool weather came, leaves folded into a head like a cabbage. No seed stalk could be formed and the plant was a failure. Out to the human palate the partly blanched leaves inside a head are sweeter and better than the green ones which grow outside.

INDUSTRY BORN

How the head lettuce industry was born. Almost every crosscreek store in the United States, and many in Canada carry head lettuce even when snowdrifts are piled deep outside. Chances are that the name of some Californa or Arizona grower-packer-shipper appears on the crate.

Last year, curlot shipments of head lettuce in the United States totalled 58,117. Each car contained an average of 539 crates, and each crate contained an average of five dozen heads. This means 14,000,540 crates and 1,901,700,460 heads. In addition great quantities moved by trucks and in carloads of mixed vegetables. California furnished 29,227 of these carloads and Arizona's portion was the 10,354 cars.

In order that it may produce heads instead of seed stalks, lettuce is planted when there is cool weather ahead. In California's Imperial Valley Arizona's Yuma and Salt River Valleys—which are the principal producing areas—this means fall. Too early planting means no stand, for the seed will not germinate at a soil temperature above 70 degrees.

LAKESHORE

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Warner spent a couple of days last week visiting friends at Wainwright.

Mr. and Mrs. Gamplole, T. H. Soule and Mrs. Soulsel had dinner with Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Soule on Sunday.

That ringing and burning in our ears on Monday was a sure sign the bridge foursome had gathered for a rubber or two. They met at W. H. Soule's and played hard and long. Looks as if they are getting into shape for bridge club.

The young people held their meeting on Saturday evening at the school. These are a regular thing now, and will certainly help to pass the winter more pleasantly.

Mr. J. H. Johnston and Mr. and Mrs. Art Hadley spent a couple of days in Edmonton last week-end.

Mel. Lloyd and John Wood also made business trips to the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooper of St. Paul district spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Graham. Mildred Graham also was here for the week-end.

Mrs. Lelean who spent a week with Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Phillips returned to her home in Edmonton on Friday, Mr. Phillips driving her to the city.

Delegations Slow Up Business At Cornhill Council Meeting

A regular meeting of the Council of the Municipal District of Cornhill was held at the District's office on Friday, December 8th. There were present Reeve Walker (in the chair), Councillors Anderson, Coombes, Holmberg, Kortzman and Sunday.

The minutes of the last regular meeting together with that of se[illegible] passed [illegible] were read and upon motion by Councillor Holmberg, seconded by Councillor Sunday, were formally approved.

The monthly financial statement for November was presented and discussed.

The Government inspector's report was read and the suggestions made in it taken note of. The Council considered it a good report.

The suggestion made in the report that a bylaw be passed instead of a resolution when setting the mill rate for school districts was acted upon and a bylaw governing this was given a first, second and third reading.

On the motion of Councillor Anderson the inspector's report was adopted.

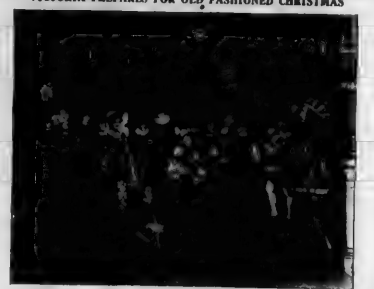
Mr. Teagh interviewed Council re a levy of $14.50 made against him. This was in connection with a ground fire which occurred on his and his neighbor's lands. The levy was made on the basis of the fire warden's report which stated, according to reports, the fire started on Mr. Teagh's place. Mr. Teagh claimed that the fire was first seen on the Borrow farm but the original starting place of the fire was unknown. He had done a lot of digging and stopping ground fires and rumored being charged with $14.50 which he was convinced he should not be called on to pay. He asked that a full investigation by two or more councillors from other districts be held. It often happens cause of fire is ascertained to him, he will pay the levy, he said.

Moved by Councillor Holmberg that Reeve Walker and Councillor Coombes be appointed a committee to investigate the ground fire incident. —Carried.

Letter from the A.A.M.D. re Municipal stationery. They stated that their original source of supply had been changed and that the matter was now in the hands of the Association's executive.

Councillor Holmberg gave a verbal report of the Municipal District's Convention which was held at Edmonton recently. There were about 100 resolutions before the convention, many of which were recommendations to the government. It should however be remembered that before any of these resolutions became law they were only in the discussion stage. Many resolutions passed at the convention. The programme, seen here in rehearsal has such picturesque features as a bear's head, Yule log, wassail bowl and Ch. istmas carols. Reindeers in old time costumes haul the log to the massive fireplace where it is lighted by the Mayor of Victoria with a fragment from last year's log, which has been "put under a bed to secure the home from fire", according to an ancient superstition. Christmas dinner in the three great banqueting halls with the chief feature the boar's head, tusks flores, mounted on a silver platter, are other picturesque notes in this most colorful festival.

VICTORIA PREPARES FOR OLD FASHIONED CHRISTMAS



Preparations for the same kind of Christmas festivities which enlivened England in the days of Good Queen Bess are now under way at the Empress Hotel at Victoria, B.C., where an unusual number of Canadians will join approximately 400 Americans in an old-fashioned Yuletide celebration.

HILLS OF DESTINY

BY AGNES LOUISE PROVOST

(Chapter I)

The flip of a coin decided it. If Lee Hollister, listening to meaningless balls on the edge of a tropical city half a world away had not felt that ring of homesickness for small sweet places and the land of open spaces and small silver product of the United States most acid started for home four months before he was expected, a number of quite exciting things might never have happened.

Even then, if he had continued straight on to Vancouver by the most direct route, as any reasoning adult might be expected to do instead of indulging in the hitherto strange whim that one of the three stations should detour the new, several other matters would no doubt have taken a notably different course.

Word of his arrival, for instance, would never have trickled on ahead of him. Gideon Morse, that most arch little man, undoubtedly would have dispatched a telegram post much sooner than he actually did, and from that moment would have kept an unobtrusive eye on the movements of this unexpected young man to whom the Circle V ranch had been home for twenty years and Matt Blake something more than a father.

But the coin had spun, not once in that far-off city but again on the ranching social two hours away from boundary, and Lee had only got off three stations ahead of his destination, not immediately proceeded to make new and quite different arrangements for moving on.

The town's one hotel, removed him, and he charged from a meal whose recipe is unspeakable old treasons and a flame short and went out of gas, and was the unshaked street. A horse was located and bargained for with an eye for points. A second-hand saddle followed; some purchases were made here and there.

When the job was finished the stranger in town studied and damage geared, and in his place was a brown young man in a big stetson who might have been any wandering cowboy from the back ranges, or a young rancher in town for the day.

Long before the train that he had left was whistling for Saunders Siding, Lee Hollister was on his way. He rode easily, with the grace of long custom, picking up familiar landmarks and thinking that the old early waste looked good after nearly two years of wandering, even to the sloughs of hot year's tumbleweed, wind-banked in the bottom of a fence.

By late afternoon he had left the high desert for the twilight of a narrow canyon whose ragged walls he need a hundred feet above the river's edge. He camped there for the night.

In the morning he started on again, up a thread of trail that hugged the ragged wall, out again on an open flat, and over a ridge where the cedar and pinion gave away to slim pine.

The far side of the ridge slanted down to a long mountain meadow. There was water there, and he dismounted, eased the cinches to rest the horse and set about to appease a healthy hunger. Moving easily and lightly he merged into his surroundings as naturally as the tall straight pines back of him or the brown needle carpet beneath. He was tall and straight himself, a full six feet of smoothly coordinated muscle, with a keenly modeled profile, black eyes that saw much and learned little, and a body long fare that was and had flourished in a warm brown.

He was not in the least concerned that there were people, plenty of people, who would think how a long trail it waste two days and part of a third-and ticket in order to take the longest-at highway was he.

But he had been in no rush from the night's direction, and he knew from back it was the way which he had first saw a lean black-headed little rancher with weary body and suspicious eyes twenty years before. That man was almost to the day which had him that terrible journey — that wandering Navajos, long of relief. Matt Blake's little pet!

Lee's eyes warmed as he looked down. There was no place like it. It was good to be back again, to slip in this way and survey Matt. Blood old Matt. Virginia would be home, too, once more a rancher's girl among the cares of travel and fashionable schools that an indulgent father had given her.

The warmth vanished in a puzzled frown. Over on the left his ranging eye had caught sight of a thin wisp of smoke on the timbered slope. That was odd. Timber was not valuable to be wasted. Matt never cut that way. That strip was masterfully cut with the highest stumps the axe-proof remnants of a traveled skip. Lee's sharpened glance flicked toward the valley again. Down there he had seen a small bunch of cattle, perhaps fifty or more. That also was unusual. The Circle V cattle always ranged the hills at this time of the year.

Lee wheeled his horse abruptly, retraced his way for a short distance, and started spurring downward.

The slope dropped abruptly, with sharp horns and jutting angles, and talus that slid beneath his horse's feet. Over to the right a black bird yawned. That was the mouth of the old Bonanza mine, long since abandoned, where Matt and his partner had given Matt Blair and his partner their first real start. Over the far borders of other men to stake claims.

That hillside had echoed once to the sound of sweating men, to picks and the sullen boom of blasting powder, and occasionally to the gold that was never found again.

Matt owned it all now, got 20 much for his trouble—it wouldn't bring enough twenty cents an acre—but because it was a part of the past.

The old Bonanza was boiled Lee, the last steep turn of the trail brought him into a small canyon, and suddenly gave a scarcely audible start.

A man was coming toward him, riding close to the fringe of cedar, as if keeping out of view. He was a big loosely built man, with a long mustache and valley shoulders. His stare of recognition carried a swift surprise and then a something that quickly hidden. Then he rode forward with a grin which showed discolored teeth.

"Hello, Lee. You back?"

"Looks like it. Hello Slanty."

The reply was civil, and no more. Lee Hollister did not like Slanty Gates and Slanty knew it. He was shifty and evasive, so oblique in his methods as to be inane. A good weather when he wanted to be, he was too lazy and quarrelsome to hold any job long and was usually shifted for lesser hands on the ranch.

Lee's eyes dwelt on him with an impersonal regard.

"Riding for the Circle V?"

"Not for that outfit." The grin became a sneer. "I'm hirin' other folks to work for me. Want a job?"

"No." The laconic answer ignored Slanty's evident desire to be hired and betrayed not the slightest interest in Slanty's rise in life. Slanty's face took on malevolence.

"I'm lookin' for strays," he explained with self-importance. "Been missin' 'em pretty regular, lately."

"Better not look in the wrong place, Slanty. Other people's brands don't stay on the Circle V."

Black eyes and greenish ones met and measured each other. The grown-ups locked.

"Just as touchy as ever, ain't you, Lee? Well, I'll take you word for this time, I'm long: I've got work to do."

He wheeled with a savage rubs of spurs and was off.

Lee looked after him speculatively. Slanty must have been up to some good no one would not have given him a job so easily. It could be that he didn't want to keep an eye on Matt's pet for the present Lee had no intention to hand. He remembered and rode toward the unseen which held him that fateful year—

Slanty Gates, from a safe distance, turned in the saddle and saw Lee ride down to the Circle V land, slinking through that fringe of cedar as time." He did not wish to be seen. Three years ago Matt had run Slanty off the Circle V for abusing a horse, and Slanty had given it a wide berth ever since.

The ranch house came into clearer view, spewing comfortably on its commanding knoll. Just ahead was the big moment for which Lee had planned, but somehow he hesitated. Lee groaned and swung his horse to the right. Five minutes later the ranch buildings were completely blocked from view and the bushside was threading his way down the slope of a little ravine where a slim finger of the trail ran.

About a third of the way down a broken stood, its huge wonderful grew by many seasons. In a bare stony he eyed it a little old man and just straightening from a stooping posture.

"Woo-oo! Joey! Yip! Yip!"

"Lee Hollister! Hi-yi-yi Lee!"

The whoop from the bend of the ravine was answered by a thin, shrill note; the old man scrambled and slid down. They almost met in front of the gray cabin.

"Ye doggone young scallawag! Joey's voice was quavering with age. "Time ye was back, dang you crazy kid. Where ye been all this time? Couldn't even write a line, like any decent child would, could ye?"

A flashing grin came to Lee's face and for the moment he was young. Joey now was the only person in the world to whom he could repeated instruction of the boys at every fresh appearance startled them.

3. Many woods have ingenious adaptations as plasmas, hooked prickles, "hooked wool" fibres and other devices for the wide dispersal of their seed

4 Sometimes woods persist for the simple reason that they can still keep on re-seeding their land with crop weeds continually, and therefore can pay a little more for pure seed

5. Weeds may seem harder to kill than they really are, because we half-kill them, and then forget them until they have become troublesome again.

6. Many weeds have a tremendously efficient berne-a neighbors negligent in their sales, and the casual farmer suffer with the rest. Co-operation is needed.

CANADIAN CEDAR FOR SHELTERS AND SCHOOLS

In the construction of refugee shelters in Great Britain cedar has been used extensively, according to the timber department of the Canadian National Railways. It has been used in the construction of schools and camps

WHY WEEDS ARE HARD TO KILL

(Science Service News)

Each weed has a life history of its own, and the reason why one is hard to kill may not be at all the chief reason why another persists. Some of the principal reasons, however, are given by Herbert Greb, Division of Botany, Science Service, as follows:

1. They are naturally adapted for life in gardens, fields and the surroundings of man. They might be easy to kill, or would die out themselves, if they happened to start it growth in the dense shade of a wood-land For the same reason the plants of woodland would be easy to kill, or hard to keep alive, in the unnatural environment (for them) of our fields and gardens. Most of our weeds have come from other lands where they have held their own as against man for ages in just such an unnatural environment. Often the crops they grow with are less handy and aggressive than they are, and can only survive and grow in the places cleared for by the farmer, while the weeds only need to be left alone to win out in the race for light, space, water and plant food.

2. An immense quantity of seed is produced by some weeds, especially by annuals, which multiply the annual rate of the soil requiring power of cleaning, even by more plants are allowed to go to seed.

THE CAREFUL DRIVER

An automobile without any brakes is more dangerous than a war-time projectile, in the opinion of C. M. Ackland, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

"The reason for this," Mr. Ackland says "is because once the projectile reaches its destination it is a thing of the past It has either hit or missed, and it is well known that the percentage of hits is relatively small. "The automobile, on the other hand, continues on its perilous way until it reaches the scrap heap. When new it is a marvel of convenience and safety, but unless it is kept in good condition, especially with respect to its brakes, it offers a constant danger menace."

An interesting observation was made by Mr. Ackland, who said: "A high powered car can accelerate from a standing start to 60 miles an hour in 30 seconds, during which it travels 1,320 feet, but the average driver is required to stop it in 220 feet. We talk a lot about the power of our engines, but little about the power of our brains." "The most terrible and cancel driver is he who when any part of the car's mechanism fails to function in an emergency. Defective brakes are the most frequent common cause of traffic accidents. The simple and inexpensive means of keeping them refined and in perfect working order should arrange the serious attention of all. Thereby the ghastly

IT TAKES A MIGHTY MILKMAN TO SUPPLY C. N. DINING CARS

Montreal, Dec. 11—A million passengers and in Canadian National Railways dining cars every year, according to statistics compiled by W. F. Bowles, general manager of the department which looks after the catering on wheels. They require the services of quite a sizeable flock of hens and an ample herd of cows. Every year 25,000 chickens are killed, when any part of the car's mechanism fails to function in an emergency. Defective brakes are the most frequent common cause of traffic accidents. Cornhill Council - - - executive for Councillors to attend these sessions and he was pleased to see Councillors Anderson and Kortman attending several of the sessions.

Reeve Walker said a suggestion was made at the convention which he thought was a good one, namely the imposing of a poll tax upon those men over 21 years of age. By law Councils had the power to do this, but the Council had never taken advantage of it.

They put into touch with several districts where they employ a full time municipal doctor and received valuable information.

An address by Hon Mr. Maynard stressed that Alberta should prepare now for conditions when the war is over. The Minister, however, failed to present any constructive ideas as to what should be done.

A resolution was passed at the convention asking that $1.25 per bush. el be paid for wheat.

Council then adjourned for lunch

Continuing after lunch:—

Mr. R. Bilyeu interviewed Council re his taxes. His crop had been very light for the past few years and together with low prices, made it impossible for him to keep up his consolidation payments. He had had some bags which would be ready in about a month and would pay on his taxes proceeds from those. Council decided to allow Mr. Bilyeu to pick up his consolidation and pay what he can on current taxes if payment is made by December 31st.

Messrs. O. Gran and F. Grammet were employees of the big gravel out. fit interviewed re their wages. Council passed on hearing from Mr. C. Hammond relative to the Cheshire Estate with a view to re-seeding their land with crop weeds continually, and therefore can pay a little more for pure seed

6. Weeds may seem harder to kill than they really are, because we half-kill them, and then forget them until they have become troublesome again.

7. Weed control is sometimes rendered difficult because neighbors neglect to do their share, and the casual farmer suffer with the rest. Co-operation is needed.

Lee straightened slowly. The impact of the blow rocked him. Matt Blair, that big, vital, burly bearded man, his earliest and best friend, and by his own hand!

"I don't get it," he said slowly. "I don't get it at all. Matt wasn't that kind of man."

Joey nodded. Speech for the moment was beyond him.

Lee dropped the reins over the bunkhim's head and left him to stand with head down and reins trailing. They turned and went up the slope to Joey's cabin. Silence spoke.

Inside the cabin were six or eight photographs ranged on a shelf which served as a mantel. One of them was a snapshot of Lee, both of them on horseback. The others were all of one girl, a lovely, delicately modeled brunette, Virginia Blair, Matt's protege, loved, for whom nothing was too good nor any sacrifice too great.

"Was she home?" Lee asked abruptly.

Joey shook his head.

"She was on her way. And that's what sent him."

Joey's voice betrayed him, again. Never had Lee seen the old man so shaken.

"Tell me how it happened."

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

Some people have complained a bout the rust of relief given to farmers in the drought areas.

Recently I had an opportunity of investigating this matter. At different points which had suffered from successive years of poor crops I asked a number of men and women how they had survived. They replied, "We got relief and we certainly would not have survived had not been for Government relief."

One Priley evening I visited a country dance. Some 200 boys and girls and their elders were there. By arrangement I met the official in charge of relief. "What 'yardsticks' do you use in giving relief," I asked. "You are the people who have to say who are the 'particulars' who use. Some of these will join the army, and others will produce foodstuffs, and all are in good physical and mental condition to do valuable and needed work for Canada during this war emergency."

My own conclusion is that the administration of relief has been well done; that the money has been a splendid investment which will return handsome dividends to Canada in fine healthy boys and girls—in boys

ADVENTURES IN KITCHEN-LAND

Bread must not be the necessary but a bit prosaic "staff of life"—it can be an adventure in food. Today's woman does not, like her grandmother, devote a day or two a week to the art of breadmaking, but she is eager and sufficiently hospitable-minded to welcome choice recipes for quick breads which will delight friends and family.

For afternoon tea, for the school lunch, for Sunday night supper or refreshments for that evening bridge game there are a variety of delicious breads which add immeasurably to the basic "sandwich diet". Not only do they give variety—they are nutritious—and require only the simplest of utensils. The small amount of time to make the Orange Honey bread for the afternoon will be amply repaid by the satisfaction of those who eat it.

Orange Honey Bread

2 tablespoons shortening
1 cup honey
1 well-beaten egg
2 cups sifted graham or pastry flour
2½ cups flour, sifted before measuring 2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
¾ cup orange juice
½ cup chopped nuts
Cream shortening and honey together well. Add egg and grated orange rind. Sift flour, baking powder, soda and salt together. Add the dry ingredients to the creamed fat and honey mixture, alternately with the orange juice. Add the nut meat. Bake in a greased 9-inch loaf pan. Bake at 325 degrees F. for 70 minutes. The nuts may be omitted. (Makes 1 loaf)

When cold, cut in thin slices. Spread with butter. Serve with cream cheese, which has been blended with a little orange juice, for open-face sandwiches. Incidentally these sandwiches are very welcome additions to the children's lunch-box and a bit of this bread is a swell thing to have on hand for those times when if you or the young folk are expecting company.

PEOPLE ACT DIFFERENTLY AT DIFFERENT STREET CORNERS

Apparently people act differently at different street corners. Edmonton Boy Scouts on traffic clean-up duty for the City Engineers were interviewed by an Edmonton Journal reporter regarding the actions of pedestrians and car drivers during a three hours' count." At Jasper and 102 Street, however, the Scouts report that "We saw few women jaywalkers almost get run over a little while ago. We saw two cars hit the curb in making a right hand turn, and we saw several cars make a left turn by first driving over to the right curb, instead of making it from the car tracks."

IT WAS AIRMAIL, AT THAT

Montreal, Que. Dec. 11—Lightweight stationery, becoming more and more popular as Canadian business houses speed up by sending their letters across the country in Transcanada Air Lines planes, is nothing new, according to a paper manufacturer. Several centuries ago, when carrier pigeons were important, messages were written on lightweight paper. During the siege of Paris in 1870, when messages were floated down the Seine in small tubes, this paper was used. There was a restriction on cargo weights when balloons began carrying mails and letter-flat stationery had its place then, too.

NEW SEASON'S CHEVY A REVELATION

Longer, lower and roomier than ever, the 1940 Chevrolet comes before the public with a long list of advances in style and engineering, designed to consolidate Chevrolet's dominant position in the low-price field.

Luxuries from the costly-car class are combined in both Master and Special DeLuxe Series, with all the year's major automotive innovations. Handling the new features are complete rustproof inside and out, all-silent transmission, silkgater-jaw hood smoother and more balanced "ride", improved safety glass, improved steering-column gear-control with vacuum power shift, and the revolutionary Sealed Beam headlamps.

Incorporating these and other improvements with the time-tried Chevrolet dependability and economy, the new models of both Series are today officially announced by General Motors of Canada, and simultaneously make their debut in public dealers showrooms across the Dominion.

The new new Chevrolet body styling, from pleasing new grille to twin tail-lamps, expresses fleetness and low-slung beauty. Longer, wider and more massive bonders blend into a Unified body whose turret top is less deeply cut than heretofore, and whose door pillars slope inward gracefully. Nor is the impression of sweep and compactness purely illusionary, for roadability has been actually improved in all models without sacrificing road clearance.

Contributing to the increased stability and smoothness at all speeds are the lengthing of the wheelbase to 113 inches throughout the line, the balancing more closely of front and rear suspensions, and the introduction of tension-type rear shackles which make the springs conform automatically to the load and road condition. Again in 1940, the Special DeLuxe offers knee action, while the Master features the noted pulsum ride as successfully introduced by Chevrolet in 1939.

Completely silent gear-operation is achieved in all speeds, including low and reverse, by means of the 1940 all silent synro-mesh transmission. The steering column gear-shift with vacuum power is offered exclusively by Chevrolet in the low-price field. It reduces muscular effort in gear-changing to a minimum.

Servicing is greatly simplified by the introduction of the latest type silgator-jaw hood which opens from the front, and is secured by two latches—one which is operated from the instrument panel, and the other at the front of the car which can be operated only when the first catch has been released by the driver. When opened, this style of hood gives greatly increased accessibility to the engine compartment.

Further facilitating the servicing of the car is the locating on the right side of the engine block of all intake manifolding opening and batterydrive lator being of new design, and mounted the gear for the first time under the hood. Also at the right side of the car is the gasoline tank filler-neck at the rear.

The Chevrolet six-cylinder valve-in-head engine has been re-located 1 9-16 inches farther aland on the frame, on a five-point cushion-balance mount-ing. Other changes, for quieter and more trouble free operation, have been made in the valve mechanism and tappet design Oil pump capacity also has been increased. Smoothly the clutch engagement is insured by means of self-aligning steel cushions between the clutch disc facings.

Safety features on the new cars include the Sealed Beam headlamps which are reported to revolutionize night driving, and in which the lens reflector and lens form one integral unit plugging into the headlamp frame; a new safety plate glass made with a recently developed flexible plastic middle layer; a red light on the instrument panel which flashes a warning at speeds of 50 miles an hour and upward; and "short-pedal steering" on all models.

Roominess and comfort is increased in all models. The front seat is three inches wider, with 2¼ inches more room between the rear seat is one inch wider and half an inch higher from the floor than a 1 7-16 inches more headroom. Upholstery options are taupe cloth and taupe mesh-ribbed fabric in the Master Series, and grey or taupe checked cloth and taupe mesh fabric in the Special DeLux Additional luxuries are sun-shades, twin windshield wipers, dual horns, dual tail and stop lamps, separate rear license lamp and dome light.

The 1940 Chevrolet is offered in the following body models; Master Series—two passenger business coupe, four-passenger coupe, sport sedan with trunk, and town sedan (formerly known as the coach with trunk); Special DeLuxe Series—two passenger business coupe, four-passenger coupe, sport sedan with trunk, town sedan, and cabriolet.

BANK OF MONTREAL REPORTS RECORD ASSETS AS RESULT OF BUSINESS EXPANSION AND PUBLIC FINANCING

Resources increased to $1,525,550,927, a New High Mark in Canadian Banking—Liquid Assets of $738,080,987 Represent 70.39 per cent of Liabilities to the Public—Loans to Industry and Business Increased by $39,961,864 and Holdings of Government and Other Bonds by $76,434,425—Profits Somewhat Higher.

Reflecting the continued expansion of industrial operations, greater agricultural and mineral production, enlarged business activities, and participation in government financing, the 122nd annual statement of the Bank of Montreal for the year ending October 31 shows a substantial increase in assets and a moderate increase in earnings. Total assets of $1,525,550,927, an increase of $151,-962,539, have in fact reached the highest level in the bank's history and represent a new high mark in Canadian banking. Profits of $3,-046 showed an increase of $64,056 after the payment of government taxing of $1,196,415—which were higher by $48,706 and were the equivalent of 4.54 per cent on the capital, rest and undivided profits, which compares with 4.46 per cent in the preceding year; the increase in relation to total earnings is about 2 per cent.

The growth in the bank's assets is more than accounted for by an increase in deposits payable on demand and after notice of $151,763,105 to a total of $914,800,822. The changes in the notes in circulation, bills payable, and other items in the liabilities to the public are relatively small.

As against the expansion in deposits there is an increase of $48,795,-624 in the banks cash assets to $291,-245,716 and of $122,305,748 in liquid assets to $742,802,987, while current loans in Canada at $397,361,739 are larger by $39,961,864. Apart from substantial holdings in cash at $94,-841,696, and money on deposit in other banks at $77,367,497, holdings of government and other bonds and debentures, of which "the greater portion consists of gilt-edge securities which mature at early dates," are up by $76,434,425 to a total of $517,171,286. This, together with the increases in deposits, may be taken in part as reflecting the bank's participation in the recent $300,000,000 Federal Government loan taken up by the Canadian banks generally. The expansion of current loans is a highly satisfactory indication of the part the bank has played in expanding industrial and general business activities. The effect of greater business activity has also been to increase the bank's deposits from the public.

Of the bank's total assets, shown at over $1,500,000,000, the quickly available resources of $743,000,987 are equal to 70.39 per cent of all liabilities to the public. This compares with 77.80 per cent in the preceding year.

The net result of the year's operations after the payment of the usual dividends to shareholders and appropriation of $500,000 for bank premises, was to leave $62,046 to be added to the balance of profit and loss; this was considerably more than the previous year. The total balance in this account now stands at $2,-300,700.

—Said One Santa to Another—

YOU know we just have to be doubly active this year. What with Old Mars out on the war path again, we just have to keep working day and night to spread good cheer throughout the lands."

"Yes, and Old Man Mars is a pretty active fellow too, always has been, but we can't let him have all the world's stage. We have to show the people of this world that giving is as important as taking."

"To us it is MORE important. Why, for more years than I can remember we have been spreading good cheer throughout the lands. And we have no thought of quieting."

"No, we certainly cannot. We must prove to the people of this old earth that love and generosity are more important qualities than hate and greed."

"Why, certainly, I can't imagine what the people in this old world would be like if we did not keep at our work. It's tough going sometimes though. What with depressions and wars and the general perversity of people, it's almost enough to make me discouraged."

"Discouraged? Nonsense! We dare not become discouraged. You know, MILLIONS of people are depending on us to bring them happiness."

"Well not exactly discouraged, I could not become discouraged when I have to bring joy to so many little children. Their happiness dispels discouragement."

"Yes, and I know how you feel. You would like people to carry the spirit of good will into more than one day. It's funny, too, how they so gladly accept it for one day, then so quickly forget."

"But ah! the little children don't forget. They remember Old Santa for days and days after we make our annual visit. Perhaps if we keep on working, working, to prove to the people that generosity is better than greed, that it is prolific of good; that it build up and not tear down; we might get the people to believe as little children. Don't you think so?"

"Well, it has been written: "And a Little Child Shall Lead Them."

Chapter II

SUNSPEKS

Lee McAlister, returning from a trip abroad to the Circle V ranch, owned by Matt Blair, who for twenty years had been like a father to Lee, decided to surprise the family. He sends them no word of his coming and rides over the hills to the ranch on horseback. When he finally sees the wide ranchland before him, he is astonished at the unusual aspect of the place. He is troubled, too, when he notice Rusty Gunn on Matt's land. Then Joey—old prospector befriended by Matt—tells him Matt is dead by his own hand.

Joey told. Hard times had hit Matt hard; and one disaster after another had piled on shoulders already burdened. Cattle had slumped over a cliff, grazing privileges which he had rented for years from old Dan Lee Caballos had been refused by a new owner; there were notes in bank and the bank had unexpectedly presented for payment; rumors also of dubious speculations.

"He must have been figgerin' on some deal that didn't pan out," said Joey. "His hatred at somebody or me, come down here one night for a pipe with me—ye know how he did. Three days later he was dead,with a letter from the Assay Office tellin' him that some ore samples he'd sent 'em didn't assay high enough to be worth what it would cost to get it out."

"Is that the old Bonanza?"

"No, they ain't nothin' there but rare-ins We found a place down in one of the old claims where they'd been some fresh diggin'."

"If he Did anybody hear the shot?"

"No. He was all alone. Looks like he'd fixed it up that way. He'd let the boys off to a barbecue. It was Long that found him, just about sundup, sagged down in his chair like I told ye, with his gun on the floor, where it had slipped out of his fingers."

"I suppose," said Lee sharply, that the whole outfit had peered the gun over before anybody thought of fingerprints?"

"I dessay they did handle it, but they didn't see any 'prints' to finger it at that way. It was Matt's own gun, and they was powder marks on him where it had been fired them."

Silence fell heavily between them. Lee broke it presently.

"Is Virginia up at the house?"

"No she only stayed for a little while She said the place was as full of memories she couldn't stand it. Her aunt here' couldn' her so some busy, east and live with them, and so she went. They's a manager here now. Lawyer chap name o Thayer is kinda rum—don' it it ain't the old Circle V any more They's nobody left of the old crowd but Curly and Darrel I was lookin' about some hand, but Curly told me positidy he'd hated somebody was goin' to buy it and turn it into one of these here gentleman's fancy ranches.

On the edge of Joey's bank Lee sat very still.

"Ye don't s'pose Honey would let anybody jump my claim, do ye," Lee?"

"No," said Lee flatly. "This is your claim as long as you want to keep it. I don't want to be disturbed."

As far back as his memory of the Circle V went that ravine had been Joey's. N cattle were ever driven there, no timber was cut save for fence. Joey saw Nearly as small a thing as a poplar he had left Matt Blair in the middle of the desert on a badly waterhole with nothing to eat but cactus, a horse that had collapsed with a water supply that drop trickled into the sand as he reached for it. It was a joke. It was a near afternoon that Lee Kirby a weather beaten little desert rat who never knew what sorrow was, had caught sight of something far ahead of him, crawling erratically on all fours, rising and falling, crawling again, without aim or direction. They were long miles from the nearest water Lee, and Matt was there Joey's aim and unconscious part of the way, but somehow, crawling, rolling, falling, dragging with grudging help from a small reddish horse the wiry little prospector had staggered through with him to water and safety. And from day what was Matt Blair's was Joey's.

And so, drifting one time to the Valley of the Sun, Joey had stayed, lonesome old prospector that he was, he had at once begun pottering around for gold. Joey had located a fairly promising strash in the ravine.

"It's yours," said Matt Blair "You stake your claim anywhere around here than you want."

So Joey had staked his claim, carefully and conscientiously, giving Matt a painstaking diagram of its limits, but the whole ravine had been Joey's from that day.

Lee turned back to Joey abruptly, "Nobody's going to jump your claim, Joe if anybody tries it, you let me know and I'll take him apart. And the Circle V land is going to be sold—not yet. I'm going east to bring Virginia back."

"Now, Lee, you be careful!" Joey sat up suddenly and fixed a worried eye on him.

A brief grin twitched the corner of Lee's mouth. Both he and Joey remembered the blazing temper of the wolf Matt had brought to the Circle V years before. The temper was still there, but, as Joey said, it knew who was boss.

He stood looking toward the head of the ravine where the trail was still greyly visible running up and out. It would be nearly dark in that great grassy bowl, with the sun dropping like a plummet behind the hills.

A smoke curled in the cabin, home, light wavered and grew steady, a stove lid rattled Joey's voice came out to him.

"Ye goin' up to the house, Lee?"

"No." The answer was stripped. "I was going to look things over, but they will have to keep. You needn't tell anybody I'm here. I'll turn up again before long."

"Mind! Don't get hurt any where else, Lee Hollister. Now I'll have supper ready in two shakes."

Lee looked back at him.

"This Lawler business." he said slowly, "I don't get it. Matt picked him with good men like Curly and Darrel already on the place? Is it a wonder Matt's dead? Joey Harvey?"

"Neither of 'em," said Joey. "Honey! Not all alone?"

"It's you." Joey sounded agonized. "That's the way Matt fixed it in his will I guess Matt kinda counted on the Judge he'd have you here to help her anyway, and you seemed to help her some things, but now that she's back west, it don't seem to work out that way."

Joey's voice trailed off on a discouraged note; but echoed the quirky defiance in the cheerful old drawl.

"I'll see, it was an old will, Matt was simple to make a new one but he never got around to it."

Joey smoothed a sigh and went back to his pans. Lee stayed for a moment longer in the doorway, looking out at the thickening dusk with thoughtful narrow eyes. Yes it was pretty clear the shrewd old Judge was not advising Virginia. Maybe he'd better drop in and see the Judge himself.

He did full justice to Joey's meal. An hour later he was crunch and crashed, the dishes were washed, and Lee saddled the horse he'd ridden in. Then he climbed into the saddle and rode away. His movements were light and quiet, his voice low. Voices carried on these still nights.

"By the way, Joey, what's Rusty Gunn up to here?"

"Rusty? Where'd ye see him?" Joey peered back suspiciously.

"Just outside the Valley Pass. First time I've seen him on Circle V land since Matt caught him stiff and sent him to stay off. He offered me a job and said he was looking for riders. I persuaded him that he wouldn't find any here, and he sidled off."

"Well, I'll be darned!" Joey's voice was dumbfounded. "Rusty Gunn! Now what's he up to? Mr. Hollister, you be careful, Lee. Rusty Gunn's a bad hombre. He'd kill ye as soon as look at ye."

"Now, Joey, you be careful!" Lee's voice was quiet and reassuring. "Don't worry about me. I'll be back in a few days."

He rode away, and Joey stood looking after him, his face troubled. Then he went back into the cabin, and sat down by his own bunk

KETCHAMOOT

Once again the time has rolled around to wish the editor and staff and all readers of the Mercury a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year from all the Ketchamoot folk.

Miss Hincks and pupils are busy preparing a Xmas concert to be held Thursday, December 21. With an assembly room and better accommodation, it is being looked forward to with pleasure by the residents of the community.

Mrs. F. A. Owen returned to her home in Edmonton on Monday after visiting a few days with friends and relatives in our district.

Messrs. Cal Mitchell and Tom Sutton returned home one day last week after lasting several weeks. Sam Mitchell and Lyle Coombes stepped off at Vernon, B.C.

Mr. Harold Schultz spent a few days with his uncle, O. H. Schultz, north of town.

Mr. and Mrs. McLennen of Ryley were Sunday afternoon guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charley Sears.

Included among Edmonton visitors last week were, Misses H. Annabo and Margaret Mitchel, Mr. and Mrs. Will Ingram, James Ingram, Mrs. Davison and family, and Harold Coombes.

Mr. and Mrs. H. McGinitie entertained the social credit group at their home Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Sears, sons Albert and Stanley, visited at the Schultz home Sunday evening.

We have noticed some new improvements at Ketchamoot. Mr. Dick Turney is building a fine barn. John Brown an addition on his house, and a new cow barn is going up on the Sears' farm.

The many friends of the Stine family were sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. Stine. Most of all the old time friends attended the funeral on Sunday. We extend our sincere sympathy to the family.

Mrs. Roy Lee entertained the social hour club at her home Thursday afternoon of last week. A pleasant afternoon was reported.

Miss Hazel Sears, James Ingram, Harold Schultz and Albert Sears attended the entertainment at the Spillsted school on Friday evening. They reported the play splendid.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry McGinitie, Mr. and Mrs. Charley Sears marketed hogs and poultry in the city on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Barnes and sons and Mrs. Owen were guests of the Coombes family Sunday evening.

Don't forget the Christmas services at the schoolhouse Sunday 11:00 a.m. After the Christmas Sunday service, church time will be in the afternoon.

Mr. G. W. Sears and Stanley took wheat to Camrose Tuesday in exchange for flour.

A pleasant afternoon was spent at the Appleby home on Wednesday, December 6th when Mrs. Appleby entertained the annual meeting of the Ketchamoot Ladies' Aid. A large crowd of members and visitors were present. Being the last meeting before Christmas, several donations were made: Old People's Mission in Edmonton; Missionary Society in Tofield; and tanns on the Manse. Nomination of officers was in order, the previous ones being re-elected. Mrs. C. A. Ingram, assistant.

LAKESSHORE

Mrs. W. P. Ryey left on Tuesday morning to spend the next few weeks with her daughter, Mrs. Carings of Elk, Washington. Excepts in the States she will stop over at Innisfail to visit Mrs. Bill McIntyre.

Mrs. Jack Johnston did some important "shopping" when she spent a couple of days in Edmonton last week. Besides the usual parcels, she brought home a brown-eyed two year old boy, the latest "family gift" we've heard of this Christmas season.

May we make a suggestion to the book club members? Next Wednesday, December 27, is the last day this year for exchanging books. Why not mark on one of your new calendars, Jan. 10th, 24th; Feb. 7th-21st; and so on with a "B" or whatever mark you wish, to remind you just when the book goes on to the next person. Then there will be no confusing delay as spring work begins to take our time and attention.

The teacher and children are busy preparing for the concert on Thursday evening.

To the editor and our readers—a Christmas wish in the words o Henry Twoody. "A Christmas that hallows the home and consecrates self and pocket book to the service of others; that through its great good tidings brings strength to bear our burdens, balm to soothe our sorrow, inspiration to glorify our labor and quiet for our sometimes harassed souls—may this Christmas be yours.

And considering the slippery condition of back steps, yards, and roads, we'll also wish you most sincerely,—easy, happy landings.

THE LITTLE PRINCESS" FOR NEXT TUESDAY

As a special treat for Boxing Day theatre patrons, Sharp's Shows will present at the Variety on Tuesday night next "The Little Princess". RED CROSS NOTES

What with Christmas claiming much of the attention, Red Cross activities have showed up a little. After Christmas the organization will no doubt get down to real systematic effort.

******

Of course work has been proceeding even amid be Christmas activities and there really is no time to be lost.

******

Announcement having been made that some Canadian troops are in England and that is due course they will proceed to France, Red Cross activities at home becomes imperative.

******

Hats off to the young people of Hastings Lake district. They have contributed no less than $23.70 to the local and district Red Cross branch. This amount was the profit of a play, presented at the school and at Spilsted.

******

And so we learn, it was a good play well presented too. So they are to be doubly congratulated. For staging a successful production and for remembering such a worthy cause as the Red Cross.

the devotional and business sessions, refreshments were served and a social hour spent.

Mrs. Appleby Pres.; Mrs. Whitlam, vice-president; Mrs. Sears, sec.-treas.

McKENZIE

A Happy and Prosperous New Year to the Editor, the Mercury staff, and the readers.

Christmas and the holidays are past and I think most of us had a most enjoyable Christmas with good weather and good roads all through the holidays.

The club met at Mrs T. A. Jones' on Wednesday and was treated to a swell Turkey dinner. All the members enjoyed the grand meal.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Roberge spent New Years with the Will Roberge's.

Some have been out to and enjoyed a big dinner or supper every day last week.

Mrs. Moen sr. and Margaret and children had New Year's dinner at Mrs. Moen's home.

The Berlids and Johnsruds and Pearsen families had dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson on Wednesday, the 27th.

Mr. and Mrs. Lagstad and several of the neighbors enjoyed a social evening of the 27th, and a very enjoyable evening was spent. The young folks had a very good time with games and a sing song, and we all enjoyed the dainty and elaborate lunch we had.

Mr. and Mrs. Engleshan had Xmas dinner with the Roberge family.

Eric Anderson was on the sick list for a week or so but is up and around again now.

The Walker girls had some of their girl friends over for the evening on Saturday. They all report a good time, chatting part of the time and playing games at the house.

Mrs. Monro Trent is visiting her mother at the coast.

LINDBROOK

A Bright, Happy and Prosperous New Year to all from all at Lindbrook.

The Xmas School concert and Dance party went off very well this year, in fact some say that it was the best ever, if so, it must have been good, for there have been some dandy ones shown there in previous years. Anyway it was a joyous affair and enjoyed by all present, and the teachers and pupils are to be congratulated on their performances.

The Wenisko school also held a very nice concert and tree on Thursday before Xmas. Those present voted it a very successful affair.

Mr. Robt Hammersley spent the Xmas holidays with friends in Montreal.

Miss Irene Bailey is home from the Normal school, Edmonton, for the holidays.

Mr. J. Bailey is still on the sick list but coming along fine, soon "we'll be seeing you," we hope.

PHYSICAL TRAINING CLUB STAGE SUCCESSFUL NEW YEAR DANCE

The Tofield Physical Training Club sponsored a very successful dance on New Years night at the Variety Theatre. There was an excellent crowd present and all seemed to be enjoying the dance.

Immediately prior to the dance the Club staged a demonstration of P.T. work that was both entertaining and instructive. We understand that financially the event was also a success.

What Did A.B.C. See BEHIND THE BOG

Our slogan this season:
Give me the game to see a John.
And pass it on to either Bob.

In electing this Curling Season, these suggestions are not for you—but you may know some other member whose attention should be drawn to them.

Always it is fun for your game. The way in your only chance for PURE LUCITY.

All rubbis should be collected to your opponent B & Sweeping. While you sniff and spit freely again you Shady will.

Sweeping should be carefully and gracefully across the ice, just as the stone is coming to a stop. Sweeping should cease, this force is called the "Double Cross" and helps the director's eye and the Skip's temper. This is the reason that a chicken crosses the road.

If the Skip misses a shot the other three players should collect up the ice and hold a Scotsish grouch. This helps the Skip's next shot.

If the third man is away, the Skip should never move up his men. This might give them the crushed head. Pick out the strongest player in the waiting room. The outcomes will NEVER notice.

As soon as the lead or second man delivers his stone he should hurry back to the tee and take up his position just behind the sweeping zone. He may be more valuable there than in his proper position, as his foot may stop a stone which would otherwise slide out. Remember if the players line [illegible] well on the ice, it encourages the spectators to go home to bed.

YELL delightedly if your opponent misses a shot. This goes to prove that Darwin was right.

Always remember that a game lost is the fault of the other players, it is always best to be [illegible] and [illegible] shot.

Always tell True to [illegible] shot the Skip gives. Some players take their own shots, but this is not advisable as the spectators would acquit the Skip.

It on time—Better late than never —But better never late. (Big Ben)

Ode to the New Prez:
I don't know how he is on shots.
I never heard him say,
But he's got a smile that fits his face
And he wears it every day.
If rocks go wrong, he won't complain,
Just try to get the joke.
He's always finding little ways
Of kidding other folk.

Dire Law is sporting a new pair of [illegible] moulded, brightly polished, 41 lb. of Abu Grays. Ras Corrie is throwing a new pair of Campburn Rocks, 39 lb., while Ray Costin is throwing a brand new pair of Crawfordjohns Reversals. BUT if your rocks be new, smooth, sharp, or otherwise, good judgement is essential.

More next week—We aim to please.

Chapter III

SYNOPSIS

Lee Hollister, returning from a trip abroad to the Circle V ranch, owned by Matt Burr, who for twenty years had been like a father to Lee, decides to surprise the family and arrives there in secret. His reception is cool and reticent. When he finally sees Matt he understands before him, he is the victim of the cruelest aspect of the game. He is troubled, too, when he meets Mary Lou, Matt's fiancé. Mary Lou, a prospector befriended by Matt, tells Tom Matt is dead by his own hand Don says the ranch is going to ruin under Lawler, manager appointed by Virginia. Matt's daughter who is living in New York with her aunt and uncle. Lee decides to go to

All day long she had been rushing from one thing to another rushing, swimming, horseback riding, with a crowd at the beach and then her dress and left it in a heap on the floor and for the first time realized with a long sigh of relief.

What was the sense of tearing around all day, meeting a lot of people you only half liked, having a minute to yourself, being contemptuously stared sociably at by

Although no one would have guessed it, she was tired. She was tired of the gay days, when everything was fun and futile and there was a sickening emptiness when one part of her life had been.

On the table beside her bed lay a little pile of papers. There was a scrawled report from Lawler, the new manager there were business columns of figures which represented Matt Burr's confused affairs; there was a letter urgently advising her to sell before the depreciation came too evident. Beside them was an offer, the widow of a rich man to lavish money on a show ranch in the place where he had once been poor.

There was a tap at the door. She said "Come" and Anna appeared, her visibly flustered.

"There's a gentleman downstairs, Miss Virginia—"

"No! I said I wouldn't see anybody."

"He—Miss Virginia, but—" Anna breathed and looked worried. Callers at the Archer home politely accepted the denial delivered at the door, but this was in spite of the fact that she had given no foot instead of in the elegant model breakfast, and wore a good but undeniably ready-made suit of clothes, had somehow an air of looking if not prosperous, at least who would be complied with.

"He said he hoped you would be home pretty soon because he had come a long way to see you. He said you were Lee Hollister."

"Lee!" Virginia sat up suddenly. "Why didn't you tell me before? Tell him—no, help me, Anna, I'm in a frightful hurry."

Downstairs Lee looked critically around the room into which the maid had reluctantly shown him. Everything spoke eloquently of well-to-do and expensive idleness. Not at home! He was certain she was and meant to stay until he saw her. He reassured himself at a window seat on the semi-circular drive.

"Making sure that I don't run away?"

He swung about quickly. "I wasn't taking any chances," he drawled.

Outlined against the dull blue hangings he saw a slim and lovely figure, a girl with hair of burnished copper, dark-lashed eyes of clearest grey and a vivid mouth.

She met him with both hands outstretched, impulsively.

"I had just come in," she explained confidentially, "and told Anna that I wouldn't see anybody." Her mouth drooped suddenly. "Oh, Lee, I so you right along."

"No, thanks, Aunt Adele. Just tell him I'm sorry, Anna, but I can't come at all. I'll write him and explain."

"Virginia, what can you be thinking of!"

Virginia's hands clenched at her sides. The tears still shone on her lashes. "I'm going write tomorrow. You get to. Please don't nail me to talk about it.

The days and nights on a transcontinental train were monotonous, but they gave Virginia time for thought. Her first anger at Lee dwindled and receded as a clear little head returns to its books after a trouble. She was coming back, not to obey Lee Hollister's high-handed commands, but to show him that he was wrong. After that she would do as she pleased with her own property.

At Saunders, Lawler was there to meet her, so was Curly, sunburned and grinning, waiting to take her clothes and help to pack her hand-baggage onto the old car that had been good enough for Matt while Virginia was away.

Curly and Lawler, a lank, bald-headed man with pale eyes and a straggling mustache, proffer a pleasant of any moment. They were sitting over a particularly succulent bit of roast.

"Miss Virginia!" he jerked. "I hope the boys have been looking after you. I'll fix up this rand."

"I haven't sold yet," she replied pleasantly.

"Oh I thought still was goin' to," a glint seemed to have come over Lawler's pale eyes.

"Not that I know of," she smiled sweetly. "Curly, I'm afraid I'll have to ask you to help me with my things. I'm going up before them; they dirtied nothing for months, and since he's shadow them around again. Through a narrow defile to a meadow, up to the Valley of the Sun Up there was an old cabin that would do for the time being excitedly on rheumatic foot, a scrawny man.

"I knowed you'd come back, I knowed it! There's a lot of things that I've been that bowed for some had dropped suddenly against the wall. "Where's the rest of your things?"

"Thanks, Lawler, You may leave the bags here. I will look after them."

She left him glowering and disconsolate, while she greeted Lingo. Lingo followed the manager with ridiculous glee.

Twenty fine to have the boss back, ain't it?" he asked slyly.

The afternoon had been long to Virginia. She had accomplished nothing herself to unaccustomed to idleness. In the morning there had been an interminable hour of a over dreary details and bewildering figures with Lawler. The manager was not making enough to cover operating expenses and the interest on a burden of debt.

This was the story again, leaving Virginia nervously, irresolutely dispirited, and glad to see Lawler leave. She called back to Lingo that she was going to see Joy, and walked slowly toward the home corral.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strang, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

"When had men ryeshine, the good news associate, else they will fall, one by one, an associate sacrifice in a contemptible struggle."

So with uncanny vision prophesied Robert Burns English Statesman Edmund Burke 183 years ago; and Napoleon Bonaparte, Czechoslovaks, Poland, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, and have fallen, one by one, sacrifices to great oppressors. And now another powerful Dictator Stalin cruelly and relentlessly is attacking peaceful, free and gallant little Finland and as I write persecutes sympathy— only a few protest voices are being given Finland help.

Thus was when the great democratic nations of the world would have welcomed together against the combination of bad men, and would have defended promptly a little fair law-democracy against unwarranted and unprovoked aggression. That was, when the principles and blood of the rights of the peoples of the democratic countries would have boiled over with indignation, and immediate action would have been demanded of their Governments.

But times seem to have changed, and now it is the unscrupulous banner of the great aggressor which is red.

Control of Lice and Mites in The Farm Flock

(Experimental Farms News)

Lice and mites are found to some extent in most farm flocks. As their presence has a direct effect upon the vigor and general condition of the flock, egg production is often seriously affected. Birds suffering from a heavy infestation of lice or mites become run down in condition and may die as a direct result of the irritation or fail many prey to disease.

There are numerous powders dusts and dips which will kill lice but of these, the most individual handling of birds which requires considerable time and labor appropriately in large flocks.

During recent years nicotine sulphate has come into general use and has proved to be the quickest, easiest and most satisfactory remedy for the control of poultry lice This is a liquid which is mixed with a solution from the front of the poultry house, without disturbing the birds at from the birds causes a release of fumes from the nicotine sulphate which penetrate the feathers and kill the lice. This treatment is repeated about ten days later to kill any lice that have hatched after the first treatment. Other treatments may be given as necessary.

The red mite, which is actually grey in colour when not gorging filled with blood, is a tiny blood sucking pest, causing a loss to poultry keepers. Unlike lice, it lives in cracks and crevices, nests, straw, etc. and cannot be killed by ordinary treatments which are effective for lice. Mites usually leave the birds at night and after gorging with blood, return to their hiding places. They breed very rapidly during warm weather. A heavy infestation will soon cause the flock to become thin and unthrifty, resulting in greatly reduced production in laying birds.

As mites thrive best in dark, dirty places, the first step in their control is to remedy these conditions. The house should first be cleaned by other quarters. All droppings, litter, etc., should be removed, floors, perches, dropping boards and nests scraped and cleaned, and all litter should be removed and burned. The interior of the house should then be thoroughly sprayed or swabbed with a strong disinfectant solution, making certain that it penetrates into every crack. This treatment should be repeated in a few days to destroy mites which hatch after the first application.

After the house has been cleaned it is advisable to periodically flood cracks in the floors, dropping boards and nest boards during warm weather with coal oil; a mixture of coal oil and kerosene is also used. An effective sulphate, to keep the mites in check.

THE FORTUNATE FORTIES?—

A RATHER SIGNIFICANT phrase came over the radio on January 1st. The announcer of a program, the sponsor of which we have unfortunately forgotten, took the opportunity of the day to wish every listener a Happy New Year. He went on to say that decades are sometimes given names and as an instance cited the "Gay Nineties." He did not mention any more, except to say that the coming decade might come to be named the "fortunate forties." It would not require a very active imagination, taking the lead from the "gay nineties" to give names to the several of the decades which we have passed through. One could say of the decade between 1900 and 1910 that it was an immigration period. During those ten years, perhaps more than any other given time, peoples of the old world particularly young people, flocked to the new. All the way from the Cape of Good Hope to the Straits of Hudsons' Bay, people of every conceivable European nationality landed, buoyed up with hope and determination. There was investment westward. There was unbounded optimism and there have been plenty of new comers to the shores of the new world since, but that decade, we believe, saw the greatest movement westward.

The next decade was, of course, one in which a number of tragedies occurred. First there was the sinking, during her maiden voyage in 1911, of the liner "Titanic. Then came the Great War in 1914 with its subsequent multitude of problems. This decade certainly could be appropriately named, "the unfortunate tens." Carrying on, the twenties could in turn be named the "prosperous twenties." It is true there was a horrible let down at the end of it but for some years at least, the magnitude of business expansion seemed only to be bounded by the imagination of business promoters.

The thirties, through which we have just passed, could rightfully be named the "dismal thirties." With a speed of dropping and a distance of depth that left prophets and readers all over the world flabergasted, commodity prices fell unbelievably. And to make it a really dismal decade, 1939 saw a renewing of hostilities that ceased in 1918. And so, having looked back in retrospect, should we look forward and try to pierce the veil that oncoming time always holds before her face.

There is every possibility that the term "fortunate forties" was coined as much for its pleasant and symphonic sound as anything else. Yet there are real possibilities that it may prove to be more than a catch phrase. No single year or group of years are perfect, there are always disasters, man made and those caused by nature, that spoil the tranquility of any year or group of years. But if any particular period were to be singled out as being a little more tranquil then any other, it is the period commonly called the Victorian era. This was an era that followed fairly close upon a succession of wars in Europe, and the predominant thought during that period was that European wars were outmoded. The generations that lived through the succession of European wars and those coming immediately after them were conditioned as a means of settlement, war was a failure. Consequently there grew up in the minds of the people of Britain at least, that European wars between the great powers were simply out-dated—they did not have them anymore. An excellent example of this line of thinking was made plain in the picture "Cavalcade" which had such a wonderful run a year or so ago. Those who saw it will remember with what incredulity the British people accepted in 1914, the news that war was probable. They just couldn't believe it. Thinking in terms of trade and commerce, it did not seem possible that any group of men would deliberately wreck the trade and commerce machine by war. That it was done and has been done again, is now common knowledge. It could also be said in passing that twenty years failed to erase the damage done to trade and commerce during the first great war. So it would appear in spite of all the advances of science, speed of travel and communication, the world, certainly Europe and Asia, is back to Napoleonic days. Days when, if right is to exist it must be mightier than wrong. Days when the weight of the sword determines the balance of power.

And the peoples of Europe having passed through this period, will they, as the peoples of Europe have done before, come to the conclusion that power politics played according to the rules of trade and commerce is a better proposition than power politics played with armies and navies. We believe they will. In the immediate days ahead there will be many filled with trial and anxiety, to all nations of the world not excluding the Allies. But when the last shot is fired, as it must be some day; when the representatives of the nations sit around the council table; then let it be fervently hoped that a new era of peace and prosperity will sweep over the world. That it may be wider in scope, and of longer duration than any previous similar era the world has seen. If this comes to pass, and it is more than probable, 1940 will indeed be the beginning of the "fortunate forties."

The Canadian Legion War Service

By F. W. Wordell

A year ago, when Mary Hizler led Europe to the brink of war, vast behind-the-scenes preparations were being made throughout the Empire for any eventuality. The possibility of a new and more terrible conflict first constituted them, as it does today, a threat against democracy and all the decent things in life that the people of British blood hold dear. Canada was not found lagging and authorities began formulating plans to place this country in a state of readiness.

The Canadian Legion, representative of 175,000 veterans of the 1914-18 struggle, did not under-estimate the significance of the situation. As early as May 1939, the Dominion Executive Council, in September last, authorized the appointment of a committee to study preparations and recommend such measures as seemed necessary to safeguard the welfare of ex-service men and their dependents. Out of this committee grew the Legion War Service.

At the height of the crisis the Dominion President, Brigadier-General F. C. Pearkes, V.C., now Director of Ancillary Services, Department of National Defence, convened a meeting of the Dominion Command. Those present were representatives of all who are members of the Legion's war organization, approved in principle by the Legion, one of the most historic peace-time commandments ever formulated by a Canadian organization. The commandment conveyed the message that the entire resources of the Legion were at the disposal of the Government against the emergency that existed.

During the history months that followed, the Legion has been active in a state of preparedness was never relaxed. Nor were the efforts in turn be named the "prosperous twenties." It is true there was a horrible let down at the end of it but for some years at least, the magnitude of business expansion seemed only to be bounded by the imagination of business promoters.

The thirties, through which we have just passed, could rightfully be named the "dismal thirties." With a speed of dropping and a distance of depth that left prophets and readers all over the world flabergasted, commodity prices fell unbelievably. Toops of the Edmonton garrison will soon have a hospital of their own when the new immigration hall on 106st. is completed. An order-in-council will be operated in the building by the Department of Immigration. The new garrison hospital will be under the Lieutenant command of Lieut. Col. R. T. Hashken, E.D., C.C. No. 4 Casualty Clearing Station. Major F. W. Jones will direct dental services.

During its consultations with the Prime Minister, therefore, the Legion had offered to establish a special organization for just such purposes. The offer was officially accepted following a conference between Departmental Auxiliary Services, Department of National Defence, and a few days later a Dominion Command was formed as "THE CANADIAN LEGION WAR SERVICES," with General Sir Percy Lake, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., of Victoria, as Honorary President, Major-General the Hon. L. R. Wash, D. S. O., of Toronto, as President, and Lt.-Colonel H. M. Urquhart, D.S.O., M.C., of Winnipeg, as General Manager.

The new organization which, by mandate laid down by the Legion itself, is to be non-profit making, has undertaken certain specific obligations which it will discharge in the interests of Canada's soldiers here, overseas, and in actual theatres of war. First is the establishment of facilities for education, personal services, entertainment and information as well as comforts where required.

In collaboration with the Canadian Association for Adult Education the Legion is making it possible for young men of the forces to continue, in a large measure, their education-al studies even though on active service. Committees, comprised of outstanding educationists, are being formed in every military district, and facilities are being made available for public school education and for

Canada's First War Loan

Ottawa's announcement that preparations are under way for Canada's first war loan, now scheduled to make its appearance during the first quarter of 1940 is good news inasmuch as it will provide the rank and file of Canadians with an opportunity to make their first direct contribution to Canada's war effort. The backbone of Canada's participation in the war will be financial because of its vast amount of foodstuffs materials and military supplies that will be required from this country. Too much of these materials will be paid for by the Allies, but some of the British purchases in this country will have to be financed by Canada, and Canada's own program will be extensive. It seems probable that at least 60 per cent of the additional income will be required in the next year to meet the cost of war and the other expenditures of all governments in Canada and to finance British purchases here. The income tax is a long way since the last war in developing a fiscal system of equitably in citizenship and its attendant responsibilities. As announced in the first war budget, this war, in so far as Canada is concerned will be financed as far as practicable on a "pay as you" basis, and paid for by all on the general basis of ability to pay. It would be impossible to tax for the current cost of prosecuting the program into action without reducing to large measure efficiency of and retard the expansion of production and national income. Tax payers, therefore, must be supplemented through borrowing by means of domestic war loans.

It may, too, be granted that there will be no "tax free" bonds in this war, that will guarantee to a few holders and enable them to make their income taxes free. There is no duplication of the abnormal profits from war materials witnessed during the last war, and a determined against this is the Excess Profits Tax, enacted as the special war measure of the Canadian Parliament.

It is indicated that the forthcoming war loan will be made as low as 3% in denomination, and it is the hope of the Minister of Finance, Hon. J. L. Ralston, K.C. that every Canadian will become a creditor to the Canadian Government through his or his ownership of a Government bond. A creditor relationship of this character with his government is an assurance of good government and of good citizenship.

Conditions in Canada offer peculiar opportunities for the loan when it comes. War orders and the large sum of the war cost of a ditch. As the Canadian National train, which provides the connection from Moncton to points in the Maritimes, was speeding along, a message was sent to the train through the railway despatcher at Moncton to approach the next station to Andersen's crossing of Canada and to the train was in trouble there. On arrival of the train at the crossing, the train was still in the ditch with another truck endeavoring to haul it out. The locomotive and the locomotive was detached from the train, cables were attached to the truck and the locomotive pulled the truck out of the ditch and onto the highway.

Article Depicts Possibilities Of New Wheat Uses

Aspens interested in seeing beautiful ladies clothed in dresses made from skim milk and shapely limbs covered with stockings made from coal, air and water, automobile bodies made from plastics derived from soya beans and wood, and many other wonders of scientific research may do so by calling at the Mercury office. We have just received from the Local Low Elevators a copy of the National Geographic Magazine, containing an illustrated article dealing with the latest discoveries of science. The Low Elevator Companies, through the North-West Grain Dealers Association are advocating the establishment of a Western Division of the National Research Council. In this laboratory scientists would work to find new industrial uses for wheat in order to expand the markets for this cereal. They contend that wider markets would mean a better price for the farmer. After observing the progress made in finding new uses for soya beans, corn and other products of the land, depicted in the National Geographic, one cannot help feel that the Dominion Government should take early action on setting up a wheat research laboratory in the West.

CANADIAN RED CROSS SOCIETY ALBERTA DIVISION

ATTENTION OF CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE

With a few more days of "mopping up" the $150,000 War Fund Campaign of the Alberta Division of the Red Cross Society of which splendid results of the Campaign have been conducted and canvassed known results of the Campaign have far exceeded the best hopes of officials of the Society Reports in hand at the moment are $301,000.

At this time members of the War Committee of the Alberta Division take opportunity to place on record their deep appreciation for the whole-hearted co-operation given by numerous organizations and individuals whose untiring efforts made this magnificent achievement a reality.

Feel that in the selection of campaign directors in both Northern and Southern Alberta, as well as in the larger regional Branches, we were exceedingly fortunate. It is every but to these for us to say that in our opinion as a committee a measure of credit is due them for the outstanding success achieved.

This statement would not be complete lacking an expression of our committee's gratitude to radio stations and newspapers for the publicity and particularly to the officials of the press, whose generous donations of news space in our appeals for both funds and organization of local Branches of the Society, we believe had much to do with the splendid results recorded in both divisions.

It is the desire of the Committee that this statement should be made a place in the minute records of the Alberta Division and that a copy thereof mentioned in it should receive a copy of it signed by the President and Secretary of the Division, and that copies be sent to the daily and weekly papers, with a request that it be published.

Sixty new air fields will be constructed and twenty others enlarged. Under the plan pilots will be sent from the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand. The scheme, however, will be Canadian. The Prime Minister declared many thousands of men will be trained each year. The purpose of the scheme, he said, is to "achieve by co-operative effort all forces whose co-ordinated strength will be overwhelming."

Rev. Brown explained his movement as a united effort towards reform. He said various progressive groups, including the Trades and Labor council, the C.C.F., the Social Credit League and others considered that certain changes were necessary for the good of Canada, and the only way to bring them about were to unite for a common purpose.

I.O.D.E. and Canadian Legion Entertain Soldiers and Their Parents

A very pleasing function was held at the Tofield Curling Rink on Friday evening of last week, when the Dr. Tofield Chapter of the Imperial Daughters of the Empire, together with the local branch of the Canadian Legion were hosts to over one hundred guests at a complimentary banquet.

The event was held in honor of all the district's enlisted men in the present war, some of whom were able to be present while others had proceeded overseas with their units. These soldiers were represented by their parents. The parents of these soldiers present were also invited guests.

W. Chapman was chairman and toastmaster and called upon Rev. Schaeffer to ask the blessing.

The tables were laden with a grand variety of goodies to eat, including turkey, ham, beef, potatoes, in various styles and salads of many kinds. Set with an eye to beauty, the beautiful effect was further enhanced by the occasional vase of fresh flowers. Dessert consisted of brick ice cream and cake. After-dinner candies were available to all. The banquet itself was really splendid and of course was the crowning deed of labor on the part of the ladies of the I.O.D.E. to whom credit is certainly due.

W. Chapman proposed the toast to His Majesty The King, the seconding of which was drinking the toast and singing the National Anthem.

Mayor Swift proposed the toast to the enlisted boys expressing the hope that all would return safely.

Gunner Alistair Swinton responded to the toast and on behalf of the enlisted men, thanked all those responsible for the banquet.

The chairman then asked all the returned men from the Great War of 1914-18 to stand. From this they felt the chairman announced each man was supposed to stand, although but noticed each man called out his name and regiment. We tried to keep track of these but they came faster then we could write them down.

Mr. Lovell, then gave a number of reminiscences regarding bathing facilities for the troops in France during the last war. His remarks were humorous and went to prove that there were advantages as well as disadvantages in being included in the bathing parade. For instance, some one else had the water on and off for the bath.

Mr. Cowell sang two solos very acceptably.

Mrs. Bruce, Regent of the Dr. Tofield Chapter of the I.O.D.E. welcomed the guests present. Mrs. Bruce said she had been warned that she must be brief, but she felt it both an honor and a privilege to speak at such a gathering as this. The Order was very proud indeed to have the boys and their parents present, and the boys who had already gone, even they were in their thoughts and in their prayers too. Changing to a humorous strain, she said that Mr. Chatterbox had told her that the new soldiers' song was "Mother, the boys and sincerely hoped all would return safely.

Mr. John Morton thought he could top the gathering with a gift. If he had his old job in the army back again. John was quarter-master-sergeant and among his duties was serving out nightly allowances of rum to the troops.

Under the leadership of Mr. Cowell community singing was enjoyed. Old time favorites as well as new were sung and the new soldiers giving a special rendering of "Roll Out the Barrel."

W. Chapman on behalf of his Veterans annual that the gathering was assembled to honor the enlisted boys. They wished the boys and their parents to know they appreciated their services. After telling a number of old Ross yarns stories, the speaker followed in a serious strain and said that he felt that the present was in being fought against the forces of evil. It was distinctively serving, dangerous service. He believed that people had the right to worship God as they saw fit.

Rev. D. E. Allen proposed the toast to the I.O.D.E. He very highly praised the ladies of the Dr. Tofield Chapter for the splendid banquet they had prepared for the guests that evening. They had done it in honor to both old and new soldiers. The event would long be remembered by these present gladly as fervently hoped that the boys they were honoring would return safely to them.

The gathering then sang the National Anthem and dispersed.

The guests of honor present were: Gunner Bert Bewick, Alistair Swinton, Lou Glover, Jack Derry, Wes Taylor, Don Bryans of the R.C.A. Regiment; Ted Bewick and Lloyd Burke son of the R.C.A.M.C. and Private Wilfred Sutton of the R.C.A.M.C.

HOCKEY AND SKATING

Due to weather conditions skating and particularly hockey have been late in starting this year. It was only last Monday that the local rink was opened with the usual free skating. Hana Christensen was down there with his waste box and quite a large number enjoyed the privilege. Tonight (Friday) and Saturday the management the year is in the hands of Allen Swinton and Arthur Ridley and a dance and concert is planned to sell tickets to all and sundry.

The senior hockey team this year will be piloted by Father Schmaltzer. Enthusiasm and refreshments have broken up the old team quite a bit but the material has some good and the gas line league will function as in previous years.

The teams will include Walwright, Irons, Viking, Holden, Ryley and Tofield.

On Tuesday the Tofield team met Holden at Holden and were defeated by 5-4. Neither teams had had much practice and the game was more in the nature of a skirmish than a hard fought battle.

On Friday night of this week Ryley and Tofield tangle at the Tofield rink. Ryley hockey has been improving for the past year or so and it is safe to say the visitors will give a good account of themselves. And the locals will try hard for a win for the first game of the season on home ice. It should prove an interesting encounter.

HILLS OF DESTINY

CHAPTER IV

SYNOPSIS

Lee MacLaren, returning unexpectedly to the Circle V ranch, his home from childhood is troubled by rumor of neglect. Fresh from a trip abroad, he is warned, too late, that Nancy Lou, a ranch-reared cowboy Nancy has lived as if it were presently by Matt Bain. Lee's sister father and owner of the ranch. Nancy is now manager of the Circle V. Lee's father's representative. Forward by Matt Bain Lee fears that Matt has killed himself. In Nancy Lou, reared by Matt Bain, Lee finds a young woman quite different from the tomboy sister he remembered. Lee was quiet, his clean profile showing darkly against the fire. Jo Ann's red head contrasted dramatically.

"Lee was sorry." Joey prattled on "that you couldn't have been here to come and help with the work."

"I think about it, Joey—but I must go now. It's almost dark," Lee jumped up with a quick start. Night was coming on with a keen tang in the air, and her a's shirt with thoughtful seriousness; retained apparel into the cabin. A moment later a man's coat was laid around her shoulders.

"That means 'welcome home' was remarking conversationally Virginia. And I suppose Curly is going to be fit to live with for a rounding up the whole outfit to meet with him for a night or two."

"Oh, are you staying with Joey?" She hesitated As far back as she could remember, the ranch house had been Lee's home. Her father had treated him like a son. "You know Father would always want people who had quarreled as bitter, by, they were strangely content.

"Thanks, but I'm afraid that wouldn't do. I'm not part of the Circle V outfit now. I'll probably receive a near glance from Lasher camp somewhere in the hills while and I'm—looking around."

She watched Joey as he bustled about, in contrast to Lee's easier again to the ranch house. His went around to Lee MacLaren supply cowboy. Somehow it gave her a pleasant sense of ownership that she had not felt before.

They rode on in a star-glimmering darkness, talking little. For two people who had quarreled as bitter-

There was a slight scrabbling of bony fingers on the door panel. Lee stood on the other side.

"Hiney comin'," he said softly. "Hey stay inside."

Mr. T. Ellison Archer entered his wife's room more abruptly than was his habit. The real estate market had receded and been high and dry. Just now he was said to be "connected" in some way with the Brudish interests and at this precise moment was prickling with unpleasant apprehension lest he should be abruptly disconnected.

"Have you heard from Virginia yet, my dear?"

"Why the telegram saying that she arrived safely. What's the matter, trying happened?"

"Well, exactly." Mr. Archer looked uneasy. "But I have just seen Mr. Brudish. In fact, he sent for me and he was quite upset. He put it up to me rather bluntly as if Virginia's going were my fault."

"But I don't see how we could have prevented it! We have done everything to make Virginia happy here."

"Mr. Brudish feels—" Her husband returned nervously to the subject uppermost in his mind—that young Hollister is trying to induce Virginia to keep the ranch."

Before his wife's inquiring eye Mr. Archer seemed to feel that further explanations were necessary.

"Mr. Brudish said that he had felt no certain that the place would belong to him in a short time but had asked the manager to keep him in touch with matters."

He paused and cleared his throat nervously. "It will be very unfortunate if this Hollister does anything to interfere with the sale."

"I never liked Lee Hollister," said Mrs. Archer positively "I never understood Matthew's action in bringing a child like that ... a boarding ... such a home. But there's only one thing to do now and that is to get Virginia there and bring Virginia back if I can."

Mr. Archer nodded a relieved assent, serenely carrying a penny of decision that he had never possessed. His wife went over to her desk and drew a telephone ... toward her. "I think," she said thoughtfully, "that I'd better telephone Stanley about our plans. He has been really ... Stanley Brudish, since the evening ...

What To Do To Keep Hog Cholera At Bay

In order to put ourselves of hogs in Canada on guard against the introduction of hog cholera into the Dominion and to tell those what to do in case the disease makes its appearance, Dr. A. E. Cameron, Veterinary Director General of Canada, has published a publication on "Hog Cholera" which may be obtained free on request from the Publicity and Extension Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Hog cholera is a highly contagious disease of swine and does not appear to affect any other species of animal. It is known in every part of the world, and is prevalent in the United States where it causes enormous damage. In Canada, the disease appears from time to time in various parts of the country where the infection has been brought in some way or other. These outbreaks have been promptly controlled.

Dr. Cameron in the pamphlet deals with the questions of how hog cholera is spread, prevalence, symptoms of the disease, examination of ...ed animals, how to find out whether hog cholera is suspected, how the disease is dealt with in Canada, and ...ventive measures. He also gives several appropriate illustrations in ...

"Get rid of him."

"Not so easy," said Morse mildly. "And dangerous."

"I'm not suggesting homicide," retorted his chief brusquely. "There are more ways of getting rid of a man than knocking him over the head. What about bringing him in?"

"Wonda's cases," said Morse incontrollably. "Hair like a horse."

M.D. OF BEAVER LAKE NO. 486

Residents of Municipal District of Beaver Lake No. 486, desiring to splendidly as of its municipality especially which the federal and provincial governments the boys together with a number of other farmers, would be able to obtain seed at approximately half the regular price. The municipality has not purchased this seed but will arrange to take orders from any farmers distribution of seed.

The seed generally available is Brome, Crested Wheat Grass and Alfalfa. There is a definite limit as to the amount each farmer may purchase, and the cost to the farmer is one half of the prevailing price, plus freight.

CROP FORAGE SCHEME DEALT WITH

It will be remembered that in the report of the last meeting of the Cornhill Man. Council mention was made of a Forage Crop Seed policy. We promised to give further details in the next issue of the Mercury, but possibly due to the Christmas activities and our note reversing the matter being temporarily mislaid, we neglected to do so. However, we will explain the project now.

The object of the project is to encourage the growing of tame grasses throughout Alberta. Consequently a plan was devised whereby the federal government, the provincial governments and the municipality co-operate with the other, so that a number of farmers in each municipality receive the advantage of the plan may secure a quantity of tame grass seed at a greatly reduced cost.

Mr. Bentley, accompanied by Mr. John Warner was present at the last Council meeting and outlined the plan and while time did not permit the advantages of the plan to the pupils of Junior Grade Club set-up, the kids the boys had done exceptionally well in the growing of a better class of wheat and other grains and were anxious to undertake seeding some acreage to tame grasses. The plan would fit in with their requirements

A Call

TO SERVICE on the Economic Front

"Materials and money count for so much in this war that a resolute, loyal and enthusiastic economic front line may be the determining factor."

M. Pratter
MINISTER OF FINANCE.

To your restless question "When can I help win this war?"—the answer is NOW. On Monday next, the Government of the Dominion of Canada will offer the First War Loan. The purpose of this Loan is to provide money to carry on the war, not only on the battlefields, but all along the Economic Front.

Let us explain what the Economic Front means. It means a war in which the entire natural, industrial and financial resources of the country are used to defeat the enemy. It means a "total war" in which every citizen takes a part, in which his personal resources must support those of the Nation.

In such a war, one of the chief weapons is money. Where is this money to come from? There is only one answer. It must come — and come voluntarily — from the savings of our people. The difference between us and the Germans is that we, of our own free will, lend our money — it is not ruthlessly taken away.

This is your opportunity to do your part in this struggle against Hitlerism. The eyes of the world are upon you, upon Canada, one of the strongest members of the British Commonwealth. Canadians must show that their strength, their courage and their resources are all in this fight against "brute force, bad faith, injustice, aggression and persecution."

The news of the success of this Loan must go ringing round the world.

Be ready to buy War Loan Bonds. They will have the proven safety and salability of Dominion of Canada obligations. Any Investment Dealer or Chartered Bank will take your subscription. The quicker the economic war is won, the greater will be the saving of human lives . . . the swifter the collapse of the enemy.

CORNHILL COUNCIL IN REGULAR SESSION

A regular meeting of the Council of Municipal District of Cornhill was held at the District Office on Friday, January 12th. There were present, Reeve Walker (in the chair) Councillors Anderson, Coombe, Holmberg, Kertzman and Swabey.

The minutes of the last regular meeting and a list of accounts passed for payment at that meeting were read and on the motion of Councillor Swabey adopted.

Letter was read from Mr. Richie of the Provincial Department of Public Works. He desired information as to the amount and kind of road work done under the tax arrears scheme by the District during the last year. The information will be supplied.

Letter in the Reeve from Patriquin and Johnstone, re financial statement was read.

January 8, 1940.

Reeve and Council,
M. D. of Cornhill No. 487,
Tofield, Alta.

Gentlemen:—

We have completed the audit of the books and records of your district for the year ended December 31, 1939, and we have today forwarded a copy of the financial statement to the Department of Municipal Affairs.

We found the records as submitted by your auditor, Mr. Lemarquand, to be excellent order and our work was greatly facilitated by his preparation of the statements.

We failed to find any specific authorization for the issue of debentures numbered 388 and 389, both payable to J. D. Adams Limited in the sums of $617 50 and $919.00. It is our belief that every disbursement should be especially authorized by council, and if these are in order we would ask you to include this authorization in the minutes of your next meeting.

We would respectfully suggest that in future the items authorized for payment be included in the actual minutes rather than as at present have them inserted in a separate book, to which reference is made in the minutes.

We note also in the tax roll that a very large sum of money is being carried forward as arrears on what is presumably an abandoned township, and while it is that a reserve for cancellation of tax is provided on the financial statement we think it might be advantageous to endeavor to have these townships cancelled in particular; properly reverted to the status of farm lands.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

Yours very truly,
Patriquin & Johnstone.

On the motion of Councillor Anderson formal authorization was given on cheques 388 and 389.

Council was quite pleased with the remarks of the auditors regarding the statement and it was moved by Councillor Swabey that the report of auditors regarding the statement be accepted as corrected, which was carried.

The secretary then gave a summary of Public Works program for 1939. This included a detailed report of the money expended and the work done in the six different divisions. This report will be published as soon as a favorable opportunity presents itself.

Mr. Albert Donald interviewed the council re 80 acres purchased from Council in 1933. He never had an agreement of sale and had lost the receipts for the money paid. Upon minute and receipts of 1935 were looked up and it was found that a motion had been passed authorizing the sale of this acreage for the taxes then against it, amounting to some thirty-odd dollars. The amount had been paid in two payments and at the present time all taxes were paid up on the acreage. It was explained that Council would have to pass a by-law and this would have to meet with the approval of the Department of Municipal Affairs. A by-law covering the sale of this acreage was given a first and second reading. A third reading will be given at the next meeting.

On the motion of Councillor Kertzman approval was given for full old age pension for Mr. Frery.

Royal Alexandra Hospital wrote re account of Abe Wains amounting to $90.00. Councillor Coombe explained that Mr. Weins had been engage to do brushing. He contracted blood poisoning and quit without finishing the contract. Then his wife became ill and he gave an order in the hospital on the Municipality. He was working again and would be paid as soon as contracts were completed.

Mr. Adolf Idack wrote offering $500 for S.E. 11-51-20 W4. There was $133.00 taxes outstanding against it. The proposal was turned over to the Municipality by the T.S.B. Council did not consider it was in the best interests of the Municipality to sell this quarter.

Mr. Hamilton of the Hamilton Machinery Co., called on council and introduced Mr. Wilcox. Mr. Hamilton has been promoted and Mr. Wilcox will take over Mr. Hamilton's work. Letter from Mr. Bentley re Forage Crop Seed project. After some discussion it was decided on the motion of Councillor Anderson, to take part in the scheme to the extent of $300.00 spread over three years.

Letter from Mr. McLees re Mr. Christen's claim for road allowance. Also one from Burgess and McKay dealing with the same subject. This particular piece of land was given council under quit claim quite a number of years ago, but the road was never established. Mr. Christensen bought the quarter a few years back and his deed calls for a full quarter, Mr. Christensen wants payment for the land used for road purposes and a refund on taxes paid by him on the piece of land in question. As the road was never required and the quarter having passed into Chamber person's ownership since the quit claim was given, it was decided to see about having the road registered and when this was done to give the question further consideration.

Mr. Bruce made application for relief. He has quite a number of children and no feed. He needed money for feed but intended to pay it back. After discussion and on motion of Councillor Swabey it was decided that Mr. Bruce undertake a brushing contract.

The question of relief officer then came up for discussion. Reeve Walker did not think the councillors should be called on to act as relief officers. He was of the opinion a proper relief officer should be appointed.

Councillor Coombe was of the opinion that each councillor should be responsible for relief in his own district. No definite action was taken at this time.

Letter from Mr. McLean re funeral expenses of Mr. Andrew Olson. This is in order to pay same with an account of a Camrose (Continued on Supplement)

BEHIND THE HOG

As Vice-Pres. Stinson's crew get further and further in the red, we hasten to give you our version of "The Appetizing Oyster and It's Troubled Career." During our trip this year, we spent some time at the Oyster beds on Long Island Sound, New York. We are accustomed to thinking of the Oyster merely as a soft, flashy, flabby ingredient for stews, patties, rarebits, etc., while it is really a bivalular shell fish. Before it appeared on your table it had lived a strange career indeed, beginning its feeding and escaping from its enemies. Oysters are among the most extensively eaten of all sea foods, and they vary greatly in size, shape, habits, flavor and food value. Oysters exist in from 70 to 160 species. The most common species are the flat-shelled, toilts. Cherry-stones. The quality of oysters also differs from the water in which they were found, particularly the entire yield of N.Y. New England and New Jersey comes from planted beds and the average catch for U.S.A. alone is about 50,000,000 bushels or about 10,000,000,000 oysters. We are kind of getting into deep water, so I'll leave the rest for another issue. Oysters are taken from deeper water, in 20 ft. to 30 ft. where a dredge is used, dragged by sail boats and hauled in. In shallower waters they are taken by tongs, which are long rakes. Open and close like shears. Oyster beds are divided into square 150-900 feet and many millions of dollars are invested in oyster lands. Oysters are propagated in hatcheries in infancy, only a small percentage surviving the 2 to 3 years before they are gathered as food. But enough of this, Stinson's crew are always on the lookout for new fish to shell and I could name a few on Curvie's side that are so lucky they will likely find a pearl in every oyster. The affectation of Curvie's side at the table will be notorious if they hamper themselves by reins having no basis in common sense. Our side will not be afraid to dig for the best fragments, and they will probably avoid the milk in the stew at dinner. If it were poison, we sit down, to our cupids behind our ears, put up our knife, fork and spoon and go to work with directness. Oysters first, then our crackers in the milk and chase the fragments around the bowl with our last crackers. Lay down our spoons and say "Ah." The Cowboy and The Lady

Here you are lovers of westerns! A real honest-to-goodness western picture is coming to Tofield. "The Cowboy and the Lady" coming to the Victoria next Tuesday will likely top with the dare-devil exploits of Gary Cooper and the spontaneous charm of Merle Oberon. Gary Cooper in both "The Cowboy and the Lady." Of course it has a balance of romance, a thrilling story of their associations before the ceremony, marriage makes the wedding the center of attraction and not merely the end. See for yourself if this picture is worth the Lady." Other attractions include Victoria Comedy, etc. Up, and admission. Show starts at 8:30.

Royal Visit Pictures To Be Sponsored By The Red Cross

The Royal Visit pictures will be shown at Tofield on Tuesday, January 23rd under the heading Receipts (Municipal Only). So we will go on record as having paid one admission. The amount paid on current account and arrears in cash in 1939 was $28,-618.54. This compares with $25,188.-22 collected from the same source in 1938, a gain of $3428.32.

The unemployment relief repaid was $775.99 in 1939 an increase of $28.75 over the same item in 1938. However this is not really a gain Accounts (Municipal Only)

EXPLANATION COLUMN

We publish this week the annual financial statement of the Municipal District of Cornhill. Every important item connected with the finances of the municipality is mentioned in the report, some of them two and three times and in different ways. The report does not, of course, mention every single cheque issue or every single receipt, but somewhere under its proper classification, every expenditure and every receipt is included in the report.

Every financial statement must have a starting place. It must either start from scratch or from a date when a statement had previously been made. Yearly reports are the usual custom, a practice which gives those interested an opportunity of comparing the gains and losses of one period with the gains and losses of another.

In general the 1939 Financial Statement of the M.D. of Cornhill is a good one. Compared to the 1938 statement (which incidentally was nothing to complain about) receipts are up, expenses are down and there is more money in the bank than at the same time last year.

If you will turn to Receipts (municipal only) you will see listed the balance as at December 31st, 1938. These it will be seen total $3564.22. Now if you will look at the last item in Payments (municipal only) you will see the balances as at December 31st, 1939 listed. These amount to $9,230.27. This means that the Municipality has $5,666.05 more money in the bank and on hand at the end of 1939 than it did at the end of 1938.

However these figures only tell the end position, not the true position. So that the true position we have to turn to the assets and liabilities columns.

The total municipal assets listed this year amount to $66,118.15, and the total liabilities amount to $39,-478.18 leaving a balance of assets over liabilities of $24,260.03. Now if we turn to the 1938 statement we find that the assets over liabilities was listed as $22,793.56, which go to show that the former was worth the while. The total municipal assets at the end of 1939 then it was at the end of 1938. Considering that 1939 was not a particularly good agricultural year and the municipality paid all current accounts and paid off some past due ones, the showing can be regarded as quite satisfactory.

Mention has already been made of the balances which are shown immediately under the heading Receipts (Municipal Only). So we will go on to explain this item in connection. The amount paid on current account and arrears in cash in 1939 was $28,-618.54. This compares with $25,188.-22 collected from the same source in 1938, a gain of $3428.32.

The remaining receipt items are comparatively small ones and hardly need to be explained separately.

Next week we will take up Payments (Municipal Only)

HILLS OF DESTINY

BY AGNES LOUISE PROVOST

Chapter V

SYNOPSIS

Lee Hollister, returning unexpectedly from a trip home to the Circle V ranch, is welcomed from childhood as trouble-shooter and confidant of Mark Blair, Lee's foster father and owner of the ranch hills. Lee then learns Matt has killed himself probably discouraged by hard times. The ranch is going to ruin under Lawler, manager appointed by Mark's daughter Virginia who is staying in New York with her aunt and uncle the Archers. Lee is warned when he sees Slanty Gates, a trouble maker, now manager of the old Cebalos place, hanging around the Circle V. He learns of and urges Virginia to go home. Cancelling an engagement with young Stanley Bradish she hurries west.

"The boss" was back at the Circle V. The word was passed along on the part of the old hands, at least, with receiving pride and affectionate grins. This maybe not to a boss with a very practical knowledge of the business of raising beef cattle but behind her, unobtrusive, without a show of authority yet always on hand, was a young man who knew a great deal about ranches and still more about this one, and who had a flat like a steam hammer, a habit of turning up in unexpected places, a calm but magnetic black eye.

Virginia, feeling her bewildered and half resentful way along new paths, nevertheless knew moments when something stirred her more precisely. The sudden plunge of a pinto through a notch in the hills, the sight of wide lands that were hers in spite of their burdens, of animals bearing her own brand. Then the thrill would vanish before some discouraging detail, evidences of neglect or carelessness, such as a line of fence out of repair, or an untouched clearing which should have produced several crops of alfalfa.

"There's no excuse for such things! You want to jump him hard."

"You always want me to jump people hard," she protested impatiently. "It isn't a crime, Lee. Just a few strands of wire overlooked for a day or two, and a field that used to have something planted in it before he came. How was he to know?"

"It's his business to know."

He had dismounted and was critically inspecting posts and sagging wire.

"In work like this," Lee went on, frowning, " the man who fails to spot rust things on the jump is either asleep on the job or—"

"Or what?" she demanded as he paused.

"Or he has an interest in letting things run down," he finished crisply.

"That's ridiculous!" she retorted indignantly. "What possible interest could Lawler have in doing that? He couldn't get the ranch himself, and who would make it worth his while? Uncle Ellis, perhaps who expected him for me and who has made a home for me for years and years! Or Mr. Bradish, who has millions, and could have his choice of any number of ranches!"

That was where the clash inevitably came. They were not always arguing. There were long rides together where there was no intrusion of cattle and fences.

They stood one afternoon on the crest of a ridge from which a wide panorama spread out. Lee was unconsciously quiet that day. When they had dismounted he pointed out dots of color that looked like paint splashes.

"Circle V cattle. They're all over these hillsides and set on that flat, all with your brand on them, waiting to help feed the world. That's worth something, isn't it?"

"Yes, I suppose so." There was a, answering lift of self-esteem in her voice. "Oh, it's no use, Lee. Can't you see that? It isn't in my blood the way it is in yours."

"There's nothing I wouldn't do to help, Virginia, if that's any use to you."

"But you'll never make a ranch woman out of me. Never. Better give me up as a bad lot, Lee."

"I'll never give you up!"

She caught the quick blaze in his eyes, felt herself swept to him in a grip at once rough and tender, his face against hers, warm and compelling. Pulses stopped, and raced exultantly on again.

"Never!" he whispered against her lips. "Honey . . ."

"Oh, let me go!"

The first impulse to yield brought a blazing reaction. She pulled herself free.

"You take too much for granted," she said coldly. "I hate being pawed."

The warmth went out of Lee's face like something wiped from a slate; his hands dropped; he stood looking down at her, tight-lipped.

"Oh, certainly, if that's the way you look at it."

The ride home was a silent one. Lawler met them as they came into the Valley of the Sun. He was grinning.

"Been lookin' all over for ye, Miss Blair. Some company's come, yore aunt and a young gentleman. They've been here three hours."

Stanley Bradish had already found a mount and was riding toward them.

"Thanks Lawler," Virginia turned coolly to Lee. "It won't be necessary for you to come so far out of your way. I'll ride back with Mr. Bradish."

"It isn't out of my way," he said inconsolably. "I'm spending the night with Joey."

He rode on with her to meet Stanley Bradish, whose father wanted the Circle V and who himself probably wanted something much still more to Lee Hollister. Each man regained the other, and neither gave the faintest indication of it. Once more, and this time consciously, the planes that parted between them was a measuring of power.

There was little time now for Virginia to let her thoughts dwell on Lee. She had two unannounced guests to entertain, both city dwellers of luxurious tastes. Mrs. Archer had retired exhausted to her room, Virginia surmised herself to Stanley had issued him.

"Darling, this is lovely! But why didn't you send word, and let me meet you?"

"I wanted to surprise you, dear. It was a silly notion, of course."

Mrs. Archer returned from her room and smiled vaguely. I hope you don't mind my bringing Stanley this way, but I couldn't very well object when he wanted to come."

"Oh, no of course not," Virginia smiled brightly. She paused, and the next came jerkily.

"Father was going to build a new ranch house as soon as I came back. And I never knew. The plans are in his desk still."

Mrs. Archer looked frightened. She had not heard that hard sound in Virginia's voice since the first days after Matt Blair's death.

"Oh, but you were practically on the way home," she said soothingly. "And I'm sure we shall be very comfortable here. Stanley has had one of his cars shipped out. Really, if you weren't going to sell, I should insist on your getting a new one."

Virginia met Stanley's answer immediately.

Oh yes, I suppose I shall sell," she said slowly. "It would be foolish not to. But I'd rather not talk about it, if you don't mind."

Mrs. Archer flashed an alarmed glance at her niece's face.

"Of course," she said hurriedly. "It's your property and I don't want to seem insistent, but if you delay too long, you may lose the opportunity. Mr. Bradish is a very generous man, but he is also very — er— peculiar. He may get impatient and withdraw the offer."

HILLS OF DESTINY

BY AGNES LOUISE PROVOST

Chapter VI

(By Agnes Louise Provost)

Lee Hollister returning unexpectedly to the ranch after a year's absence, had been a severe shock to Mrs. Archer, from which she never entirely recovered. Not only did Lee resemble his father and owner Matt Blair, but he was the image of that dead-and-gone lover, Lee Lawler, manager of the ranch and Matt's daughter Virginia's husband. Lee was living in Vancouver, and was working with the Archers. Lee was a favorite with Mrs. Archer, now manager of the cattle ranch, after Matt's death. Lee's father and owner had been a close friend of Matt's, and probably distinguished by the same traits of character. Lee Lawler, manager of Matt's daughter Virginia's ranch, was living in Vancouver, and was working with the Archers. Lee was a favorite with Mrs. Archer, now manager of the cattle ranch, after Matt's death. Lee's father and owner had been a close friend of Matt's, and probably distinguished by the same traits of character.

Mrs. T. Ellison Archer's eats might have warmed unpleasantly if she had known that all that parties most the young men called Lee Hollister at the ball that night. Lee's father, and the little dread up prospects with the exuberant Virginia Blair, now Mrs. Lee Lawler, were discussing her affairs with considerable friends.

"Ralston Mrs. Archer's aimin' to take Honey back east?" said Joey.

"I'm letting no such thing," the old man peered at him shrewdly.

"Looks like serious, that young Brandon fellow comin' along, like it was a family party. He's some how or left keys turnin' folks around. There was Mr. Bradish, back in the hotel now, hatted and clad to eat the grub Matt gave him, an' now Matt's a millionaire and Matt's the one that's down, an' Matt's boy is out here hangin' around Matt's girl. Funny ain't it?"

"Very." The voice sounded grim.

"Never did have any use for them Archers," Joey grumbled. "Too plumb full of foolishness to live. All they thank of is money and how many yachts and better than friends has. It may have most killed 'em when Henry's ma married into the shirt factory business, but I look better that when Matt was makin' a lot of money they corresponded with him pretty frequent. Can't tell me!"

The dark head turned slightly. "They've been prubbleum, Joey, if I know the breed. I'd like to see the ashes of Matt's check books for the last six years."

Joey nodded thoughtfully. Silence fell between them again.

"You're not sorry with me for trailing along this way, are you?" Joey's shy.

"Don't be silly."

Virginia laughed and half shrugged as Stanley came out to where she stood on the veranda in starlight, looking across the shadowy valley.

"Well I just wondered. You've been so quiet. Rather wishdown, you know."

He beat a flushed face toward her. "You run away from me. You. Don't you know that I follow you —anywhere"

His voice had dropped to a whisper.

In another second he would be kissing her. Lee the afternoon, said proudly. "You'll not better judge-stand ?

"That's sweet of you, Stan." She moved a little, just out of reach. "But don't let's talk about it tonight, will you?"

For Lee and Joey also, the next had entered the garden. There were no more long rides nor quiet evenings by Joey's fire Virginia rode with Stanley Bradish now, showing him over the ranch, taking him deep into the hills by trails that Lee had shown her. On the third day after his arrival he and Virginia went down to Saunders and came back with a long, rakish car, smoke-grey, to be with his regrets in sender on the doors.

At the end of the third week many guests arrived, friends who had stopped off on a round-to-coast trip, and ludes alone and unsafe came from the ranch house until far into the night. A newer, gayer life had come to the Circle V and with one notable exception, Lee Hollister had no part in it.

The exception was the dance while the weekend guests were there. He wore the blue serge suit he was one of the few men there in evening clothes, but he swung Virginia into a fox-trot as easily as if he had been born to it, and later danced twice with Peggy Watrous. Peggy specialized in new mats.

"I'm crazy about your handsome cowboy. Yes. I'd eat you out if I could. He is part Indian isn't he?"

"Of course not. Lee is—"

She hesitated, half angry but suddenly brought up against a blank wall. After all, who—or what—was Lee? A bit of human flotsam that Matt Blair had salvaged and made into a man.

"Who's an Indian? H—lster?"

The voice was Stanley's, brushing in just in time to save any from a nasty reply. "Oh, yes, there's some blood there, Lee. Don't our father pick him up on one of the reserves, Virginia? Or was it south of the border?"

The name Virginia shrank her and sequence. "I don't know." she said coldly. "I've better not Lee."

The recollection of the intended slur made her kinder to Lee than any had meant to be. She danced three more times with him. Toward the end of their last dance Virginia turned her head and laughed softly.

"Look, Lee! Just outside the door. I'm going to bring her in."

His eyes followed her. Beyond them was an open door, and a shaft of light cutting into the outer shadows and, caught in the edge of the light, they saw a gay little figure, with a dark, vivid face, black eyes that burned with excitement, and a scarlet skirt mouth. The slim body swayed slightly to the music, with a rippling natural grace.

As Lee looked at her she slid hastily out of sight with an impudent flirt of her chin. He laughed.

"That little devil! She's Jocefa Ramirez, and her father is Francisco Ramirez who used to be a sheep herder and lives now on one of the corners of his own ranches. Matt helped him to get it. Ten can count on Pancho Ramirez. He's always count to Don Luis Ceballos."

"Very interesting," said Virginia sweetly. "But not much of it seems to be about the girl. You're holding out on me, Lee."

"Nothing to hold." Lee was a little cool about it.

Someone else claimed her and she left him. He watched her dance with Lee hollister, a trifle ruffled by the uncertain ways of women, and then went out by the door where the girl Josefa had stood.

There was no sign of her. Lee seated comfortably against the side of the house and rolled a cigarette.

Voices drifted to him. Laughter and laughing, a girl's in a smothered remonstrance, more coquettish than angry. Lee flicked out his match and stood lightly around the corner of the house.

He thought he saw a flitting shadow but it vanished and he could not be sure. A cigarette made a point of light in the darkness about ten feet away. Stanley Bradish strolled toward him.

"Hello, Hollister." he said indifferently. "That you? I thought I heard voices and then—"

"Did you?" Lee was noncommittal, but his eyes searched the darkness back of the house.

"I was probably mistaken. Can you beat it?" Stanley tossed his lighted cigarette aside and started on.

Lee's eyes were on the half-smoked cigarette where it had landed, still glowing.

"When you've been in this part of the country a little longer," he said evenly, "you'll not better judge-ment than that, sir. Girls, like some other things, is easy to start, but not so easy to put out."

Stanley's annoyed stare followed him as he strolled off.

"Now what the devil," he mused to himself, "did the cow hand mean by that?"

The next day Stanley made a trip to Saunders alone and found his way to the office of Gideon Morse, County-at-Law.

"I'm Stanley Bradish," he said casually. "I'm staying at the Circle V ranch. That little matter of the children and their woman—suppose you have it attended to."

Gideon blinked, but forebore comment. He had a letter from the elder Bradish, as definite as a letter could be, considering how much of it lay between the lines.

"My son is spending a few weeks at the Blair place. He is not yet convinced with me in business and is not acquainted with the details of the proposed purchase"

It looked like a bad bush scene.

At fifteen Josefa Ramirez was a beauty, with glowing black tresses, a dusky flush under an olive skin, and a slim, gay, dancing body. Young Mexicans arrayed themselves in hold-hey best and rode miles out of their way to spend an hour or so at Francisco's ranchito and knives had flashed more than once for her favor

Only when Lee Hollister stepped at the sheep ranch was there something outwardly different about her, the sultry stillness before a storm. He had known Francisco for fifteen years; the entire household exploded young down to a shelf just above the point where they had disappeared, dropped flat, and listened worried-ously out to the edge.

Voices came to him. He could just see the two men about thirty feet below. Both men were half drunk, Lawler morose, Slanty argumentative and boastful. Lee heard Slanty's taunting words.

"Fishin' embers from Lee Hollister you? You've been keepin' yourself so secure I thought at most have fired you."

"I ain't talkin' employer's embers. I've been around there. I take notice that you keep tolerable severe yourself when that bombre is around."

"Don't worry about me!" Slanty warned him belligerently. "I'm going to be rich some day, you see if I ain't. And I ain't aimin' to work like a dog for it, neither. I'm going to see the finish. I have a man that's goin' to land me anything I say, I got him fixed where I want him, I tell you."

He chuckled himself sleepily as he realizing that he was talking too much.

"I got a big idea," Slanty finished craftily. "That's what brings the Lee Hollister here. Lee Hollister, if he owned it, or going calmly past her door to visit old friends in the ranch house. He rode over to the city and dropped a diplomatic question or two, but Joey had not seen Lee for day. Odd that he had not said anything, to Joey about his plans. Perhaps he was ill up there in his cabin, and alone. Someone ought to go—" and touched him into quicker action. The little cabin looked lonely and deserted as the ground it. Inside were orderliness and simplicity. The bunk on the other side of the room was neatly made and a Navajo blanket lay across it.

She turned Black Lightning's head

She went around slowly, looking at it the thing and that. Before the shelf where the lamp of quartz lay she paused with a startled exclamation. She knew how Lee cherished his father's memory—but still that was an odd thing to do, to put his father's name and the date of his death on that piece of quartz, like an epitaph—or a grim reminder.

Episode Easter To Early Date

Toronto, Jan. —Easter is climbing a march on Father Time and making a war torn world step even a little more lively with its 1940 appearance March 24, earliest since 1913 and earlier in the year than it will ever come again until after 2000.

Then it may break modern record —but that's a matter for savants of the future. Easter 1913 was March 23, one day ahead of this year's in the calendar. That early date was before the First Great War.

Not that wars or boiling up wars of Europe and Asia have much to do with it. The date for the connection of Christ's rising from the dead owes it mobility to the capricious moon. Easter Sunday is always the Sunday after the full moon which happens on or next after the 21st day of March"—March 21 being the spring equinox—the first day of spring.

In Canada's sometimes long and fickle winter, no fashion-conscious lass can depend on being able to wear her Easter bonnet and filmy confection too soon, and Easter, 1940, may see Canadian belles well wrapped in winter's furs.

She may find some consolation in conveying yours from 1943, Father reaches an all-time "late" for the century. In 1943, Easter will be more than a month later than 1940's frigid date, and the latest possible day on which Easter Sunday can come. Three times in the century—in 1908, 1916 and 1943—the latest coincides with the doubly English holiday of April 25, which is St. George's Day and Shakespeare's birthday.

Pronouncing on Easter Sunday on Shakespeare's birthday would be a comparatively recent North American development of the ancient festive season. But the history of the day itself has roots in the first days of Christianity, and even its name is more ancient mythology.

Important among the resolutions which were endorsed by delegates to the U.F.A. convention in Alberta this week was that which provides for automatic suspension of officials who participate in active politics. This last year's determination to drive the farmers' movement from politics was carried out with such opposite to affiliation, too. Continued moderation of Robert Gardiner was strained in his re-election to the House of Commons. Gardiner, who has served in the ranks of the Liberal party for his tenth term in the vice office.

Simultaneously, Social Credit delegates convened in Calgary for their fourth annual meeting. Important among announcements made there was that of the Provincial Government's intention to apply for a bank charter, and of the forthcoming session of the Legislature. Of interest was in line with a resolution brought up by the convention, for the construction of women's auxiliaries, held in Edmonton some years ago.

Speaking in Calgary later in the week, Dr. Parlee declared that the Alaska highway would certainly pass through Alberta when the time is ripe. He stressed the importance of this to the province as a means to bring to the attention of the world that British Columbia cannot hope to get the military strength to withstand invasion from nine months in the year over certain sections.

Canada loses on the average, three members, 34 children under five, 31 under one, and 34 infants daily through lack of adequate medical service, U.F.A. delegates were told by Hon. George Hoadley, Minister of Health Minister who is now associated with other prominent Canadians in a drive to reduce infant mortality. "There is no more disgrace to our country than this," he declared, "and a need there is. We are under-populated." He said Canadians welcome the discoveries of medical science, "but we have, figuratively, planted back into the earth the fruits of an abundant research because we have been unable to distribute them to the ailing millions."

DOMINION OF CANADA FIRST WAR LOAN, PUBLICITY COMMITTEE

Kingston, Jan. 18— Every Canadian, regardless of his rank or station, should subscribe some of his savings to Canada's First War Loan, because the money is needed, and because the fight in which Canada is engaged is a fight "for everything we have." This statement was made by W. Rupert Davies, President of the Canadian Press and member of the National War Loan Committee, in launching a stirring appeal to all individual Canadian citizen, "on the farm or in the factory, in the mine or on the sea, in the ranks of industry or in large business and financial institutions."

"Canada should roll up as imposing and impressive total of subscribers subscribing as well as dollars subscribed", said Mr. Davies. "It is imperative that a united front be shown to the enemies of our freedom. Just as individual Canadians subscribed in the most marvelous fashion to the Red Cross appeal, so should all Canadians respond to this appeal to fight for Canada upon the dollar front. For all of us this war is life or death; existence or extinction; freedom or freedom or slavery. Nothing that we can lose now, anything that we can offer or give or have taken from us can be more than a fraction of what we shall lose if Germany wins this war.

"The right to live and move as free men; the right of free people to read as free press; the sovie right to listen to other opinions than those that Goebbels and Himmler may permit; the right to send our children to any school we please, to be taught anything, rather than just what the Nazi Head of the State prescribes; the right of the farmer to till his land and grow what he pleases instead of what he is told to grow; and the right to sell in free markets for a world price instead of simply to produce for a dictator for a fixed price; the right to worship according to conscience; the right to elect ourselves a government who may speak freely in the ground influence of the nation; the right to work for ourselves instead of living as slaves of German overlords—these are the things that Canadians are fighting for.

"Two of thousands of fine young Canadian men are offering their very lives in this great cause. Most of their fellow citizens at home—who cannot go to fight should offer their dollars to put behind our Canadians at the front."

CANADIANA

Summer Optimism—

Montreal —Belief that Canada faces a period of maximum employment —and possibly a labor shortage—due to the war was voiced by Mervin W Wilson, president of the Royal Bank at their recent annual meeting.

"There," he said, "we are fortunate enough to remain at their regular employment in Canada must use on this objective the attention for their own ends." He Wilson added that output must play its part.

He likened Russo-

Lunenburg— Lunenburg's last fire resistance was suggested Hon. H. E. Mitchell, Minister of Fisheries, to reign to give Prime Minister King "an opportunity to reorganize the fisheries department from the top down." The senator thought there is "nothing so some" in the latest policy of the department.

At Ottawa, Mr Michaud was now on his way to which his resignation would help bring about new Liberal representation in the House of Commons. Prime Minister King declared. "The minister of fisheries has been opposed to the adoption of such policies."

******

Saskatoon — Declaring great changes have been accomplished by irrigation in Saskatchewan and Alberta, K E. Eisenhauer, secretary of the land utilization board, urged that more advantage be taken of the prairie farm rehabilitation administration's offer to help farmers who are assisted to construct small irrigation systems. Mr. Eisenhauer revealed that more than 400 such small schemes, involving 12,000 acres, have been established.

Higher Profits—

Ottawa— Continued rise in the general wholesale commodity price index is reported by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics for the week ending January 6. The figure was 100.6 compared with 98.8 in the previous week. In the corresponding week of 1939 the index was 79.4, 1926 equals 100.

Saskatoon—Humanity is "on the run" because of the mass lack of moral revolution and rational alteration, Professor J. L. Thomson of the University of Saskatchewan, declared in addressing here recently. Problems would not be solved by appointing business magnates or professors, said Dr. Thompson, but by the wisdom of common men under a democracy.

Farm Services—

Montreal— Suspension of recruiting in another rural area has been asked by Premier Adelard Godbout. The premier explained his request has been necessitated by the growing by his province's unemployment problem and the urgency of maintaining agricultural development. Young farmers, he said, might enlist when they could better help their country by farming.

Vancouver— "More baggage was handled in 1939 than in any previous year," declared Hon. Ian Mackenzie, superintendent of Canadian National Express, Mr. Lamb is here from Winnipeg on a tour of inspection. Christmas traffic, he said, was the best in history.

Bad Business—

Edmonton— More professional politicians and fewer amateurs are needed in Canadian politics today, are voiced by Ernest Wilby, M.L.A. and leader of Manitoba Conservatives, speaking at a local service club here. Mr Wilby declared business men should go into politics. By their lack of leadership, said they stand to lose millions of dollars.

Junior Clubs Prove Worth

The United Farmers of Alberta are again putting on an international Farmers Night on the occasion of their annual dance to be held during the Convention in Edmonton 11th year. This annual dance will be held on Thursday evening, January 18th, commencing at 8:30 p.m.

The program we include greetings from fraternal delegates to our convention, the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" greetings to brides of organizations in other parts of Canada and the United States, the reading of the replies received in return, and also the Old Time Dance, happies selections, etc. The program will be in direct over C.K.U.A.

United Farmers Of Alberta

A total of 171 Junior Clubs, with a membership of 2,650 operated in Alberta during 1939, of which 107 were in the grain section while the remainder were divided among swine, beef and dairy calf clubs.

The club aim is for lighter and better quality in grain and live stock, and with sufficient emphasis on these two basic principles to make a high type of citizenship. That this work is proving of value has been recognized by Reginald E. Hamilton, of the world's wheat championship at Chicago in 1928, 1929 and 1931, who said the world championship in oats by Bill Shisdon of Andrew, both of whom were once members of the Junior Grain Clubs. Other important prizes were won by Junior Clubs members of the Junior Clubs.

Another example of a club's achievement is that of a grain section in Beaverlodge and Alberta where the time in the 1,000 acres of first class seed grain. Although this may be somewhat exceptional, the number of outstanding such achievements by over 100 Junior Clubs in Alberta is indicative that in the aggregate such a programme has a marked effect upon the agricultural conditions of the province.

Although improvement in the live stock industry due to club work is not perhaps as obvious as that of the grain clubs, there have been many examples in which a junior club has provided the basis for improving the live stock of a district. A prominent farmer once said that "without the value of the pure bred bull brought home there were scarcely any pure bred bulls in the district, very few bags which can be classed as pure."

In the Dairy Clubs for instance, over 180 Holstein and Ayrshire heifers have been secured by high grading cows in the province and placed in the hands of boys and girls who are receiving instruction through the club programme in the care, breeding and feeding of dairy cattle. This type of policy will have a definite influence on the average milk production per cow, a result which requires careful attention at the present time when cream of quality is being sought.

Many of the leaders in agricultural circles of the rural communities of Alberta. Three thousand boys and girls, well trained and well directed, can accomplish a great deal in making a better agriculture, better citizens and happier people.

A VICTORIA JANUARY IDYLL

Vancouver Island's reputation as Canada's Evergreen Playground is upheld by this idyllic scene photographed January 8th at Victoria, B.C. The lamb is a real one, only six days old. It was born January 1 on the farm of E. J. T. Woodward, near Victoria. The pretty little lady is daily, two-and-a-half-year-old daughter and only child of Commander R. A. ("Tony") Wright, R.C.N., and Mrs. Wright, Esquimalt. The flowers were picked in the gardens of the Empress Hotel. Canadians and Americans are visiting Victoria in large numbers this winter, the ideal weather permitting them to enjoy water golf, tennis, fishing, riding and hiking under splendid conditions.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

The ten years between 1930 and 1940 which have just ended, will probably be looked upon by the historians of the future as the period when the mind of mankind became preoccupied of the most peculiar diseases and madness—

That we could grow rather and richer by producing less and less. That we could have more automobiles and bathtubs and houses and more of everything else merely by printing more money! That by some magic the Lumpy people of the world would be better fed if foodstuff were burned or destroyed or ploughed under.

The period when people thought they could live within themselves, or were ashamed to import anything in return.

The period when the quiet student and thinker was laughed to scorn when he ventured to suggest that if people were deprived of food by their own folly it is abundance, then it would end in starvation, misery and war.

Happily these ten years are over and clearer thinking now is beginning to prevail, as is shown by the statement made by Prime Minister Chamberlain when he told us recently that there can be no lasting peace unless there is full and lasting trade between nations."

Following factors have tended to raise price: Exports of corn from the United States and Argentine are small until the end of March—Scandinavian countries recently purchased another one Manitoba wheat—Norway has made recent purchases of wheat—England and Wales have purchased 200,000 tons from wheat and 100,000 tons has barley in 1939 than in 1938.

$22,000 Paid To Alberta Drivers

Only half the number of applications for refunds upon turning in of Motor License plates were made by Alberta motorists up to January 10, which was the cut-off date compared with the similar period of last year, never or to information which official of the Alberta Motor Association has received from the provincial secretary's department.

The refunds this year aggregated $22,000 covering 12,000 licenses, while a year ago the amount was $45,000 and applied to about 23,000 cars.

While mild weather in December no doubt had considerable bearing on the drop in refund applications many drivers deciding to keep their cars for operation, doubtless other for the duration of the period.

When the new license year was started on 1 upon on April 1 instead of the former January 1, this change being due to large measure to strong representations made by the A.M.A., it was pointed out that it would when he continued to operate their cars throughout the winter, with consequent increased business to garages, service stations and others, many drivers deciding to keep their cars in operation, doubtless other for the duration of the period.

Happily these ten years are over and clearer thinking now is beginning to prevail, as is shown by the statement made by Prime Minister Chamberlain when he told us recently that there can be no lasting peace unless there is full and lasting trade between nations."

IN ANCIENT GREECE
The Greeks were not long in following the example of the ancient Egyptians in the making of beer. The Greeks came commercial to improve on their knowledge of the art of brewing as far back as 320 B.C., the writer Theophrastus tells us that the Greeks employed barley wine or beer ("Zython") in their daily life as well as in their festive meetings.

Gold In Automobiles

During its productive life-time, the richest gold field in the world, in South Africa, produced a total value in gold of approximately seven billion dollars. By way of comparison, it is interesting to note that since 1909 and including 1937, the discovery of the automobile has produced a golden flow of wages aggregating the stupendous sum of eighty four billions o dollars. These wages are directly traceable to the automobile and would not have existed except for its development.

A man who has struggled into the glare of the spotlight may find that it reveals defects more relentlessly than an X-ray machine.

EXPLANATION COLUMN

Last week we finished at the last item in Administration in the Payments (municipal only) column. We pass on to "Protection of Person and Property." Here we find pound expenses $38.15; Pests and weeds, $271.80; weed inspector $160.00; and ground fleas $71.60. None of these need any elaboration.

The next sub heading is Social Service, under which come old age pensions $1892.25. This amount is the Municipality's portion of the old age pension paid by the district during 1939. Of old age pension money, the two governments, dominion and province pay 90 per cent and the municipality 10 per cent.

Then comes mother's allowance $800.00; child welfare $619.35, old ones in homeless $1.00; and others $1.00. These are all specially dealt with in a special subdivision of relief costs appearing on another page.

Under the sub heading "Health" comes hospital bills amounting to $2072.50. Still under Health $1000.00 is paid on old debts to hospitals and $9272.50 spent on Municipal and Union hospitals during 1939. This is followed by "doctors" $1060.00. This is the salary of the Tofield Health Officer.

The next sub heading "relief and grants" is where the grants to the specially tabulated report on relief. Grants are down $56 00 from last year, the amount being $1,000 against $1256 00. Of the $75.00 the Salvation Army got $50.00 and the Beulah home $25 00.

It also includes the amount paid to ratepayers for road work done. There is no system of "working out taxes." But quite often it happens that ratepayers are in a position to do some road work and when this occurs, pay cheques are made out.

If the ratepayer is behind with his taxes he is asked to have the amount due him applied on his taxes. If his taxes are paid up to date he gets the money.

The amount ...ld to what might be termed the personal ... regular staff was approximately $2300.00, and that paid to individual ratepayers approximately $7000 These figures are approximate but close.

Going on to the "machinery, material" item of $287.35. This is all for blades purchased for next season's use. It was considered by Council best to purchase these last fall as metal prices are sure to be at high and probably much higher in the summer when the blades are needed. Anyway they are standard equipment and are bought, delivered and paid for.

The next item "Workmen's Compensation Board" is compulsory payment in respect to the District's employees.

Per road supervision by Councillors a sum of $686.00 was paid. This is up about $60.00 from last year. A detailed tabulation by divisions appears in another part of the statement.

The amount paid on machinery notes was $2789.94, including principal and interest. Of all this amount $1000.00 was on large grader; $200 on the patrol; $275 on rotary grader and $1250.00 on the caterpillar tractor. Interest on all of the notes amounted to $300.94.

The other three items under this sub heading need no further elaboration.

The next sub heading "loans" shows a loan obtained by the municipality from the bank early in the year and later paid back. The loan was for $3500.00 and the interest 60 cents.

The drainage taxes are part of a drainage scheme in the Ryley Lamm District. The drainage scheme has been in operation for several years now.

The next item is "balances" and is divided into the first month of writing this column should be read in conjunction with the balances at the top of the preceding column in the statement. It is wise however, to remember that bank laid cash balances in any large cash business like a municipality are only a very approximate guide as to the country's financial standing.

Next week we will touch on liabilities.

Premier Springs Election; Date Set For Tues. Mar. 26

The session, entirely unopposed announcements of a Dominion election to be held probably on March 26, was the signal for outbreak of news material and political manoeuvre. Wild and related subjects have been reported to relatively observers correctly.

Prime Minister R. ... W. L. Mackenzie King chartered all ... seats in a lightning strike on ... day last when he dissolved ... ment and called an "immediate ... eral election," probably ... March 26th.

Sunday, January 28th

Criticism was not lacking but in spite of the various motives advanced by the opposition for this peculiar "wartime" election, the air is rent and the political campaign is under way. The view of one Ottawa correspondent, Grant Dexter, is held by many. "That this will be the most bitter and fiercely fought campaign in Canadian history, short of the conquest of 1917, when Sir Wilfrid Laurier was defeated in Quebec by everywhere conceded."

IN ALBERTA

The Alberta government now in its fifth year of office will go to the country this year. It was expected that the provincial election would be held before the dominion one, but Premier King's move has almost made this impossible. So far there is no definite date set for a provincial election, but today' in general that it will be held soon.

LINDBROOK

Owing to the cold weather of late there has been a hell on the Lindbrook front, not being frozen up etc., so no one was out much, hence scarcity of news; but with the coming of milder weather, we look for increased activity here and hope to be a bit busy herein with our "communique."

One item which has just come to our notice, and that is the birth of a baby to Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Gill. Congratulations, merry not to have had this in earlier, but we just simply didn't hear of it until Friday.

Mr. A. C. Frary, is in Edmonton hospital ... from an ... bronchial trouble, we hope to see him around again soon.

Mrs. T. Grunsell is home again from hospital, and now Mr. T. Grunsell is up there in Edmonton in hospital. Talk of tough luck! That's about the limit and we sincerely hope they will be out and O.E. again in short order.

The Whist drive and Dance given at the Lindbrook hall on Friday night by the L.C.C. in aid of the Canadian Red Cross was very well attended. Quite a number from out of town were able to get there that couldn't have been on account of the roads, which were very prettily decorated in the Allies colors, red, white and blue by the committee in charge, and looked quite nice. In one school military whist, progressive, the ... of ... a dance was held, as one could please themselves and do which they preferred. Mrs. Ed. Shup's won Mrs. Edwards boys of Tofield supplied the music for dancing, and Mrs. Tasker, Leach was served at midnight by the ladies of the L.C.C. The first cushion was won by Mrs. Ed. Shup's and Mrs. Stroome, the former teacher here, and the other by Mr. Jack Blake of Lindbrook. Those were prizes donated by the L.C.C. We hope the Red Cross coffers will be enriched by a good deal as much so that the ladies of the L.C.C. will give another dance during the season. Everyone had a good time, so we hear them say.

The meeting held in the school on Monday evening, 29th of January, to discuss the formation of a co-operative organization to build a Community Hall here, was an overflow meeting. It opened at 8:30 p.m. with Mr. Chas. Morden as chairman and Mr. Lloyd Rose as secretary. The meeting was addressed by Mr. Dmay of Edmonton. He was followed by Mr. Hickey, whose remarks were brief but to the point, then there was general talk by Edmonton and the meeting adjourned to a re-opening at 1:30 p.m. when Mr. Dmay and the matter for which the meet had turned out for was "on the air, combined with the blue haze of tobacco smoke." It was finally decided that nothing could come to be sold if a proper organization with members subscribing $1 for a share in said organization, each share entitling them to a vote in the organization. The organization will be perfected at this stage with another meeting called for next Monday evening, same time and same place, where the Hats will be open to those who wish to pay their dollar and join in the organization. Then a board of directors will be chosen, who will direct the affairs for their terms of office. Mr. Chas. Morden deserves special mention for his handling so tactfully, those of widely divergent views on this matter, in fact at times it was getting rather personal, but no friend caused we guess we're all "ladies and gentlemen" at least we hope so, to till next Monday at the same hour, this is your News reporter saying "Good night."

BEHIND THE HOG

By A.B.C.

We forgot to shed a tear for "Bill" Parsons. He was also a good curler and a gentleman as the lot. The duty of this column is to comfort the afflicted curlers, and NOT to afflict the comfortable.

And now the first installment of "Brooms and Sweeping."

Actually curling is a game almost entirely dependent upon the skilful application of that lowly house-hold sweeper, the broom. Trophies are made with broom designs and a curler would almost prefer to pass without trousers than to leave out his trusty broom. Even when the broom is not causing the round rock a little further, it is in hand to polish away a roseny pasta pocket in a school boy curler. Besides the broom is used to maintain balance, to point a direction, to wedge a hard bearing toe more or even to sit on while the perplexed begins—like skip comes to a definite decision. But the broom is raised chief a indicator to the brethren that they have been in the process of sied under the armpit. It announces that the hands are cold. But every curler knows the broom is meant for ... instead of plying the broom may ... Some curlers are very fussy about ... and others alternate a slide and a sweep gracefully glide, while even the ... are not without their graces. Some have little movements of their own, ... the broom is held in front, or ... whether you prefer the overarm or the underarm sweep, the fact remains that the BUSY BROOM is the curler's best friend. Good sweepers do really work, ... the "sweph" girl just like any other guy in the country. Additional Duties include curtain comedy, news reel and short feature. Usual prices. Show starts at 8:30.

OBITUARY

Death claimed one of the old timers of the Meanith district when Mr. Norman Grunsell passed peacefully away at the home of his sister, Mrs. George Wangerow of Lakeshore, on Tuesday, January 23rd, 1940 at the age of 62 years. Mr. and Mrs. Grunsell had gone to Gibbons for a few days visit and were preparing to return home when Mr. Grunsell was struck with a heart attack from which he failed to rally. Mr. Grunsell came to Strathcona with his parents in 1892, and after three years came to South Cooking Lake. After a short residence in Athabasca, returned to Meanith where they have resided ever since. The high esteem in which Mr. Grunsell was held was evidenced at the funeral service which was held in Meanith hall on Friday, January 26. There was a capacity gathering of friends and neighbors joined in the simple and impressive service conducted by the Rev. Allan of Tofield, whose words of comfort and that blessed assurance they none day we shall meet again, again prevailed a ray of hope in those days of sorrow for those he mourn.

Interment was made in the South Cooking Lake cemetery beside his father and mother. The pallbearers were Messrs. Ferguson Davenport, Frank Swaby sr., Frank Swaby, Beaumgartner and Bean.

Those left to mourn his loss are his loving wife, two daughters, Mrs. Martin Crosschuts of New Sarepta and Isobel, and four sons, Percy, Donald, George and Lloyd at home. Two sisters, Mrs. Wangerow of Meanith and Mrs. Wingrove of Gibbons, and two brothers, Will and Lloyd of Athabasca, also two small grandchildren.

A beautiful floral tribute were received from: The family; Mrs. Murdoch, Steel, Jean, Maggie and Heck; Meanith community; Meanith Social Credit Group; Mr. and Mrs. Wilson and Erica; Mr. and Mrs. Bert Williams, Francis and Katie, Alex, Dorothy and Keith; Mr. E. Chapter VII

SYNOPSIS

Lee Hall, returning unexpectedly from a trip abroad to the Circle X ranch, has found his childhood sweetheart, Joan Conway, engaged to Matt Bradish, foreman of Matt Conway's ranch. Matt had also asked Joan to marry him, but she had refused because she knew that Matt had killed Lee's father, Jim Hall, in a fight. Lee, disappointed in love, had returned to the Circle X to work for Matt, but he had not revealed himself to Matt as the son of the man he had killed. Instead, he had assumed a new name and, disguised by a beard, had become a cowboy on the ranch. Matt's daughter Sally, who had been away at school, had returned home. Matt wanted her to be the queen of the Tofield Stampede, which was to be held on the Circle X ranch. Lee, who had fallen in love with Sally, was pleased when she chose Milton Bradish, Matt's foreman, to be her escort. Matt, who had become very wealthy from the sale of oil on his land, was planning to buy a ranch for Milton Bradish, who had served him faithfully for many years. Matt had also planned to buy a ranch for Lee, but Lee had refused the offer, saying that he wanted to work for his money. Matt, who had been drinking heavily, had become involved in a fight with Lee, and Lee had knocked him down. Matt, angered, had ordered Lee to leave the ranch. Lee, who had been in love with Joan since childhood, had planned to marry her, but Matt had refused to consent. Disappointed by hard times, Joan had become engaged to Matt. Matt's daughter Sally, who had returned from school, had become interested in Lee, and Milton Bradish, foreman of the ranch, had become interested in Joan. Lee, who had been away from the ranch for a few days, returned to find that Matt had killed himself. Lee, disappointed by hard times,

EXPLANATION COLUMN

Note—The heading "explanation column," is used more for the want of a better name than for a literal interpretation of the writing in it. The writing is merely a resume of Carshill annual financial statement explaining some items more fully than they are explained in the annual statement.

Going on to the assets, we find the first item in the assets (municipal) column is a listing of money in the bank and cash on hand amounting to $4821.16.

Then comes an item, machinery and maintenance accounts, $2881.11. These accounts are really interdepartmental municipal book-keeping. Receipts from certain sources are placed in a separate account in the bank and payments for certain items made against it. The machinery account is a method of charging a certain sum per year for the use of same or any other body who may use the larger units. In this way it is easily seen to what extent the large units are used in each division.

In the two accounts there was a loss on accounts there was a loss.

The item Municipal Taxes is a large one, $41,643 51. According to records this is the amount the municipality has remaining to collect. But it is well known that a large proportion of this amount will never be paid. Quite a large percentage of the arrears of taxes have to do with sub-divisions used as summer resorts around lakes and near to the Town of Tofield originally intended as industrial sites, etc.

These have not since lost their value as town or lakeside lots, but until such time as they are legally cancelled, they have to be written into the tax roll, taxes charged against them and the arrears carried forward.

In the liability section provision is made for $5,000 in the assets section to liquidate the full amount is listed as an asset.

Under accounts receivable four comparatively small items make a total of $167.54. These amounts are due the municipality from the provincial government, for commissioner, relief grant, etc.

The value of supplies on hand are listed at $800 00. The supplies consist of coloured material $400.00; blades $97.35; and gopher poison $54.00.

Fixed assets are listed at $14,-230.00. Of this amount building and office equipment accounts for $1,-920.00 Machinery however is the big item, amounting to $13,130 00. This includes all machinery, large and small.

Caboose and sundry equipment is listed at $1,200.00 and the vault at $1,100.00.

This brings us to a total estimated worth of $64,113.19.

From the above first comes outstanding accounts amounting to $3-4.40. This it will be observed is the first item in the liabilities column, into which we have just moved.

The next sub-section is social services and this account for $1,820.73 Of this $751.97 is the municipality's portion of the old age pensions. There is always an outstanding balance on this as the government is constantly paying pensions and reports to the municipality are made periodically.

The other item, Mother's Allowance is in the same class. It amounts to $1,066.76.

The next sub heading, Health, is for the first time in many years a blank. Quite a number of years ago when health arrangements were different to what they are now, quite a bill was run up with the different hospitals. The last payments on the old hospital debts were made during 1930.

DeDerval liabilities consist altogether of machinery notes. They amount to $2,000.00 and are as follows: Elevator grader, four notes $1,000.00 notes payable 1940 and 1941. Adams tractor, two $500.00 notes, payable 1940 and 1941. The total liabilities in money is $4,355.12.

Then comes that $26,000.00 listed as a reserve for non collection of taxes. This is put in as a liability because it is listed as an asset, and if it known that it will never be paid.

After everything has been taken care of there is a balance of nearly over liabilities of $24,200.32.

This almost brings us to the end of our story. There is plenty of other material in the financial statement, but it is mostly tabulated figures concerning those items listed in the Receipts, Payments, Assets and Liabilities, which in a rough manner we have tried to enlarge upon and make more clear.

Should further information be required by any ratepayer, the secretary, Mr. J. Letourneau will be pleased to give same.

Separate and distinct from this statement, we will publish next week a detailed public works summary by divisions.

Finally ratepayers should note that the Annual Meeting is to be held on Saturday, February 17th. If the number of ratepayers attending warrant it, the meeting will be held at the curling rink, Tofield.

Counsel: "What did 'the accused say to you?"

Witness: "He said there he had taken the car."

Counsel: "Yes, but did he speak in the third person?"

Witness: "No, there was no third person present."

Counsel: "Now, understand me, I mean, did he say: 'I have stolen the car?'"

Witness: "No, sir, you never came into the argument."

Canadian Legion War Service

On February 15 The Canadian Legion War Services will launch a nation-wide appeal for $500,000.

Considered in the cold light of the essential value to Canada and with our wrapping it be fits as a contribution to the peace of mind of the members of the navy, land and air forces, the work undertaken by this great wartime organization is a sound investment in Canada's future welfare. That the investment will be productive of dividends is assured actually being forthcoming by the very men now from the war's ashes—men eager to accept the responsibilities that they had relinquished when they joined the colors to serve their country in war.

The immediate and important aims of the Canadian program offered by the Canadian Legion War Services, a commonwealth wide Canadian service agency, are to provide the best possible allowance during that period of transition when the veteran is changing from military to civil life, to provide the best possible medical care for the sick and wounded, to help the veteran and his dependents in every way possible, and to assist the veteran in obtaining employment.

Chapter IX

BY AGNES

Lee Hollister, returning unexpectedly from a trip abroad to the Circle V ranch, his home for childhood, is troubled by a spell of neighborly, but cold reception. Friends of Matt Blair Lee's foster father and owner of the ranch, feel that Matt has failed himself, probably discouraged by hard times. The ranch is going to ruin and Virginia, Matt's daughter, is visiting the Kershaws, for some time. Lee learns that Matt and Virginia have sold the place to Milton Bradish, old associate of Matt's. Lee persuades Virginia to return to the ranch. Mrs. Ashe, follows her, accompanied by Stanley, son of Milton Bradish. Stanley thinks he may be able to discredit Lee in Virginia's eyes, and once says Josefa Ramirez is her liking. Ed. Lee.

At the corral she turned to find Stanley at her side. "The bunk house is ready," he told her. "I saw a couple of men carry out the blazes when I came in—something's up."

"Horses?" they said urgently. "What's any of the boys got?"

He indicated it briefly, and hurried. Virginia saw Stanley waited for him to go out and was off. Less than half a mile away they saw a red glow.

"Oh, it's a corn—not it's here!" Stanley cried. "Some careless cigarette we've left behind. Burn it, Lee! Let's ahead of her. Leaping figures of flame, throbbing through a mesh of smoke—dark patches of red patches — grotesque figures that moved in a poisoning, grim, weird dance like Hells—Stanley by.

She hesitated, pulled between anger and uncertainty. Where was Stanley, and why had he lagged behind when every man was needed? He saw the house afire! Lee's life! Her eyes raked the slope anxiously.

"Stanley, hurry!" she called back. No answer came. She flung herself off to run to the fire line as she dared.

Higher up on the slope men were working like methodical demons, her with swaying bodies and threshing arms, beating out flames with tufted brooms of hastily cut scrub, stamping others. But another black streak ran across his face. Stanley was coming up back of the fire line, smothering along with his usual hard to get back hands, going and coaxing. His ordinarily careful was somewhat rumpled, his shirt was open at the throat and silk another black streak ran across his chin.

"Oh—Stanley! Where were you?" There was sharp relief in her voice. "Over there," He indicated the fire with a careless movement of the head "The house is safe, or I'd have been, here sooner than I was."

"He—he disappointed," Stanley said calmly. "He's working along the fire line. Lee, you're not hurt?"

"No, no, I'm not hurt," she answered impatiently. "Stanley said calmly. "He's working against Miss Blair's interests to prevent her from selling her cattle to Lee, and he's willing to use fire to do it. He's giving a little scorched tantrum of his own. "You've been splendid—all of you—and this time her quick glance included Stanley.

She mounted quickly, with a last glance at the wide, blackened area. She still hot underfoot and giving of heat, and the men looking after her.

Lee was looking after two disappearing figures.

"Joey," he said irrelevantly, "there were two men in here."

Stanley Bradish might be a nonentity in the affairs of the world, but he showed spunk in his own way. Lee thought, as he saw Stanley grasp the situation for everyone to breakfast at the Circle V.

It was only part of a day's work. Dawn streaks were showing, faint pastel shades, deepening into apples, coral light, and Lee was coming to the ranch house, hunched and ragged tramp of a man, but somehow marked with authority, and carrying personal importance in the very lightness

"No cause for alarm now," he said hopefully. "How did you find out about it? Smell smoke, or did someone across the house tell you?

"I smelled smoke. And then Stanley by."

She hesitated, pulled between anger and uncertainty. Where was Stanley, and why had he lagged behind when every man was needed? He saw the house afire! Lee's life! Her eyes raked the slope anxiously.

"Right here," drawled a careless voice.

Stanley was coming up back of the fire line, smothering along with his usual hard to get back hands, going and coaxing. His ordinarily careful was somewhat rumpled, his shirt was open at the throat and silk another black streak ran across his chin.

"Oh—Stanley! Where were you?" There was sharp relief in her voice. "Over there," He indicated the fire with a careless movement of the head "The house is safe, or I'd have been, here sooner than I was."

"He—he disappointed," Stanley said calmly. "He's working against Miss Blair's interests to prevent her from selling her cattle to Lee, and he's willing to use fire to do it. He's giving a little scorched tantrum of his own.

"Trouble's, his middle name," said Lee wearily. "He eats it."

"They say you can't kill him more of it," Stanley suggested. "Hy fasher always said he was a hard one for the men who stood by us than he ever was."

The cards were on the table and the two men eyed each other coolly.

"If Stanley got a little out of hand, he is going to give you a bad time," Lee said bluntly, softly. "He doesn't like you, Gene."

"Well, why don't you? If you tell him to get out of here he'll be gone in a short while."

Very deliberately, under Stanley's watching eyes, Stanley drew a wallet from his pocket.

Lee's voice rose to an indignant wail. "He came sneakin' through them junipers back there when the fire was 'most over and began pokin' around. He's—he's—"

Stanley Bradish might be a nonentity in the affairs of the world, but he showed spunk in his own way. Lee thought, as he saw Stanley grasp the situation for everyone to breakfast at the Circle V.

It was only part of a day's work. Dawn streaks were showing, faint pastel shades, deepening into apples, coral light, and Lee was coming to the ranch house, hunched and ragged tramp of a man, but somehow marked with authority, and carrying personal importance in the very lightness

"No cause for alarm now," he said hopefully. "How did you find out about it? Smell smoke, or did someone across the house tell you?

"I smelled smoke. And then Stanley by."

She hesitated, pulled between anger and uncertainty. Where was Stanley, and why had he lagged behind when every man was needed? He saw the house afire! Lee's life! Her eyes raked the slope anxiously.

"Stanley, hurry!" she called back. No answer came. She flung herself off to run to the fire line as she dared.

Higher up on the slope men were working like methodical demons, her, smothering along with his usual hard to get back hands, going and coaxing. His ordinarily careful was somewhat rumpled, his shirt was open at the throat and silk another black streak ran across his chin.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

It is typical of all wars that prices gradually rise for all the things that farmers and all of us have to buy. The Canadian and Allied Governments today are doing their utmost to prevent any sportcarder increase in prices, but some increase unquestionably will take place.

That the farmers of the farmer is gainer rising prices for the things he has to buy, it would seem, would be fair during these war years to buy as little, and sell as much as possible; which means simply that he should be thrifty, and should in addition endeavour to provide for himself and for his family as much as his farm will produce of those things he needs at home, products such as eggs, butter, cheese, milk, cream, meat and vegetables, because what the farming family grows and itself consumes, is not affected by rising prices. And in the last war, for instance, most business men in Great Britain grew their own potatoes.

If farmers during this war, therefore, would make a special effort to produce for their family and for the simple necessities of life, all of which they can do, then I believe they would be doing not only their duty to their families, but in addition would be performing a patriotic duty to their country.

On a bed of gleaming barney a gorgeous barcolo bar, shining with rain gold, glittering with brilliance. "Don't rate a kiss for that?" "Make it." Sarah sighed happily. "I rest it on first."

She rushed eagerly for bacony, and "What's the matter?"

Stanley put his arm around Josefa's glance had dented beyond him, her eyes glowing. He heard a quick gasp as she tore herself away and began running like a fleet little fawn. Before he could even whirl to face danger, the crash of a rifle and a stinging shock came immediately.

Stanley, crest-red with fear, clapped a hand to his shoulder and then flung himself behind a juniper thicket. Crouching low, he shifted his position, his head free, side to side, peering to see from what point the attack had come. He could see nothing for a second save those bottle green bushes just giving away.

Waiting cracked his nerves. He dodged out and flung himself on his knee with a groaning curse for the twinge it gave him, and a moment later lying back upon the stone him away.

UNITED GRAIN GROWERS ADVOCATE INTERIM PAYMENT

"The Board of Directors of United Grain Growers Limited desires to urge that the Canadian Wheat Board be authorized to make a further distribution before seeding to Western wheat producers who have delivered wheat to the Board and that this should not be delayed until the whole wheat crop of nineteen thirty nine has been sold. Such a payment is made in sufficient time before spring work opens will materially assist in enabling Western agriculture to contribute its maximum strength to national production during nineteen forty. We would ask that such a payment be as large as possible in view of all existing circumstances and feel that an interim payment of not less than 15 cents a bushel would be justified."

PLATINUM FOR FELT SOLD FOR $11,000

Annual production of fine gems in New Brunswick averages 40,000 with a value in excess of $700,000, according to the Resources Department of the Canadian National Railways. One of the ranchers has developed a variety of platinum for that has created a great deal of interest. A platinum for gem resembles closely the New York for market and for $11,000. Other types bred in New Brunswick are pearl platinums, white faced silvers and also white-faced crossed foxes.

Used, with due consideration to the lower grades of wheat on which a larger payment may well be considered."

Cornhill M. D. Council Meet

A regular meeting of the council of M. D. of Cornhill was held in the District's office, Tofield, on Friday, February 9th.

There were present, Reeve Walker (in the chair); Councillors Anderson (part time), Coombes, Holmberg, Kortzenet and Swabey.

Minutes of previous meetings together with a list of accounts passed for payment at the last meeting were read and on motion of Councillor Swabey adopted.

The monthly financial statement was read and filed.

Mr. and Mrs. McKenna interviewed council regarding relief. Five dollars per month relief had been granted. After discussing the matter with Mr. and Mrs. McKenna for some time council decided to deal with it later.

Letter from Clover Bar School Division No. 128 re Board Meeting and inviting representation of Councillor M. D. to attend.

Letter from Canada Life Insurance Co. They desire information as to the procedure taken when the Council was taking title on land forfeited for taxes. They were informed as to whether they would be notified first. The letter was tabled pending further information.

Letter from Continental Lumber Co., re hauling poles. Council motion was tabled until budget is made out.

Letter from Union Tanning Co., re machinery. On motion of Reeve Walker it was decided to have the enterprise further checked over and a report made.

Arrangements will also be made to have gopher machinery checked over by Adams Co. A motion by Councillor Holmberg carried.

Letter from Jos. Athlesen suggesting the Council collect taxes from the renter on his quarter. Council felt that taxes could be paid by the renter if he so desired, but when taxes remain unpaid, there was no alternative in collecting them from the owner.

Letter from A. A. M. D. offering gopher poison. The district still has some on hand. The letter was tabled for a good deal, council felt it should think he'd be settling down to a job."

"He's too busy minding other people's business," Stanley sneered. "Then he grinned knowingly. "Never fellow reckon Lee's haugin' around to settle himself for life at the Circle V ranch, Josefa, honey? The girls have an offensive leer.

"He will be disappointed," Stanley said calmly. "He's working against Miss Blair's interests to prevent her from selling her cattle to Lee, and he's willing to use fire to do it. He's giving a little scorched tantrum of his own.

THE TRAINS IN!

(By Margaret Morton in The Winnipeg Tribune)

The hungrier of winter nestles down over our little country town these afternoons. The elevator rears up behind the village, the only prominent thing on the whole flat treeless landscape. Its many windows are shrouded in frost, and the snow piles high around its base. Behind the town loom the Riding Mountain hills, whiter than, touching heavy greyish clouds. Quickening hours over us like a mist, broken only by the creak of wood sledges coming down from the mountain heavily burdened; or the roar of an occasional car going through on the highway, or the whine of a distant cutter-machine. Few people are in the street.

But at three o'clock the town stirs. The draysman flys by on his speed to the station, where the stables, and the postal clerk follows, pipe in mouth, and the storekeepers gather near the post office, the evening changing imperceptibly. Here in the main street look unexpectedly southward.

Then a faint web of smoke is seen. Then a low rumble is heard, growing louder, the whistle blows. Loud and shrill it sounds above the roar of the engine and echoes over the fields, through the winter calm. The whole town comes nearer, passes the mile and a half of country road, and enters the town, its wheels whining from the steel, smoke spewing from its funnel, whistling, shrilling, whistling, and clangs into the cold station. With a shriek of powerful brakes it stops.

The crabb's in! The town is gathered. Mr. Thorn is there in his best boots at the station, now shooting, now shouting, now at the express office. People get off from their homes along the line. Soon the school bus will come down the road, and the travellers bound for Main street. Now there is a crowd in front of the post office. People get letters

Bequets And Brickbats Thrown At Cornhill Annual Meeting

Being called over the coals for spending too much at the convention and being accorded a vote of appreciation was the experience of Cornhill Council at the Ratepayers Annual Meeting held at the District's Office on Saturday last.

The meeting was called to order by Returning Officer Dodds who suggested that the meeting appoint a chairman. Messrs. Murray, Piper and Goeglein being nominated and all in turn having withdrawn, the meeting's choice fell upon Mr. A. C. Mardon who presided over the meeting.

The chairman called for the appointment of a secretary and W. Watson was appointed.

The minutes of the last annual meeting were read and on motion of T. R. Murray, adopted.

The financial statement having been pretty well covered during the past few weeks, drew little comment from the meeting, a suggestion that it be read being greeted with silence.

Mr. Oulton said he had noticed in the financial statement that two councillors had been paid $50.00 each for the purpose of attending the Municipal District Convention held in Edmonton. Mr. Oulton thought the amount was too large.

Reeve Newby, who was one of the delegates, stated that while the amount appeared large, quite a portion of it went for railway fare. It was explained that the railroad fares of the delegates are all pooled, Mr. Osborne pays the same fare regardless of his distance from the convention centre. The reeve's explanation was accepted.

Councillor Newby asked that delegates could not get along with much less. The convention was important in an educational sense to the councillors and he felt the ratepayers of Cornhill did not want their councillors to be without necessary knowledge to enable them to efficiently meet of their duties. While two delegates were appointed two other councillors in attendance would be out part time. Part of their expenses were met out of the original allotment.

Mr. Murray said he was glad that Mr. Swabey had stressed the educational value of the convention. He thought it very important that councillors were elected to do the ratepayers business and he was of the opinion they should not be cut down too tight.

Mr. Reeve spoke regarding the collection of . ss. He was of the opinion taxes should only be collected by the office.

It was moved by Mr. Piper, seconded by Mr. Mowatt, that if a tax collector should be again appointed, the appointment should be made from among the ratepayers.

Mr. Oulton spoke at some length on the tax collecting question, being completely against any such individual. He wanted to see a return to the old system, the whipped singly and suitable for couch cover or bed throw ..... Each $1.75 Mr. Piper's motion "that we have no tax collector but the secretary." The amendment was seconded by Mr. Hoover.

Discussion continued on the tax collector question. Mr. Oulton again spoking in opposition to it.

Mr. Dodds requested information regarding the legality of the appointment and whether there was any rate of commission. It was established that the council was within its jurisdiction when appointing a tax collector.

Mr. Williams thought it a good one to have a tax collector.

Mr. Harrison asked whether the financial condition of the district had become any better through having a tax collector. If it has, the appointment of a tax collector should be continued.

The chairman then called for a vote, whereupon Mr. Piper with drew his motion and the amendment became the motion. On a show of hands the motion "that we have no other tax collector but the secretary" was carried.

During the above mentioned discussion the subject of allowing 10 per cent discount on taxes was broached.

Mr. Swabey said the council was confronted with a situation where they needed money before taxes ordinarily came in. If they had not allowed the discount they would have had to borrow from the bank. Previously they had borrowed from the school reserve fund, but this practice had met with much criticism. Therefore they were determined not to resort to borrowing funds for this purpose and so the 10 per cent discount was allowed.

Mr. Walker said he was pleased that this matter came up. It takes so much money to run the district that he was pleased to know that the reeve it is for those who pay promptly.

Mr. A. C. Hoover asked if Council had taken advantage of the 2 in 1 policy of road building. Mr. Reeve was informed Council had to some extent.

Mr. A. J. Williams asked for information regarding Dr. Law's health insurance plan.

Mr. Swabey gave a brief account of the circumstances leading up to the present proposal. He said that for some years the doctor had been engaged as M.H.O. at a salary of $1600.00 per year. Last March he presented a list of work done during 1938 and the value thereof which amounted to over $6000.00. Included in the list were a number of people who in the opinion of the council should have been able to pay their own doctor fees. Therefore council started to look around for a better set up.

They felt if some ratepayers were to receive this service, all should. A committee was appointed to go into the whole question, but before this committee made its report the Doctor came forward with his proposal. Generally speaking the council is in favor of the proposal. The committee however turned in a report. Mr. Swabey went on and roughly explained the scheme, the details of which appear elsewhere. He was of the opinion that state medicine was being passed on and he thought the proposal was a step towards it.

A number of other speakers spoke in the same strain.

Mr. C. Coombes explained that the plan would first apply in Cornhill M. D. than Beverly Lake then further east as far as Holden.

Mr. Reeve asked if sufficient families sign up when does the plan go into effect. The reply came, "March if possible though it was doughtful now. Council still have to work out a plan in order to encourage indigents."

Some discussion then arose as regards hospitalization. Mr. Harrison explained, with actual experience to back him up, the difference between private, public, semi-private and semi-public wards.

SUCCESSFUL CARNIVAL HELD FRIDAY LAST

On Friday last the Tofield Young People's Society staged a very successful fancy dress ice skating carnival on the local rink.

There were quite a few counter attractions that evening, but the attendance at the carnival was quite good. Costumes were varied, and in many cases excellently prepared. Mrs. Brady as Aunt Jemima met with popular approval, due both to the excellent copy of the famous character, and her antics on the ice. Mrs. Brady was the former Miss Clara Abbott, a youngster of about 18 years, was but her identity remained unknown until long after the judging. Other outstanding costumes included Miss M. Kellal as an Eskimo girl of some sort and Mr. McIntosh as Robin Hood.

There was an excellent list of classes, and in some of these competition was not very keen, in others quite a number lined up before the judges. The classes, were as follows: Junior boys, comic, Don Law; Junior boys fancy, Don Stinson; Junior girls, comic, Joyce Wilson; Junior girls, fancy, L. Anderson; Senior girls, fancy Miss Ivy Pyle; Senior comic, Pat Sears; Comic, fancy, D. McIntosh; Ladies, comic, Mrs. Brady; Ladies, fancy, Mrs. Ingram; Gentlemen, comic or otherwise, Mr. T. Sabiel and Ellis M. Whyte.

A good list of skating races were held off, both the younger and older boys and girls having ample opportunity to show their turn of speed on the steel blades. Some of these were pretty good too. Two novelty races were also taken, a boat borrow race and a sleigh race provided much amusement.

The evening wound up with a mascuin dance. Music throughout the evening being supplied by Hazel Christenson.

The Young People's Committee in charge of arrangements, were: Miss Stewart, H. McCall and Jack Bateman. Bellamy and Stinson the Hot Dog team were on hand keeping the hungry and thirsty supplied.

Just One New Face On Cornhill Council

On Saturday last at the Ratepayers meeting held at Elnor J. Brown and Chas. Holmberg were nominated in division two for the office of councillor for the Municipal District of Cornhill. In division three, D. R. Swabey was nominated. Mr. Swabey is the sitting councillor and there being no other nominations he was declared elected by acclamation.

Within the time limit allowed by the Act, Mr. Brown withdrew his name, which caused the other nominee, Mr. Elner Brown to be elected by acclamation, for division two.

Mr. Chas. Holmberg has been a member of Cornhill Council for very many years. So many years in fact that it is hard to remember a council meeting when he was not around. Mr. Holmberg did however have a two-year vacation from office and he believe the newly elected councillor is the man who represented division two at that time.

HILLS OF DESTINY

Chapter X

Lee Blair returns unexpectedly from a trip abroad to find Mark Blair, his father, and owner of the Circle J ranch, seriously ill. The ranch is practically run and Mark's daughter Virginia is assisted in the management by Curly Wade, foreman of the ranch. Her brother Lee, who left home years before, is now Mark's assistant. Lee's wife Virginia is from Boston. Her aunt follows Lee to the ranch. Lee, impressed by Curly, one of Mark's staff of cowboys, starts to date Virginia, directs Lee and shows herself into his good graces. Virginia is upset with Curly's attentions to Josefa, and is quite jealous.

Upon the whole, it was a rich and happy household that Virginia Blair presided over.

Lee Blair, after a week on the ranch, was as much a member of the family as if he had been born there. Even Mark Blair, who was not given to demonstrations of affection, showed his pleasure in his son's return by a certain gruff tenderness that was very touching. Lee, who had been away from home since he was a boy of seventeen, found himself back in the old life as though he had never been away. He was glad to be back, glad to be with his father and sister, glad to be on the ranch. He was glad to be in the saddle all day long, riding over the range, looking at the cattle, and he was glad to be in bed at night, sleeping the sleep of the healthy and tired.

Lee's wife, Virginia, was not so happy. She was homesick for Boston, for her friends there, for the life she had been accustomed to. She was lonely, and she was unhappy. She had not realized how much she would miss the things she had always had, and she found herself missing them more and more as the days went by.

Lee, who had been away from home so long, was not homesick. He was glad to be back, and he was happy. He had not realized how much he had missed the ranch and the life he had led there until he found himself back in the old surroundings. He was glad to be back, and he was happy. He had not realized how much he had missed the ranch and the life he had led there until he found himself back in the old surroundings. He was glad to be back, and he was happy.

W.W.W. Club News

The novelty dance, sponsored by the W.W.W Club and held in the Woodlawn school on Friday Feb. 16, was a huge success. There was an unexceptionally large crowd which consisted of people from Lindbrook, Spidwood, Mequinch, Hay Lakes, Ketchamoot, Kingman, Tofield and Round Hill. There were two artistic dances given before supper, the sport dance and the Ballroom dance. After supper the dance was turned over to a Loop Your dance. Instead of a gentleman asking the lady it was two-turns. The ladies were not a bit shy and everybody thoroughly enjoyed themselves. There was another novelty dance later on, passing the orange. Canadian Legion War Services

(Official Weekly News Letter

The Canadian Legion War Services recently opened in London its first overseas residential club for Canada's fighting men.

The building, which hadn't been occupied since its erection last year and which was leased for the duration at an amazingly low rental, is one of the most modern and best equipped in the city. Situated in Grosvenor street, near Grafton street station and just a stone's throw from the theatre district, the new club will accommodate 72 soldiers.

Erected last year by Mrs. Cecil Chesterton, founder of the "Cecil Houses," as a home for small-wage girl earners but never used for that purpose owing to the outbreak of war the building has a large recreation room, library, dining-room, and lounge in addition to well-ventilated bedrooms each accommodating four guests. On the roof of the structure is a sun terrace where men may enjoyed healthful relaxation and physical training. An easily-reached canteen and other facilities of the club may be used free of charge.

The famous Canadian comedienne whom the British Peerage lists as Lady Peel was known better known as Beatrice Lillie, added to her Philanthropic activities a few weeks ago when she entertained Canadian troops at Aldershot during a concert tendered them by the Salvation Legion War Services.

"Bea," together with her the entire stage company of her London musical revue, "All Clear," including an orchestra of twelve, performed two performances that saw waterlines thinned and expectantly. Singing sophisticated songs that have made her the idol of the continent to the accepted encore after encore and gave the boys the best bit of real fun they have enjoyed since the arrival overseas. Fred Emney, who for four years starred with the old "Dumbells" as the "Silly Ass" at the piano, also took part in the performance by ringing a number of songs which he introduced to Canadian audiences years ago.

Miss Lillie gave up lucrative engagements in the United States to help entertain the boys on active service overseas. She is convinced that plenty of wholesome fun will play a great part in helping the fighting men to win the war.

Here inside glimpses of the splendid work being done by the personal services bureau of The Canadian Legion War Services were given by Major J. E. Thompson, the Legion's Director of personal services officer at Exhibition Park, Toronto, where a large garrison of the C.A.S.F. is in training.

Major Thompson, who last week visited national headquarters at Ottawa, related that the Legion's service and active assistance are sought by an average of fifty soldiers and relatives of soldiers every day. Not all are alone. Most of these have been heart-rending examples of ruptured domestic lives caused by the war.

One particularly pathetic case which was satisfactorily taken care of by the Legion concerns the death of a mother whose two sons had gone overseas with the 1st Division. Following the death in the hereland that three was no money to provide her with a proper burial. The Legion raised the sum who accordingly the Legion's office to arrange for interment. The sons in turn promised that the expenses involved would be repaid from their pay and allowances once a month. Had the Legion not stepped in the gallant lady would have gone to rest in Potter's Field. The sons have expressed their "everlasting gratitude" to the Legion.

Another example of the Legion's good concerns a woman who complained that she was not receiving 5 cent of her husband's pay and was nearly destitute. The Legion took the matter up with his regimental branch and was informed that the husband had stopped his wife's allowances. A wire was then sent to the officer in command of the man's unit. The man was paraded, thoroughly reprimanded, and ordered to make re-assignment.

An instance where the Legion has been able to safeguard the property of a young soldier now in England was also related by Major Thompson. The boy's mother died recently leaving considerable estate. The Legion visited his officer commanding and the boy agreed to have his estate turned into a trust fund until his return. By doing this the Legion spared the young man a great deal of worry and possible financial loss.

Warble Fly Powder Can Now Be Obtained Of M. D. Office

When cattle hear the Warble Fly their tails go up and away they go. Dairy cows go dry. Beef cattle lose weight. Hides are spoiled. The approximate loss in Canada is $15,000,000 each year.

What are warbles? Warbles are swellings about the size of a small walnut occuring upon the backs of cattle in the spring or early summer caused by the presence in them of the maggot of one of the Warble flies, Hypoderma Bovis or Hypoderma Lineatum.

The larvae of these two species of warble flies. Hypoderma Bovis and Hypoderma Lineatum, are found in cattle (and occasionally horses). Both are extensively found in most countries and like bee, in stock owners to many millions of dollars.

Hypoderma Bovis is about five-eighths of an inch long. Its tail colouring is a distinctive orange yellow. The legs are smooth and bare but five hairs.

Hypoderma Lineatum is slightly over one-half an inch long. Its tail which is quite distinctive, is a reddish orange. The legs are rough and hairy.

Hypoderma Bovis lays its eggs in cattle in summer months when the cattle are running. One egg is laid on the hair of each cow, or calf and attached by means of a gummy. The fly has a most terrifying effect on cattle and causes them to stampede madly in all directions. The Hypoderma Lineatum irritates cattle but less than does the Hypoderma Bovis. The eggs are generally deposited while the cattle are feeding. The fly is a number of eggs up to fourteen are laid on a hair and each egg takes a full view. In both cases larvae emerge after several days and pierce the skin of the animal through the hair, thence through the lymph vessels to the heart. Under the skin the larvae forms a small swelling, (this swelling occurs about the middle of winter) which remains at first, but gradually becomes still and enlarges. A small opening appears in the centre through which the larvae breathe. In the spring the larvae emerge and fall to the ground and pupate. Several weeks later the adult fly emerges. Warble fly powder with full directions for using can now be obtained at the M. D. of Cornhill office at 50 cents per lb.

For average infections one pound of the Warble Fly powder is sufficient for four treatments on thirty cattle. Powder comes in three quarter pound packages, packed four to a one pound carton. Terms are cash.

An important and interesting feature of the Warble fly pest is that the fly itself does not travel far. Therefore a community, by concerted action, can in two or three seasons completely eliminate this scourge from their cattle.

Edison's Old Train Comes To Life

Port Huron, Mich. Feb. 19—Old Sam Hill, famous wood-burning locomotive of the 1880's and the famous Edison train, on which Thomas A. Edison, famous inventor, worked as a news butcher until he set the train afire with his chemical experiments back in 1869, rode the rails again when the old train reposited its run from Detroit to Port Huron on the Grand Trunk-Canadian National Railways. This was the feature of the Edison Memorial Celebration arranged for February 16, ere of Edison's 93rd birthday which falls on Sunday, February 11.

Another feature of the Memorial Celebration was the first showing here of the film, "Young Tom Edison." Mickey Rooney, who stars in the picture, hawked his wares of candy, tobacco and fruits as Edison the boy did when he lived in Port Huron from 1854 to 1864. Aboard the train were Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner, Michigan, Edsel Ford and other guests.

The old train run under its own power from Detroit to Port Huron and arrived in Port Huron's Edison station where Edison worked as a telegrapher after he lost his newspaper job, and where he and some others across the St. Clair river by train whistle when the telegraph system failed.

Jeeper's Creeper Tells Pilots All

Winnipeg, Man. Feb. 19:—Aviation is developing a language of its own. Take for instance the Link Trainer, which puts T. C. A. pilots through their flying paces before they go aloft at the reception of one of the big Lockheeds. All trans-Canada pilots start their training with a good buckling of real flying behind them, and when they go to T. C. A. they start off over lands and waters under a stiff course. The trainer which before it is in a place in nearly every respect except that it never leaves the ground. When he climbs into its cockpit, the pilot pulls a hood over his head and "flies" by instruments.

Farmers' Bonspiel For Monday And Tuesday

Well what do you know about this? A bonspiel exclusively for farmers and their sons. Bankers, preachers, storekeepers and postmasters will have to stay on the sidelines during this event. And don't be too surprised either, there are plenty of excellent curlers among the farming fraternity and there is no question of the success of the event. There are two competitions and eight prizes in each competition.

The farmers' bonspiel is being sponsored by John Morton and entries can be made with him or Ed Hardy. There is no entry fee.

Political Front Quiet Here

Up to time of writing the political front here has little to report. Tofield and immediate district being situated on the extreme south of both federal and provincial constituencies political interest here does not flare up quite as quickly as in districts which are closer to the centre of the political map.

Dr. Archer of Lamont is the liberal standard bearer in the Federal election.

Major Fans has consented to run as Conservative.

There will in all probability be a Social Credit Candidate and a C.C.F. candidate.

Tofield town and territory north is in the Vegreville federal constituency and immediately south of town the Camrose Federal constituency commences.

For the provincial election we are in Clover Bar constituency, Candidates for this constituency include A. H. Gibson, Port Saskatchewan; Independent; H. Baker, Social Credit; Mr. Roberts, Port Saskatchewan, C.C.F.

RADIO SWAMPS TOFIELD

In a final game of hockey played at the Tofield rink last week, the Radio protectors defeated the local senior team by the handsome score of 10-4. In justice to the locals it should be said they were not at full strength. But even so Bardo put up a bound of hockey that fully earned them their win.

Chapter XI
SO MORRIS

Lee Hollister, acting unexpectedly from a sense of duty, had left Matt Blair, who had been his friend since childhood, and Matt's sister, Virginia, to be the first to tell each other.

"I love you," he declared, "a million times more every minute."

He stepped short at a stricken look on her face.

"Oh, don't be nice to me." She buried her face in his shoulder with a smothered wail. "I hate myself. You think that I've sold it—when you love it so."

Is that the trouble?" He put a hand under her chin, and for a moment studied her shadowed eyes. "It looks," he said thoughtfully, "as if we'd better get it being again. Let's get down to cases. Was it a cash transaction? Did he give you a check?"

She nodded, looking perplexed.

"Yes But Lee—"

"Did you deposit it?"

"No. Somehow I couldn't."

"Good!" He laughed under his breath. "Don't worry, honey. We're getting very right now to persuade your Simon Roller Bradish to tear up that deed."

"But I've signed it. I've given my word. How can we do such a thing?"

"You undermine my powers of persuasion." He grinned at her, suddenly gay. He saw her anxious look and laughed again, picking her up with a swift, heady line and pushing her neatly down.

"Don't be alarmed. I'm just going to convince him that he would be a fool to give it back. Bet you a wedding ring I can!"

It was the height of confident young folly, but there was something infectious about it. Life was suddenly gay and exciting. Lee could do anything.

Milton Bradish and his son saw Lee from the street. The Bradish was standing by the window and looking out with pleasant complacency at the wide valley that at last was his own.

Stanley also looked out as the two heroes came up to the steps. As they came down the hall he reached for a magazine and idled over to the other side of the room, looking around with a careless nod as Lee Hollister appeared in the door, but not volunteering introductions. Lee ignored the deliberate rudeness.

"You are Mr. Bradish? My name is Hollister."

Have'd you do, Hollister. I've heard of you . . . Come in."

"Virginia tells me that you're thinking of taking over the CircleV."

"The deed passed this morning." Mr. Bradish looked sharply at his visitor as he became blond again. "I'm a business man, you know, and I don't make more than I do." He was the personification of hotel frankness. "I have been very much interested with the ranch for a long time and I know what long consists about its place.

"Virginia, it can't be true! Whatever I have any right to a father's name or not, it couldn't be true of Matt."

"Uh, Lee, don't you know—by this time?"

A little later she raised her head from a flannel shirted shoulder. They smiled at each other.

More Descriptive Name Adopted By Line Elevators

Proposed to Adopt new Second Improved Marketing Method

"A new name more descriptive of the organization has been adopted by the North-West Grain Dealers' Association", said C. W. F. Hartinger, President, in a statement issued recently. "The new name is North-West Line Elevators Association. The former name was adopted in the interest of grain growing and trading in Western Canada. Membership in the Association is limited to country elevator organizations whose function is the handling of grain.

"The function of the North-West Grain Dealers' Association has been that of a service organization to company, who operate a total of 2,471 line country elevators and terminal elevators with a total capacity of $1,000,000 bushels, and the farming community which they serve. Line elevators have centralized their efforts for the advancement of agriculture through this organization", he continued. The latest president of the Association is endeavoring to extend membership in the organization of an agricultural Department under the direction of Dr. E. W. Newby, one of the outstanding field crop authorities of Western Canada. This Department is organized for the sole purpose of rendering assistance to the farmer in his struggle for a healthier and more prosperous agricultural industry on the prairies. Undertakings of line elevators in recent years include: active participation in the work of the Bracken committee in the reorganization of the Canadian Wheat Board and a decided activity in the reduction of the spread between initial price of 80 cents per bushel and the price of a Western division of the National Research Council in connection with Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Research into finding new industrial uses and expanded markets for wheat; financed research extended over a period of several years into weed control irrigation; financed weed crop improvement work, placed exhibits at fairs depicting improved farming methods and possibilities of research expanding more by wheat; financed tour of Forestry Association's Tree Planting Car through the prairie provinces; establishment of free circulation libraries throughout the rural areas of the province, which is demonstrated to governments and municipalities that co-operation is the basic price at which the farmer

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

During every war that has been fought in the past some inflation of money has taken place. This inflation has resulted in rising prices. In past wars the prices of raw materials and of wholesale commodities have risen faster than retail prices. Apparently the same thing is happening in this war, for the price of wheat since September 1st has risen by 30per cent whereas during the same period the prices of the things farmers have to buy have only risen on the average by 3 per cent. If these substance keep up in anything like the same proportion, the purchasing power of a bushel of wheat and other farm products will be back to that which they enjoyed in 1913-1914, and our farmers then would be moderately well off.

But prices compared with the price he pays for manufactured farm requirements which he must buy.

Early Spring Or Caribou In Error

The Pas, Man. Feb. 26:—Fifty thousand barren land caribou are either making a big mistake or the North can expect an early spring. Herders of the hardy Artic denizens are reuring to their spring feeding grounds northwest of Churchhill and along the coast of the Hudson Bay, from the timberline about 200 miles north of The Pas, according to word brought here recently. Scattered across 50 miles of sparse bush land, tens of thousands of the animals are feeding about 75 miles south of Churchhill near the Hudson Bay Railway.

It will eff.

At the present moment, however, the purchasing power of a bushel of wheat is still only 72 per cent of what it was in 1913-14, so that a further advance of the price received for the products farmers sell, in comparison with the prices of the things they have to buy for living and production., will be welcome, and still would only be fair and equitable.

MR. HOLMBERG WITHDRAWS—

YOU KNOW, council chambers and school classrooms have something in common. In both of them the seats are occupied by a constantly changing personnel. Of course there is a limit to how long boys and girls stay in school and there is no limit, except that of public approval, as to how long a councillor may retain his seat, but it is true that the mills of learning keep forever turning within the austere walls of the classroom and problems of local government to be solved keep constantly appearing within the confines of the council chamber —no matter who may be occupying the chairs in either place.

The above remarks are prompted by the news that Mr. Chas. Holmberg withdrew his candidature for the office of councillor. Off and on for quite a number of years we have been contacting the Cornhill Municipal District Council. During that time we have seen a gradual but ever changing personnel around the council table. Just from memory and on the spur of the moment comes to mind the names of Rorem, Bert Williams, A. J. Williams, Thomson, Glenn, Abernethy, McSporran, Billman, and, no doubt, if time permitted and memory was active many other names could be added to these. But somehow or other throughout the years, within Cornhill Municipal circles Chas. Holmberg seemed always to be around. In fact it is difficult for us to recall a council of which he was not a part. Just when he first elected and how many many years he served, is information we still have to obtain, but we do know from personal observation that as councillors come, Mr. Holmberg was a good councillor. Gifted with a very pleasant manner and the ability to express his thoughts luckily he gave each piece of business his careful consideration and decided according to his judgment, whether it coincided with other opinion or not. Attending a council meeting at any time was real task for Mr. Holmberg as there was about thirty miles to drive, but during the winter when driving was impossible, it meant leaving home Thursday night and quite often not getting back until Saturday morning. Even so, he ever rarely missed a meeting. In a way, we were more surprised to hear of his nomination than of his withdrawal. We knew that for private reasons he was considering relinquishing public office, and probably the consenting to nomination, was in his opinion, the last dutiful act to the division which for so many years he had represented.

To Mr. Holmberg we wish a happy retirement. To his successor, Mr. Broen, we wish bon voyage on the sea of municipal affairs.

AS OTHERS SEE US—

(Christian Science Monitor)

Return of the "old-fashioned winter" brought with it a notice in many a country newspaper that had not appeared in a generation: "Wanted—Stove Wood on Subscription." Indeed, some editors make it considerable stronger and urge delinquent subscribers to bring in the wood they promised in the fall. For if there is anything that goes against the grain of a rural editor it is to pay out cash for fire-wood. There long has existed between him and some of his farmer friends the tacit understanding that a load of wood will pay for a year's subscription to The Gimlet. . . . But he draws the line at turnips.

"Ye Editor," like all lovers of the crackling log and the cheerful fireplace, is particular about his wood. He shed no tears when chestnut disappeared; it "popped" on the andirons and scattered sparks on precious rugs. Elm, too, has a bad name, mainly because it is impossible to split and hard to ignite. Hickory—still in demand where smokehouses remain an institution; ash, walnut, and oak—practically all hardwoods—burn dependably, slowly, evenly. But of them all, the true lover of an open fire most often prefers beech, which has all the other good qualities of hardwood and leaves only a feathery white ash. Of course, there is fragrant cedar, apple wood, and wild cherry—but these are refinements of fireplace pleasure. "Ye Editor" doubtless will be satisfied with anything burnable . . . if delivered before another cold spell.

Confident That Legion Campaign Will Be Success

Ottawa, Feb. 27:—Complete expectation that this week the $600,000 objective of The Canadian Legion War Services will be oversubscribed "over the top" was expressed here by Brigadier-General Alex Ross, national campaign chairman of the Legion's wartime organization.

General Ross said that the appeal, which officially started February 12, very properly ended on the 25th, the timely death of the Legion's Grand President, His Excellency Lord Tweedsmuir, who "staunchly and with great enthusiasm supported the Legion in all its efforts, and who was loved by every ex-service man in the land".

The death of his Excellency was a severe blow to the Legion, General Ross stated, and in his passing the organization lost one of its best and most active friends. One of his last official acts was to endorse the Legion's appeal by publicly urging the support of the Canadian people.

"We pursued to pay tribute to his memory." General Ross said, "even though we know that he would have wanted nothing to interfere with our war effort."

General Ross announced the Legion's gratitude for the generous response already made by the public. This response, he said, was indicative of the nation's appreciation of the Legion's important work on behalf of the Canadian armed forces at home and overseas and "augurs well for the success of the campaign."

The Linseed Situation

(Experimental Farm News)

Canada imports both limseed and linseed oil. During the past six years an average of over 800,000 bushels of linseed and 30,000 cwt. of linseed oil, equivalent to approximately 1,000,000 bushels of seed were imported annually. Linseed is used chiefly by the linseed oil industry which during the past nine years crushed an average each year of over 1,000,000 bushels. Having been so long on an import basis, linseed stocks in Canada are relatively low, explains Dr. C. G. McGregor, Cereal Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

The flax acreage in Western Canada reached a peak in 1918 when over two million acres were seeded and 32 million bushels were produced. During the war period the acreage was reduced considerably and during these years Canada produced only between six and eight million bushels of flaxseed annually. At the end of the war, 20 million acres were producing grain in the Prairie Provinces but only about one per cent of this was devoted to flax. Since that time over 10 million acres have been added to the crop producing area of these provinces and flax has been grown in practically every crop leaving no flax for seeding and feeding purposes. At an average yield of eight bushels per acre for the Province Portions the flax" requirement during the next decade might occupy 125,000 acres annually. Surplus acres could be found in Canada but always have found a ready market in the United States where production annually falls short of consumption by about 15 million bushels. The high tariff of 56 cents per bushel on flaxseed is such that when available it still costs more than the domestic price. However, imports from three seasons a long period of local which during wartime, may become expensive and hazardous. For the duration of the war, therefore, it may not only be desirable but may become necessary that Canada produce at least sufficient flax for domestic consumption.

Flax compares with wheat as a cash crop when the price of flax is approximate twice that of wheat. On this basis the price of flax for seeds months has been in favour of flax and it is reasonable to expect that this relationship may continue for some time. From the farmer's standpoint, the chief advantage of flax from the monitor of price, an additional cash crop provides a further assurance against failure or overproduction in the crops commonly grown. In case the flax crop may have certain disadvantage, it undoubtedly is a crop which should receive serious consideration, especially at this time, wherever it can be grown satisfactorily.

Red Cross Residential Club Opening In London

The Canadian Red Cross Society's first residential club for the accommodation of Canadian soldiers on leave in London, England, will be opened within the next few days, it was announced recently. It will provide overnight accommodation, day service and meals at "very modest" rates.

Acting on a report from its London Advisory Committee, the Society recently authorized immediate establishment of such clubs to care for the Canadians.

During the last war, the Society's Maple Leaf Club provided 800,000 night's lodging and over one million meals to Canadians on leave in London, and this added to the comfort as well as the health of the men of the Canadian army.

A report from London states that a similar club provided during the present war by the Victoria Leagues in London, is already over-crowded and applicants are being turned away.

The building and equipment now provided by the Canadian Red Cross will be opening by the Canadian Women's Club in London, the Red Cross underwriting the net cost of this operation.

Red Cross Needs

Although thousands of ——— started knitting as soon as war was declared, it is doubtful if many of their wary blasts to make homemade mores have found their fighting forces as needed the articles that come from the clicking needles.

The need is still urgent, say Canadian Red Cross officials, and so just for the benefit of those who would like to do their bit and don't know what is needed, here are some of the articles recommended by this organization.

More detailed instructions may be obtained from local Red Cross groups or from Toronto headquarters. We are urged to follow all knitting instructions carefully; to use the right size of needles, the correct weight of wool and always to try the number of stitches to the inch to ensure the proper measurements.

Both Canada and the United States import flax from the Argentine. This production in the Argentine has increased extensively and a good crop has been produced in progress. However, imports from three seasonal a long period of local which during wartime, may become expensive and hazardous. For the duration of the war, therefore, it may not only be desirable but may become necessary that Canada produce at least sufficient flax for domestic consumption.

Flax compares with wheat as a cash crop when the price of flax is approximate twice that of wheat. On this basis the price of flax for seeds months has been in favour of flax and it is reasonable to expect that this relationship may continue for some time. JUDICIOUS ADVERTISING BRINGS RESULTS

Addressing, Wrapping Important in Sending Mail To Men Overseas

Two big problems of the Army Postal Service are brought about by incorrect addressing and improper manner of inscribing. Daily hundreds of letters and parcels are delayed because of insufficient addressing. In some cases the addressee can be located after some research. In others the letter or parcel has to be returned. In wrapping parcels it should be remembered that they will be subject to much handling and should be sturdily wrapped and bound.

The following rule will prevent improper addressing: rank, name, regiment, regimental number and description. For instance: Pte. John Smith, 40th Highlanders, A12345, Trench Mortars, with the Canadian Active Forces.

The lecture on Scandinavian Countries given by Mr. Donald Cameron of the Extension Department on Monday evening was a real treat. Mr. Cameron is well informed on the geography and peoples of Norway, Sweden and Denmark and has a most pleasant way of giving his information. The importance of these countries in the affairs of the world today, should have drawn a larger audience. But those who came felt rewarded and better for their knowledge of the ways and policies of these European lands. The Y. P. Union is to be congratulated on their effort.

Rubber Tires Speed Farm Work Says Professor

Application of rubber tires to farm tractors will prove the most important development in farm machinery promoted for many years, in the opinion of Professor L. G. Kemper Head of the Agricultural Engineering Department, Macdonald College, Que. Speaking before the 20th annual meeting of the Ontario Plowmen's Association on "New Developments in Farm Machinery", Prof. Heimel cited as the basis of his prediction the fact that "the rubber tire has made the tractor a very much higher speed machine. Most of them are now equipped with a fourth speed for roadwork, by means of which speeds from 18 to 16 or more miles per hour can be secured at nominal engine speed."

The rubber-tired tractor will make operating the use of rubber-tired wagons, which will be brought much closer to the ground. This will greatly increase convenience and ease of loading, and speed up all kinds of haulage operations, according to Prof. Heimel. Nor will it retail the scrapping of all wagons now in existence. Already it is possible to purchase a bolt-on bolt which converts the ordinary wagon into a rubber-tired one complete with wheels and tires."

HASTINGS LAKE

The members of the Winona Club spent a very enjoyable afternoon at Mrs. Paterson's last Thursday. The meeting opened with the National Peace Prayer which the ladies have adopted for opening theme in place of the song formerly used. As all business on hand had been cleared up at the January meeting, the ladies turned their thoughts toward next summer's entertainments and hope to hold monthly community picnics. These will not only be something nice for the kiddies to look forward to but will be pleasant gatherings for all. The first of these will be planned for the 24th of May and will be followed by a strawberry festival and sports day in June. Mrs. Westako and Mrs. Glasbo joined the club. The ticket draw was won by Mrs. Tough and the contest by Mrs. Westako. At the close of the meeting a dainty lunch was served by Mrs. Peterson and Mrs. E. Lindberg, the hostesses for the afternoon. The next meeting will be held at Mrs. Anderson's on Wednesday, March 20. The roll call will be answered by an exchange of Easter eggs.

The Acts took part in the hockey tournament held in Tofield Monday night, losing to Meistick by the score of 2 to 2.

Mr. Baker will speak in the schoolhouse Thursday evening, March 7, and we believe it would be to everybody's interest to turn out to hear him.

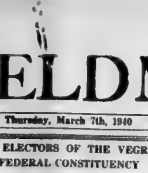
TO THE ELECTORS OF THE VEGREVILLE FEDERAL CONSTITUENCY



My many friends in this Constituency have honored me by naming me as the Liberal Candidate in this Vegreville Constituency, for the election which will be held on Tuesday, March 26th.

In making this public appeal to you for your support, I shall state my views to you frankly, but shortly, my stand on matters in which you are concerned.

I believe that Canadian Unity is more important to Canada to day than ever before, and to me Constituency in Canada, is it more important than here.

Our war effort can only be most effective if it has behind it the enthusiastic loyal, voluntary coderation of all sections of the country and all racial elements in Canada. The policy of the MacKenzie King Government, at the outbreak of war added new meaning to our idea of Democracy, and a new sense of responsibility to Canada. I believe the maximum war effort of Canada is necessary to the preservation of our freedom and fulfilment of ideals.

I heartily endorse the Liberal policy that:—

The enlistment of men must be voluntary.
There must be no conscription.
We must pay for the war as we go along as far as possible.
We must raise money from all possible sources, keeping the burden as light as possible on the farmer and wage earner. There must be no profiteering in our war supply purchases. There must continue to be full co-operation with the Imperial Government.

In order that the war effort may be maintained and in common justice the condition of Canada's basic industry, Agriculture, must be improved. The farmers must have some security if they are to put forth their greatest effort. Production below cost cannot continue. If prices of goods are to remain the same the price of wheat should be at least one dollar per bushel. If this is to be obtained by Government Guarantee, I shall urge that it be sent equitably by passing the freight, making the price of wheat the same all across Western Canada. The unjust freight rate structure must be revised, relieving the burden on the West.

War must not stop progress. Great reforms, such as Unemployment Insurance and Health Insurance should receive active study and the way opened for their introduction, at the earliest possible moment.

Many controls advocated by students of Social Reconstruction have been introduced as a part of war policy. Their action and effect will be a valuable guide and whatever is of value should be retained.

The planning for Peace should be begun now. In no part of Canada are the electors more concerned with a post war settlement than here. It must be fair and just and protect the rights and consider the natural ambitions of all important racial groups.

If my many friends among the electors of this Constituency which contains people whose country of origin is so varied, think that my sympathies and understandings of the cause of democracy makes my services as their representative at Ottawa of value at this time, I shall consider it an honor and shall consider myself the servant of the constituency.

What Will Happen To Farm Crops?

WILL ALBERTA FARMERS LOSE CONTROL OF THE MARKETING OF THEIR COMMODITIES IF THE ABERHART GOVERNMENT IS RETURNED TO POWER?

THAT might well happen! With a Marketing Act, Provincial Bank and Credit Houses in operation, and reinforced by a return to power, Aberhart might force all farmers to accept "Credit house money" for their products.

Don't think "it cannot happen here." The experience of Aberhartism in the past five years shows that most unexpected things can happen.

REMEMBER FARMERS! Only the courts saved you from an annual tax contribution to the Aberhart Government of 7 per cent of ALL YOUR PRODUCTION! !

A WAY to SAVE 2 DOLLARS
OR MORE

During March of each year the secretary of every rural municipality is compelled to make a list of all lands that are in arrears of taxes for a period of more than one year. The reeve signs this list and it has to be in the Land Titles Office before April 1st. A caveat is then placed on each parcel of land listed at a cost of one dollar per parcel. To release the caveat another dollar is charged. Ratepayers may save this two dollars by paying up their arrears on or before MARCH 27th.

FIVE YEARS of BROKEN PROMISES and Increased Taxes

"Increased Purchasing Power" was Aberhart's promise in 1935.

Purchasing Power has been decreased by Millions of Dollars. Taxes, Licenses, Fees since 1935 have been increased—

Taxes	$3,288,840.67 more
Licenses	660,717.04 more
Fees	851,319.35 more

Social Service Tax increased 50 per cent.
Car Drivers pay anywhere from $1 to $5 more.
If you are a tradesman you must pay a license for the right to work.
In 1935, Taxes, Licenses and Fees were $11.11 per capita. In 1939 they were $17.24.
They tried to put a tax of 7 per cent on all farm production; but the Courts killed this Act.
But the Social Credit Government Paid Itself $2,800.00 for 7 Days' Work

New Flour Milling Process

C. Ralfes of London, Manager of the European branch of the North-western Miller, writes as follows:

Notice of the invention of a new milling process, which is claimed to be comparable in importance with the discovery of electricity, appeared in the London Times on January 17th. It was stated in the article that the inventors were W. and G. Cox, a father and soon, whose milling process was unearthed by John Wright, of John Wright (London), Limited, a dog biscuit manufacturer.

Becoming dissatisfied with the flour available for the manufacturer of dog biscuits, Mr. Wright was searching for something better when he came across the Clark process. He took it up enthusiastically and recently read a paper on the subject to the members of the Food Education Society, in which he said that the Clark process "had opened up a vast, undreamed of store of nutriment never before accomplished in milling," and what is more wonderful would be of great service to humanity. In his opinion the present roller system is obsolete, for by the extraction of wheat germ and other vital elements a "denuded article" is produced.

The new method is said to produce a flour of higher than ordinary gluten content. The bran is reduced to a fine grist, and this is claimed liberates mineral salts, malt sugar and wheat oil. Bread made from this meal is declared to be "pure, nutritive and easily digestible," containing vitamins A, B1, B2 and C, as well as valuable roughage.

The process is described as "wholly dry", and it is asserted that the meal which contains the whole of the wheat berry, will keep indefinitely, bread made from it remaining fresh and palatable for at least a week.

Bread and biscuits using this meal as an ingredient are already on the market, and, it is stated, are being distributed daily over large area by one of the London co-operative societies.

Musical Festival To Be Held Here May 3rd

An event that is both pleasing and important is scheduled to be held at Tofield on Friday May 3, when the annual school musical festival of the Holden School District will take place.

This is the first time this event has been held here, Holden being previously chosen. Due however to the energetic work of Mr. Broughton, Tofield was chosen as the place of this year's festival.

Many competitions who have won out in home centres will assemble and compete with each other for higher honors here. They will come from as far east as Bruce and as far west as the division centres, Dewville we believe.

Already a committee under the leadership of Mr. Broughton has been formed and nothing will be left undone to make this important event for Tofield a success.

Miss Jessie McCrea of Tofield is the secretary and Miss McCrea will be pleased to furnish any additional information.

Chapter XIII

BY [illegible]

Lee Hollister returns unexpectedly from a trip planned to find Matt Blair, his foster father, and aware of the Circle X ranch owned by his own band. The ranch is run by Ann and Matt's daughter Virginia, owner of the ranch adjoining New York with the Archer family, and uncle. Her brother Ted is away at school. Lee is attracted to Virginia as he returns to the ranch house. Her aunt Sallee's pet, a skunk, named Mitzi, Blaine Stanley's gift to the aunt, lives on Virginia's pony. One evening Lee finds Virginia dancing [illegible] herself into his arms—and Virginia rides past with [illegible] Jewels, and in [illegible] Lee [illegible] Matt Blair gone [illegible] making Virginia [illegible] At the ranch house relations between the inmates were noticeably strained, but Virginia saw little of the others. They would all have departed gladly, but to leave just now might create an unpleasant impression on [illegible] Lee [illegible] Jewels, and in [illegible] Lee [illegible] running on high. The Archers found around uneasily, Bradish was [illegible] rode to his new quarters [illegible] and Stanley was nervously on edge. There were several matters that were worrying him badly, and one of them was a thousand dollar bill. If they should catch Gano and find that bill on him, Stanley Bradish was going to have a hard time trying to explain it.

The second day dragged out to [illegible] Bradish, but there was no trace of Lee, and no sign of Stanley Gano or Lowder. Then began to think their heads. There were plenty of places around here where a man's body might lie for a month or more for years.

Only Virginia and one other refused to believe that Lee was dead. The other came at dusk and touched her arm shyly with a little frightened hand.

"I do not hate you any more. My heart is break for you, and for Lee. I help you fin' heem."

"Thanks, Jessie," Virginia held the small hand silently.

In the black tunnel of the Bonanza a guest shadow of a man hovered. Years ago Dan Lish' reckless miner's life had turned his own claim and Matt's into a maze of intersecting tunnels, and through these Lee stepped, sure of his way. Slowly and cautiously, now fainting, now stumbling to his feet again, but somehow keeping a sense of direction. In a bend which ran somewhat like this: a ramp of head and the next like a flailing feather. He was hunting for Lee, Lee was dead, and the mine was empty and blood on the saddle.

"Do you suspect anyone, Curly?" Virginia looking first for Lawler and Stanley Gano. They both held grim greetings for Lee and they'd both hurried up the [illegible] right now."

Bradish and Stanley had hurried [illegible] of red were at the [illegible] Stanley proved not crowded, now fainting, now had a sickly look in the paling moonlight. The riding men streamed down the valley. Virginia turned to Stanley.

The ranch car is in the repair shop. We'll have to take yours. I'm a queen of light at a breath of cool air, but neither came.

In a few moments Virginia had the cars rar ed and was stopping He did not know that it was the noon Virginia and Curly started of the second day which found Lee to [illegible] not sat her going, but back at the place where Stanley had [illegible] left him.

Even as he worked, men were passing to and fro in a restless impulse, [illegible] a hundred yards away. Gone [illegible] From far away Stanley Gano saw [illegible] rising cloud of dust speeding [illegible] of the Sun and [illegible] he'd [illegible] a racing car [illegible] he [illegible] He [illegible] was going Bradish's there yesterday with the sheriff. Ye [illegible] but what was it doing there at ten? [illegible] going at that rate of tunnels is blocked by cave-in.

Curly Mott was fell He turned [illegible] to dinner shelter, caught a chocked tunnel the digging hands had stopped. Lee was sticking down, down, into that deadening cone of weakness, a heart of vantage and rest and exhaustion.

Long hours of hiding had not improved Stanley Gano's temper, and Lawler also had visibly soured. He was stretched out lazily, half asleep, half quarreling, just inside of a narrow crevice some forty feet above the floor of a secluded little bowl canyon. It was a perfect hideout.

From where he lay on a pile of boughs, Stanley shot a jeering taunt at his fellow fugitive.

"To talk big, but I notice ye have no stomach. The Circle V boys had forgot out that ye are that fire."

"It wouldn't have done nothin' but burn off some grazin' if the wind hadn't freshed up," retorted Lawler sullenly. "And I notice there's two of us settlin'. It's your turn to watch after. You've done for Lee Hollister [illegible] I hope they're good, because not twenty feet away from us—"

"Maybe you'll remember that your name was mentioned as well as mine," Stanley never deliberately and Lawler lay quiet with a hard stare. "Where are ye Wednesday night. Lawler? Gee an' alibi!"

Stanley's voice was seasoning, his head thrown forward and his eyes down into the shadowy depths of his shower without companion.

"Where are you, you white?" snarled Lawler, but his voice was uncertain. Stinking doggedly to his own idea Stanley himself [illegible] Bradish by piling up discouraging [illegible] on the [illegible] Circle V, he had spent the night cutting out a bunch of Virginia's cattle [illegible] and driving them [illegible] a remote cañon. There had been a [illegible] a blood on a [illegible] and he had returned in the early morning, [illegible] to the slightly [illegible] room. He wore his coat buttoned now to cover the stain.

Lawler [illegible] went to where Lawler lay and put a hand on his [illegible] as if to shake him awake. The sleeping man did not stir. From a hiding place inside his shirt Stanley took out a folded paper and slipped it cautiously into Lawler's inner pocket. Then he arose lightly and went to the crevice that served them as a doorway.

Virginia Jessilee brightened the [illegible] secretive little canyon. Down there two horses were picketed, well hidden from any casual eye, but only one of them was fit for travel. Lawler had ridden his horse hard on Wednesday night, and the foot was [illegible]

But Stanley knew what Lawler did not. There was another horse waiting for away in a hidden corral. Stanley had more than once found it expedient to change mounts suddenly.

When Lawler awoke, hours later, the sun was already well toward noon. Stanley apparently was asleep. Lawler came softly to his feet and edged toward the narrow exit. With a quick glance over his shoulder, he [illegible] into [illegible]

Leading the fresh horse Lawler pitched his stealthy way out of the canyon, hugging the cliffs of the [illegible] He recalled feeling something stiff in an inside pocket of his coat as he had swung himself over the edge of the cave floor.

The paper that he drew out was puzzling. It was a neatly folded, legal looking document, with printing on both the back and a single word standing out boldly: DEED. Lawler's words caught his eye—"Matthew Blair"—"Lee Hollister."

Beneath the word Hollister was the blurred imprint of a bloody thumb.

Panic swept over Lawler. Fire and slaughtered cattle, and in his possession the deed to Lee Hollister's and a murdered man. What little head Lawler had, he lost. Cursing Stanley Gano and his horse, he mounted hastily and bolted for deeper shelter.

As he rode he caught sight of a dozen men pounding along behind him. He crouched low over his horse's neck, cursing. All he could do now was to ride. Then the grade dropped suddenly. There was a ditch and a [illegible] The horse went down and lay there. Lawler was flung free and staggered to his feet. He ran like a mad-stricken animal.

A few moments later the foremost of his pursuers flung themselves off their horses and [illegible] down. Many feet below them a human fly clung to a rock wall. One man drew a gun.

"Hold on! He won't get [illegible] done for!" The watched him fall turning, swooping, head down.

They stopped back and looked at one another. One of the young deputies spoke.

"It looks as if that settled it, boys. An innocent man don't take a chance like that. Where's that white thing he dropped?"

Someone found it in a clump of scrub. They crowded together looking at a blood stained deed, and exchanged hard glances.

"No do's about it now," said the young deputy sheriff. "The search is over."

Each day Virginia had stopped for a little while at Lee's empty cabin, hoping that some word, some [illegible] reasonable hope that he might have found his way back thrown.

For that very reason the blank finality of Curly's news about Lawler seemed [illegible] harder to comprehend.

He saw that she wanted only to be alone, and he left her. She could hear him riding down to the mouth of Turkey Gulch and then it was quiet again. She hurried toward her horse.

As she mounted, her little first aid kit bumped uselessly against her side. Bandages, iodine, [illegible] bandages, iodine, restoratives, matches for a fire, a tin of broth, fresh gray day. In one pocket was a flashlight for dark places, in another a [illegible] whistle to call help to Lee. Futile little toys! She gave Black Lightning his head, riding blindly.

The ragged scar of the Bonanza came into view, and Virginia remembered Joey, scorching patiently and [illegible] for evidence in the loneliness of the old tunnel.

She stopped on the flank as soon she had gone a little way in.

The pencil of white light flickered over spoil walls and rubble-strewn floor, but there was no sign of Joey.

Virginia sobbed there a darkly looming hulk which must mark the spot where the big cave-in blocked the farther recess to the mine. The white beam danced along the face of the [illegible] Earth, stones, rubble. It switched down, up [illegible] sudden- ly and came back, scorching wildly, [illegible] stiffly from the piled earth and stone, gravel and torn, blood-crusted and earth stained moccasins, was a human head.

Yesterday that head had not been there!

Equine Encephalomyelitis
(Sleeping Sickness)

An outbreak of the disease may occur in Alberta this season.

VACCINATION
with Chick Vaccine is the only preventative.

PROCEDURE:
1. Vaccinate before seeding.
2. Two doses are required, given seven to fourteen days apart.
3. The Vaccine is available at Drug Stores, or may be obtained from Veterinarian, and some Municipal Districts may handle it.
4. If a qualified Veterinarian is not available, the Vaccine should be administered by some other person trained by a Veterinarian. Persons obtaining to do so many obtain a syringe and learn how to vaccinate their own horses.

Vaccine is effective only when administered prior to the outbreak of the disease.

Vaccinate Early!

The Department of Agriculture recommends vaccination as an insurance against loss.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

Observation on agriculture by eminent men go back as far as any writings of the human race. These recorded observations seem, from the earliest times, with references to many of the same problems farmers still have to contend with today. The advice given by these renowned authorities reiterated over and over, running like warp and woof throughout agricultural history, is basically the simple one of "Use good seed".

Here are a few extracts from these ancient writings:—

"The Kingdom of Heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field."—Matthew 13-24

"Thou shalt not sow thy field with mingled seed."—Leviticus 19-19 (about 900 B.C.)

"A good plant is not likely to grow from bad seed."—Aristotle (about 350 B.C.)

"New seed is the best."—Theophrastus (about 300 B.C.)

"Of the two great distinct, careful selections were made, crops tended with care to a common type."—Pliny (about 50 A. D.)

And finally that the most excellent part of advice, as timely for farmers today, and particularly at this time of the year.

"Choose especially the varieties which are commonly agreed to be the best for their districts."—Columella the overseer of the necessity on rainy days of cleaning seed."—Cato (about 200 B.C.)

Choosing a good variety is the first step in obtaining a good crop. Registered seed is pure as to variety and assures crops of greater yield, higher quality and better grade. Registered seed is sold only in sealed containers, government-tagged, and government-inspected. It requires no cleaning.

It pays to use Registered Seed!

For information regarding sources of supply of approved varieties write to—the District Supervisor, Plant Products Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture for your district, the nearest Dominion Experimental Farm, the Provincial Department of Agriculture, or the nearest Agricultural College.

STILL WATER RUNS DEEP—

IMMEDIATELY PRIOR to any election there is always plenty of estimating and guestimating as to who is going to be elected and who is not. At the present time the opportunity for this phase of preelection activity is doubled due to two government elections coming within a few days of each other, and as far as this immediate district is concerned, by being on the edge of both federal and provincial constituencies. Yet in spite of every opportunity to engage in estimating, guestimating or what have you in connection with possible election results, there is a strange quiet among the people. Of course political discussions do occur but compared with previous election ballyhoo they are quite tame.

Whether the war has had a sobering effect; or whether the rushing of a provincial election prior to the federal one is just giving the people too much at one time to digest; or whether it is the natural reaction to political hopes and expectations that were never realized, we do not know. But we do know that the situation is as unnatural as it is unexpected.

We believe we are safe in saying that for the past twenty or more years we have attended almost every important political meeting held at Tofield. Possibly the high light of them all was when Mr. McGilvary of Calgary gave an address here. Shaw, Matheson and Mrs. Rogers and others have all passed in their turn but generally speaking they all spoke to a well filled hall. It remained for a time to arrive when three political meetings in a row drew only a comparatively few people each, this occuring within the last ten days. We know roads have been none too good for travel, and also that radio political broadcasts are many and frequent, but we are of the opinion that neither one of these or both of them together are responsible for the "shying away" from political matters which is in evidence right now.

Rather we feel that the rank and file of the people are puzzled and disappointed. Disappointed at the non-fulfilment of lavish promises made and puzzled as to why. Several times a day a quite number hear of the doings of this statesman and that statesman and those who have not radios read copious accounts in the newspapers. And in spite of all the parliamentary activity that has taken place during the past twenty years they are a war torn world with international trade and commerce in shreds and tatters. Is it not likely that politicians and statesmen have fallen down on the job? Certainly the muddle could hardly be greater. The truth of the matter is that we here in Alberta, in Canada and for that matter many places elsewhere have reached a point where governments pay more attention to their own interests, especially as to retaining office, than to the interests of the body politic they serve. For instance the surprise move of Premier King in dissolving parliament only a few hours after it had convened. And the action of the Alberta cabinet in calling an election immediately prior to the federal one. No doubt it was good political strategy (or was it?) but the fact remains that the government was thinking more of its interests as to retaining office than the convenience of the people of Alberta, particularly of country districts. A provincial election could have been held last fall or in the coming summer months when transportation would be a great deal better and the turmoil of a federal election over and done with.

If the form of government which we choose to call democracy is to really survive, elected representatives of both high and low degree will have to accept the belief that they are the servants of the people rather than masters of the people. The juggling of election dates which is only one of many political manoeuvres practiced by all parties, will have to be replaced by a sense of responsibility to the people.

The sense of responsibility is apparently becoming more and more rare, being replaced by a desire to use parliamentary honors as a career rather than the climax to a career. If we are to have really good government, representatives will have to estimate how much they can contribute to their country's welfare, not how much the country can contribute to their welfare. We know the laborer is worthy of his hire, but the above holds good just the same. And we think it is questions like these that are making people reluctant to discuss politics. They feel instinctively something is wrong but can't put their finger on it. They appear to be puzzled almost to the point of resentment. We can think of no more apt sentence than the proverb: "Still Water Runs Deep".

Why is "She"

Montreal, March 11:—At last somebody has found out the reason for calling a locomotive "she". And the following reasons were advanced here recently by A. A. Gardiner, assistant general passenger traffic manager, Canadian National Railways, in an address: "They wear jackets with yokes, pins, bangles, straps and rings. They have spouts, also a lap and not only shoes, but pumps and buns. They surmount great obstacles but sometimes jump the track at the slightest provocation."

Famous Writer Heads North

Winnipeg:—Creator of Alexandre Bolti of Kathleen Trevier fame, William Haslett Upson is somewhere in the Northland between The Pas and Churchill, Manitoba, in search of material on which to base further series for his magazine, The Saturday Evening Post.

Upson travelled to The Pas by Canadian National Railways, later joined one of the caterpillar tractor "trains" freighting into the North. He intended to include God's Lake mining area in his itinerary.

Crop Feeding Of Sucking Pigs

(Experimental Farm Notes)

During the latter part of the nursing period it is not possible for a sow to supply all the nutrients required by a large and rapidly growing litter, states Edward S. Prentt, Division of Animal Husbandry, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. This is particularly noticeable after the pigs are three weeks of age, the stage at which certain deficiency diseases become evident. The development of heavy pigs which will withstand weaning without a setback requires supplementary feeding of the litter while on the sow.

At two or three weeks of age, young pigs will start to nibble at food from the sow's trough. It is not practicable, however, to feed the pigs sufficient in this way without overfeeding the sow. Further, it is desirable that the little pigs be allowed by owners feed on often as they desire it, and that such feed be conveniently close and erect in order to avoid digestive troubles.

It has been said by noted authorities that pigs following weaning, that is when it comes to standing the shock of weaning, is more important than the actual age of the pigs. Their stomachs should have been trained for the change. Research at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, proves that crop feeding is a decided advantage in the raising of pigs, the crop-fed pigs being up to 25% pounds heavier at weaning than pigs allowed no additional feed.

Essential to success in the crop feeding of the little pigs, their mother must contribute, by bearing and rearing of the pigs, a large litter the little pigs eat into the alley-way of the pen. The sow is not to be fed separately from the new, crop feeding can easily be arranged.

The meal mixture which is found to use in the crop depends on the foods available in the district. It may be said that any feed feed mixture suitable for growing-fattening pigs will prove valuable in crop feeding the suckling. The very best feed, however, at this period will be good dairy skim milk. Skim milk is high in protein and proximate value has been supplied to the young and as intimated above, resulted in as much as five pounds extra gain per pig.

In the following table a number of feed mixtures for crop feeding are shown. The first mixture is that which gave such good results at the Central Experimental Farm, while the others are suggested because they include foods which may be more easily procured in certain districts.

Crop Feeding Mixtures—
Middlings	100	100
Wheat (ground or coarsely ground)	50		100
Oats (Finely ground or rolled)	100	100	100
Fish Meal	50
Skim Milk (or Meal)	10	10
Mineral supplement	4	4	4
Tankage		50
Mineral Supplement to be included in above feed mixtures—
Calcium Carbonate			24 lb.
Bone Meal			12 lb.
Salt			12 lb.
Ferrous Sulphate			1 lb.

Provide a small trough in the crop for the little pigs. Supply the dry feed mixture sparingly but often. Fresh water should be available at all times, as one of the [illegible] evidences of a deficiency is a desire to eat the fish meal and tankage supplied in the above mixtures. Feed the skim-milk in a separate trough in the crop. Only sweet skim-milk should be used and care should be taken that the milk trough is kept wet and clean.

This Month's Star Recipe

By BETTY BARCLAY

As lemons nevergrow pie is a favorite with both young and old, so here's one the following as this month's star recipe.

Try it and see if don't agree with my chosen. Yes! I am giving the marlarge recipe also. Follow both carefully and your dessert that day will be a thrilling dinner finish.

Sunkist Lemon Meringue Pie

1 cup water or milk
¾ cup sugar
4 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
5 tablespoons cornstarch
¾ cup cold water
2 well-beaten egg yolks
1 tablespoon butter
6 tablespoons lemon juice

Bring water or milk, sugar, salt and lemon peel to a boil in saucepan on a direct heat. Add cornstarch, blended with ¾ cup cold water. Cook over low heat, stirring thickened (about 5 minutes), stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Add separately, mixing well after each addition, the egg yolks, butter and lemon juice. Pour filling into baked pastry shell.

When filling is cool, top with a meringue, made from:

2 egg whites
4 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Beat egg whites until frothy. Add sugar gradually. Continue beating but only until sugar holds its shape in peaks. Fold in lemon juice. Brown pie in moderate oven (325 degrees F.) for 15 minutes. Makes one 8-inch pie.)

Note the three lemon pie tricks that are followed in this recipe. 1—use cold water when adding cornstarch to pastry mix—result, flaky crust of proper consistency. Trick two—partly filling first, then with freshly squeezed lemon juice after the cooking flame is out—result, a filling supremely fresh in flavor. Trick three—add a little lemon juice to the meringue—result, a more tender, airy-to-cut meringue.

NEW SEED IS THE BEST!

An ancient agriculturist, Theophrastus, in 300 B.C., told us "New seed is the best," and then Aristotle, in 322 B.C., wrote "A good plant is not likely to grow from a bad seed."

This golden advice is as true today as it was then.

With clear heads and with feet on the ground, this group of purposeful men is making every ounce of Canada's weight felt in our fight for freedom. What it has done has been done thoroughly: there has been no loose thinking; no half-measures; no waste of men, money or materials.

Some of the Mackenzie King Administration Wartime Accomplishments

It united Canada as never before — Every province is heart and soul behind the Empire's war effort this time, thanks to the Administration's truly national policies.

The First Division, completely equipped, has been sent overseas to a Mother country prepared to receive it.

The Second Division is recruited, equipped and ready to go over.

The great Empire Air Training Scheme — sponsored and mainly financed by Canada, has been launched on a planned and ordered basis.

Grand Entente for both East and West Coasts including Air Force, Navy Dockyard and Convoying, has functioned efficiently since Declaration of War. Of a faster work it being done anywhere by the Royal Navy itself!

Price Control of all commodities, including such vital necessities as wood and sugar, has been established, with prices pegged low for the great mass. The profiteer is out, and self-for-all at the last war.

Shipping Control and Foreign Exchange Control are firmly established on sound lines and are functioning smoothly and effectively.

A $1,000,000,000 War Loan was over-subscribed within two days of its launching, a record that proves public confidence. Its redeemable rate of 3½% continues well 96% non-free rate of the last war.

Political and Private Patronage has been stamped out: merit is the sole basis for selection or promotion in our armed forces.

Great Britain's war financing problems have been lightened through the co-operation of the Canadian Government.

War Contracts resulting well over every branch of Canadian industry.

Canadian employment has hit an all-time high owing to these orders and to good internal business conditions.

Armament deliveries are approaching full-speed acceptance. New guns, tanks, military equipment and munitions are coming off in impressive quantities.

Large purchases of Canadian wheat, — preventing a serious wheat glut — have been arranged through a special mission sent to London by the Mackenzie King Administration.

$ 1,000,000 worth of farm equipment will be shipped to Britain from each week, as well as large quantities of flour and fish.

Unique handling of steel and other materials essential to the conduct of the war have been arranged for.

Make Your Extra Support Canadian Unity

Such a record simply didn't just happen. It resulted from the efforts of a strong administration working on behalf of a united people as all its parts as never before. And this singleness of purpose — conspicuously absent in 1914—is due to the vision, understanding and drive of individual Canadian and Empire-minded statesmen who took the Empire's participants in the war with their eyes wide open and with full determination to play their parts to the last.

We appeal to the people of Canada for the support which is essential to carry on and complete a task, the groundwork for which has been laid carefully, soundly, wisely . . . with foresight, determination and minimum wastage.

On March 26th show your faith; vote for the Candidate supporting Mackenzie King and help make sure there can be no break in Canada's steadfast stand in these critical times.

HASTINGS LAKE

We wish to express our welcome to Mr. and Mrs. J. Yee and family who moved to their new home in this district last week.

Miss Mildred Rowland returned home last week for a short visit with her folks.

A large crowd turned out to hear Mr. Baker last Thursday and were very much interested in his address on the duties of Municipal Councillors.

Whitford of Nisku accompanied him. Mr. V. Reiss acted as chairman for the evening and gave a short opening address. An equally enjoyable meeting had been held by Mr. Baker in the Spifford Schoolhouse that afternoon.

Congratulations and well wishes to-day are extended to Mr. and Mrs. G. Wainke Friday night when a number of friends gathered at their home on the occasion of their thirtieth wedding anniversary. Bridge was the order of the evening. First prizes going to Mrs. Anderson and Mr. Coward and the consolation prizes to Mrs. Robinson and Mr. Hooper. A dainty lunch was served at midnight, after which everybody gathered around the piano for a grand old singsong which lasted well into the early hours. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. H. Bagnar of Leduc.

McKENZIE

A shower was given for Mrs. Jim Savard and was held at the Smead home on Friday evening. An enjoyable evening was spent playing bridge and chinese checkers and some just visiting. The ladies first went to Mrs. C. Bailey and seated to Katie Dieterle. The men's first to Mrs. Eagleshaw and second to Glen Bailey. The bride received many useful gifts.

Mr. Bolanger spent several days in the city last week.

Mrs. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Hooper, Mr. Jim Hooper, Pvt. Burt Brown of the Royal Canadian Engineers, Mr. and Mrs. Hoover, Mr. Owen Hoover, Mr. Coward, Mr. Howe and Mr. Alec Tough, Mr. Morris Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Bailey, Mrs. Anderson and Miss Ruby Anderson, and Mr. Billy Donald.

The district is planning to hold a dance in the schoolhouse Easter Monday night in honor of the local boys who have enlisted. Word has been received from them that they will be on leave for that week-end. In this small way we hope to show the boys that we are proud of them and wish them the best in the days to come. The young folks will miss them too for they took an active part in every thing. Earlier this winter Gordon Bailey took a prominent part in the play staged in aid of the Red Cross. George Campion, while not in the actual cast of this whatever play, assisted as everybody's handyman in its production. He was also a member of the Aces' hockey team. Stanley Donald, the third recruit is well known to us when all these things are held and one cannot object all of them.

A skating party on the ice near the station was held last Saturday week night and was attended by quite a jolly crowd who assembled after words at the story for wieners and coffee. One casualty occurred when one young man tripped and fell running a willow spike into his hand, he was attended to at the first aid post at the Home-Bellman farm.

Sapper E. F. Rowe R.C.E. was here visiting friends over the week end.

Divine Service was held at the school on Sunday. The Rev. Burgomaster (Anglican—Tofield) conducted the Service.

We have been listening to quite a few radio speeches of all shades of politicians lately and on casting some of the talks what their line about it all is, there seems to be a state of "I don't know what to think". You bear so much controversial stuff that it makes one think, "Well nonetheless is lying, but who is it?"

Neighbors and friends with the assistance of Miss E. M. Hooper had a successful surprise party at the home of Mrs. Frank Sleeps in honor of her birthday, Monday March 4th. Many beautiful presents were presented her. Cards were played followed by a delicious lunch. Everybody reported a good time.

LINDSBROOK

Three whist drives have been held lately in aid of the Consumers Hall Bldg. Fund. Two were held at the school one being sponsored by Mrs. Jimmie L. Gill and J. H. Brown, the other by Mrs. Smith and

The other last Saturday night was held at the home of Mrs. A. Gill. All these parties were very well attended and the financial returns very astonishing to the donors, as it looks as "if and when" the weather clears and time permits, a start will be made on the Bldg.

We don't know weather we're encroaching on Hastings Lake correspondent's field, but anyway he or she can supply the details etc; but we would like to wish Him, and Mr. Geo. Wainke Sr. many more happy anniversaries of their wedding this being the 30th anniversary also the birthday of their eldest son Pat on many happy returns of the day Pat! a bit belated but none the less sincere. The details of the party will no doubt be supplied by our special correspondent at Hastings Lake. Best wishes from all your Lindbrook friends.

Speaking of birthdays here's many happy returns of the day the 17th of Cubi Cleland to Mr. Otto Lindgren. from all his Lindbrook friends. Personal Item go Bugle!

It was not as big a crowd turned up for the dance at the school put on by the L.I.Y.C. (Lindbrook Loop Year Club) as those present went to the actual cast of this whatever play, the dance at Ryley. Maybe the Lindbrook Loop Year Club scared some of the public away, thinking safety first, but still it might have been the snowy by-roads and other places. Friday night seems to be when all these things are held and one cannot object all of them.

IN THE ANCIENT ROMAN EMPIRE

In 400 B.C. beer was popular with the Armenians, while during the first century of the Christian era the Germans and the natives of West Europe (Spain and Gaul) improved the process, and beer made from barley and malt was the popular drink. The Romans were also brewers of beer. Barley was known to them says Virgil, who uses it in the plural form "hordea". Beer and vinegar were the drinks of Caesar's soldiers.

[To The Editor]

Dear Sir:—

FINLAND'S PRACTICAL CHRISTIANITY IS HER STRENGTH

Those of us who still believe that somehow or other, right must eventually triumph over might have had a hard time of it in recent years. We have seen one nation after another overflowed by overnight by the mechanized armies of their enemies. Admittedly Spanish Loyalist Government took a long time in dying. Admittedly, China still fights doggedly, but Ethiopia, Austria, Albania, Czechoslovakia and Poland didn't last long. We expected that Finland would be next.

But Finland still lives. She has heroically thwarted the greatest army on the face of the earth. Deep in the dim shadows of the northern forests they men have blocked all which was the pride of the Soviets. Not only have they defended their nation, but according to many observers their victory may signal the internal collapse of the Stalinist Dictatorship inside Russia.

Military men have spent many hours in discussing the physical conditions which have favoured the Finnish success. But these same men will admit that many of the other millions which have been recently swallowed up could have rallied upon favorable weather and geographic conditions and Christmas would be advised to look elsewhere for the success secret. Might it not be the effect of the national practice of Christian methods in a day-to-day life. For, along with her sisters of Scandinavia Finland has outstripped most of the world in "for others" legislation.

Finland went through a long period of reaction after it achieved independence in the bloody days of 1917. But within recent years the Govt. has steadily fallen into the hands of socialistically minded voters. In a parliament of 200 members there are 86 Labor-Union and 56 Farm members. The other seats are divided among the Liberals, Conservatives and Swedish partyites. (There is a large Swedish minority). Since the war the Cabinet has been extended to include all parties. But previous to the war it was a coalition govt. of labour and farmer representatives.

To state the policies of this government in a way which would be readily understandable to Canadians, you would have to imagine a C.C.F. govt. in Ottawa. It is the only major Canadian party with similar policies. On the economic front, trade unions are and co-operatives have shown steady growth. As a result, industry has been largely democratized both in matters of management and consumer interest.

The following facts will give a picture of Finnish life under the combined influences of Farmer-Labour politics and union and co-operative management. Top flight executives, such as railroad presidents etc., receive annual incomes of around $2000.00. Although workers receive less than this figure there is no great disparagement, such as exists in many other countries, including our own.

There are no slums, 90 per cent of the population live in their own homes. Cities and towns feature modern apartment houses, built originally by the state but now owned co-operatively by the families residing in the apartments.

In 1937 Finland passed a National Insurance Act. Every Finnish citizen is automatically insured the first year following his eighteenth birthday. The workers, if disabled or over age, automatically receive an income from this National Insurance. Care of indigents is in charge of community welfare boards, rather than private charities.

CHILDREN Nation's Greatest Treasure. Children are treated as the most valuable treasure of the nation. Every mother is guaranteed pre-natal care, maternity aid. Mother and child are guaranteed adequate clothing. Subsidized but democratically controlled advisory bureaus and children's homes take up the job of child care along with the parent until school age arrives.

Over 75 per cent of the workers of Finland are union members. Labor and labour laws have reduced strikes and lockouts to a minimum. Arbitration boards handle most cases where employer and employee cannot "get together". But since private enterprise is fairly limited to small enterprise and big business is largely state or co-operative owned the workers are rapidly becoming their own employers. There has been no un-employment. Well planned public works have taken up the plight slack caused by world depression. Internal slumps are being prevented by preventing accumulations of private wealth and by co-operative growth.

There are no large landowners. Finland's population is less than 4,000,000. Estimating 1-5 as breadwinners we reach a figure of 800,000. Since many of these are city or forest workers, the figure of 450,000 independent landowners shows a high degree of individual farm ownership. That figure was in 1934. It has increased since that date. A Land Reform Bill with Farmer-Labour sponsorship allowed peasants to purchase farms from large estate owners. On the economic front, trade unions are

W.C.T.U. Barde

On Thursday evening March 7, a Temperance Meeting was held in the Barde church. The attendance could have been a good deal better but roads were bad and Flu prevalent. After opening exercises and a number by the String Band "Throw out The Life Line" we listened to an interestly interesting and inspiring address by Rev. A. H. Vinge. He encouraged the W.C.T.U. in its work and likened it to a strong fence with which we may hedge in our young people by protection and educational influences, after which more mature reasoning will cause them to take a firm stand against alcohol, or liquor in any form. He quoted the president of Finland's statement regarding temperance work and its strong position in that country today. Rev. Vinge also deplored the fact that so many people in the world today do not take an active part in the work of Temperance, either because they may be outcowed by its revenge themselves or through indifference to the consequences of it. He also urged us to make use of all the literature published by our own church on Temperance especially in connection with our Lutheran League work. A male quartet sang "Wandering Child" and after another hymn the meeting was closed with the Lord's Prayer in unison.

Interest instalment plan.

Socialism Far Advanced.—Finland's socialism is far advanced. The state owns 60 per cent of the forests. It owns the largest copper mine in Europe at Outokumpu. It owns the railways and power facilities. The Bank of Finland yields half of its yearly profits to the state. The arctic added mine fastened to recent disputation as being owned by International Nickel is actually only leased to lase for a 25 year development contract.

Finland's president receives less income than Toronto's mayor. 75 per cent of marketing and purchasing is done through co-operative societies. These facts will give some idea of the amazing development of social legislation and moral aid which the Finns have been able to achieve. Compared with these our own Canada for all its pomp and wealth, should think twice before describing itself as Christian.

"Communists" of course will insist that Finland is still a "capitalist" power. But most observers readily admit that the sort of society now existing in Finland is much closer to the ideals of the early socialist leaders than is the cruel, opposition murdering autocracy which has transformed the Russian Dream of liberty into an Oriental nightmare of tyranny 99 per cent of Finland's population are Christians most of them Protestants but their practice is as well as preach it. Political and Economic Christianity may well be street of Finland's strength.

NEW SEED IS THE BEST!

An ancient agriculturist, Theophrastus, in 300 B.C., told us "New seed is the best," and then Aristotle, in 350 B.C., wrote "A good plant is not lately to grow from a bad one." The golden advice is as true today as it was then.

Keep Canada's War Effort United!

Experienced Leaders are

VITAL for VICTORY

In six months of war the Mackenzie King Administration has set an unprecedented record of getting things done without fuss and fury. Under its steady leadership, Canada has gone ahead on all fronts—war, economic and domestic. With clear heads and with feet on the ground, this group of purposeful men have put every ounce of Canada's weight felt in our fight for freedom. What it has done has been done thoroughly: there has been no loose thinking; no half-measures; no waste of men, money or materials.

Some of the Mackenzie King Administration Wartime Accomplishments

It united Canada as never before — Every province is loyal and real behind the Empire's war effort this time, thanks to the Administration's truly national policies.

The First Division, completely equipped, has been sent overseas to a Mother country prepared to receive it.

The Second Division is recruited, equipped and ready to go over.

The great Empire Air Training Scheme — sponsored and mainly financed by Canada, has been launched on a planned and ordered basis.

Royal Galoway for both Esa and West Coasts including Air Force, Mine Sweepers and Convoying, has functioned efficiently since the outbreak of War. Of it, a Senior British Naval Authority has said: "No finer work is being done anywhere by the Royal Navy itself."

Price Control of all commodities, including such vital necessities as wood and sugar, has been established, with prices pegged low for the year man. The profiteer is out, and will be kept out—in marked contrast to the fine-for-all of the last war.

Shipping Control and Foreign Exchange Control are firmly established on sound lines and are functioning smoothly and effectively.

A $300,000,000 War Loan was over-subscribed within two days of its launching, a record that proves public confidence in the reasonable rate of 3½% contrasts with 5½% tax-free rate of the last war.

Political and Private Patronage has been stamped out: merit is the sole basis for selection or promotion in our armed forces.

Great Britain's very formidable problems have been lessened through the co-operation of the Canadian War Effort.

War Contracts totalling well over $1000,000,000 have been placed, stimulating every branch of Canadian industry.

Canadian employment has hit an all-time high owing to these orders and to good internal business conditions.

Several industries are approaching fulfilment: aeroplanes, guns, guns, carts, artillery accessories, ships—all coming forward in impressive quantities.

Large sums of money — Canadian, — borrowing a million pound plant — have been arranged through a special mission sent to London by the Mackenzie King Administration.

1,250,000 pounds of bacon will be shipped from Canada every week, as well as large quantities of flour and fish.

Huge shipments of steel and other necessities needed to the conduct of the war have been arranged for.

Make Your Vote Support Canadian Unity

Such a record simply didn't just happen. It resulted from the efforts of a young, vigorous, united working as behalf of a country united in all its parts or never before. And the singleness of purpose — conspicuously absent in 1914—is due to the vision, understanding and drive of individual Canadian and Empire-minded Canadians who took the fullest participation in the war with their eyes wide open to the sacrifices and the problems to be met with the full.

We appeal to the people of Canada for the support which is essential to carry on and complete the great task of the Mackenzie King Government, and cordially, sincerely, wisely . . . with foresight, discretion and resolute courage.

On March 26th show your faith; vote for the Candidate supporting Mackenzie King and help make sure there can be no break in Canada's steadfast stand in these critical times.

FORWARD WITH

Dr. Law interviewed Council regarding Mr. Cahill and Mrs. Kenack, also in regard to the proposed health insurance scheme. He expressed drugs be purchased locally and sent up to him, Mrs. Kenack was suffering from arthritis. He suggested trying a vitamine capsule which has proven successful. He thought the chances good for recovery. He was of the opinion that $50, expendable at $2.00 per 100 should prove sufficient.

Moved by Reeve Walker that Council insure above $50 had already signed and he was going ahead with the plan. It will take six weeks to two months to get things going and he would like his present contract to be extended for that period. A discussion ensued as to the liability of the municipality under the proposed agreement, during which it was stated that the municipality would not be liable for anything except recognized indigent accounts. THE PLAN HAS NOW REACHED A STAGE WHERE THE CONTRACTS ARE READY FOR SIGNATURE.

Today Is Election Day

As we write snow is falling thickly. Already several inches have fallen and there is promise of more. All over constituencies was held on the Variety Theatre here. While the crowd was not large, it was unfortunate, Mr. C. Smith occupied the chair and there was no dearth of speakers, four being on the program. Mr. Mc. Ivor introduced Mr. Clary saying that Mr. Clary was a farmer and well known as his own district having made a great success of farming and cattle raising.

Mr. Clary gave a brief talk on what the present federal government had done for industry and agriculture.

Mr. Max Freedman, a young man from Edmonton spoke eloquently. He attended the C.C.F. on the war policy and ran foul of Mr. Harrison. The meeting quickly quieted and Mr. Freedman explained his statements.

Dr. Archer spoke interestingly for some time, saying that if elected he would do all in his power to bring about harmony among the different peoples of the west.

An interesting question period followed the meeting, after which those present, sang the National Anthem and dispersed.

Dr. A. E. Archer, Federal Liberal Candidate in the constituency of Vegreville, on the evening of Monday, February 19th:—"Could I choose just one thing of importance in Canada and particularly in this riding, to which I would be supremely anxious to contribute, it would be the cause of Canadian unity".

To promote the cause of Canadian Unity—your representative at Ottawa must know the national groups who are important to Canadian Unity. He must be in sympathy with their hopes. He must be able to present their needs.

Dr. Archer has been a deep student of the histories through the centuries of the various European minorities who are widely represented in Vegreville constituency. He knows their problems, not only in Canada but in their troubled mother countries. He is anxious to use that knowledge to the benefit of these minorities—in Vegreville riding—in Canada—in the world.

CHAPTER XIV

SYNOPSIS

Lee Hollis returns unexpectedly from a trip abroad to find Matt Blair, his wife's father and owner of the Circle J ranch, dead by his own hand. The ranch is going to ruin and Matt's daughter Virginia, now owner of the ranch, is living in New York with the Archers, her aunt and uncle. Her uncle wants her to sell the ranch to Milton Bradish, owner of the Matt's Association Live Stock Agency, in return for the ranch. Her aunt follows her, unexpected by Stanley, son of Milton Bradish. Stanley tries to date-rebuff Lee in Virginia's eyes. One professing Joseph Ramirez, who is jealous of Lee's interest in Virginia, decides for Lee and throws himself into the arms particularly Stanley Gane. Stanley, Bradish's foreman, and in gun-battle with Ramirez, Virginia becomes owner of Lee and sells the ranch to Milton Bradish. Lee promises to Virginia and she secretly sells the ranch Lee tries to get it back and tells Bradish that Matt Blair gave him half interest in it, making Virginia only legal Lee disappears and a search is begun for him. Virginia, riding alone, examines the range to Bonanza and suddenly sees a human hand protruding through the earth.

Lee! Lee! It's Virginia! I'm coming!"

Her quivering call beat at the solid barrier as she began to dig frantically, but a few seconds showed her helplessness. She jumped to her feet and ran fiercely back to the entrance, remembering those riding men.

"Sheriff!"

The morning sublance brought her up sharply, almost at the tunnel's mouth. There was a rustle in the scrub out there, and Slanty Gane hurried through.

"What up?" he said savagely.

She backed hastily away, sick with a new terror Slanty Gane knew that Lee was back there, and he meant to kill her if she gave an alarm. Hags paws caught her and dragged her. Not breath was on her such as she twisted her head away for the one sure thing that would bring those riding men at top speed, a woman's frantic scream.

They ripped through the air like knives, keen with mortal terror, choking out as brutal hands gripped her throat. But she had done it—

"Help! Lee! Lee!"

From the far side of the ridge answering yells came.

Slanty stopped only long enough to fling her from him as he leaped for the shelter of the arch.

A little later men were digging and scooping with anything they could find.

That night a group of men rode into Turkey Gulch toward the light of a campfire, carrying a prisoner with them. On the other side of the fire a man was being lifted to his feet. A ghostly figure, swathed in bandages, gaunt and hollow-eyed. A dead man risen.

"That's the man," said Lee Hollister. "Lawler didn't have anything to do with it."

There was a stir toward Slanty, but Lee had not finished. His voice was low but they heard it.

"First, I'll take that knife you were using, back there in Bonanza tunnel."

The knife had been taken away from Slanty, but someone procured it and handed it over.

"Open it."

Curly complied, showing two wicked looking blades. One of them was broken at the tip. Francisco was helping Lee take a bit of folded paper from his pocket and opening it to show a triangular bit of metal. Curly laid the scrap against the broken of blade.

It fitted. Slanty moistened his lips. "Slanty Gane I accuse you of the murder of Matt Blair."

A murmur ran through the group like a low growl, but Lee went on.

"I never believed that Matt committed suicide. When I came back I found that knife point nearly hidden in a crack in the drawer of the desk where Matt worked.

Lee swayed, fighting weakness, but his voice went on.

"You shot Matt Blair as he lay asleep in his chair, with everybody gone to the Barbecue, and then you shot a shot from his own gun and dropped it beside him.

"Now Slanty, we'll hear your confession."

"Confess nothin'! What about the fella that's been payin' me? Ye don't dare go after him, Lee Hollister!"

"I'm going after him now," said Lee, and sagged suddenly between the men who held him.

A little later two powerhouses left. One, silent and mumbling went toward the county seat. The other, with strong gentle hands, carried Lee to the ranch house and Virginia, who waited for him.

Through the rest of the night Lee lay in heavy sleep of weakness, brought by running when the doctor came or when cups of strong hot broth were fed to him.

Others tiptoed in and out. A little after midnight Curly and Francisco came in.

Curly bent down and cautiously slid a flat packet under the pillow. "It's Lee's. Better tell him about it, Miss Virginia, as soon as he wakes up."

Toward morning news came. Slanty Gane, desperate, had taken the desperate way out.

"Pretended he was desin' off," the messenger said "and then leaped on like a crazy man. Grabbed a deppity's gun, somebody and all, and went down shootin'."

Dawn found Lee awake, insisting that he was strong enough to ride. They let him sit up in bed first, and there he read the damning writing, the sheets of the packet that Curly had brought the night before. They had been taken from Slanty's room.

For some minutes after he had finished, he sat there looking bitter and tired. Then he roused himself and called Curly, hovering just outside the door.

"I'm ready. Get my clothes on me. I've got work to do."

They awaited him in Matt's office, summoned by Curly, men by men. Milton Bradish was there, vigilant and squared for any emergency; Stanley silently nervous but acting with respect that his car, commandeered the night before to get the sheriff, was now in front of the door; T. Ellison Archer, looking flabby and scared, his vest dangling; Virginia, who was there as a matter of course, and also Joey.

Lee came in, hollow-eyed and haggard, moving slowly.

"I'd rather you all to come here because there's something that I want to say to you."

"That's all right, young man, but you're in no shape to do it yet," Bradish was briskly solicitous. "Give yourself a day or two to recover."

"I'm obliged for your consideration, but it comes a little late."

Bradish reddened. Stanly eyes told him as Lee began.

"Three days ago a man who has been acting as your agent shot me, rifled my pockets of the deed to this ranch and carried me into Number One tunnel of the Bonanza mine, where he cut a blast in my arm so safely until he could levy blackmail on you for a big sum and make his escape. He had not where he wanted you. . . . No, you wait until I'm through.

"I came to before he left and heard the last things he said, giving away some matters that you already knew and that I needed to. One of them was that he had dropped my deed beside Matt Blair's real campsite, the stolen ones that never got to the Assay Office. When he had gone I had just sense enough and time to crawl away from the blast, taking a chunk of that ore with me."

He held out a rough, pale pulse-lode lump.

"Carnotite," he said briefly. "I don't need to tell you that."

"Yes," Bradish admitted calmly, "I was after that deposit myself. I was wrong about my knowledge of the north-ads that Lawler and Gane used. I was after that deposit myself. I was sold pot-hot that started the rush years ago was found on Matt's claim and we divided according to agreement. All that I struck on my claim was a lot of rubble and then a very little of stuff that cropped up all over. But we were looking for gold and it didn't mean anything to us. Years later looking over Government and radio-active ores, I remembered those deposits and suspected their value."

Bradish talked rapidly, as if to get over a disagreeable subject as quickly as possible.

"Why," Lee's voice demanded, "when you put in your manager, did you pitch out a crook like Slanty Gane?"

"We took Gane on," said Bradish crisply, "because he knew his mind. He found us in Number Three tunnel, taking picks and putting samples in our grub sacks. It couldn't be helped, and it was a bad move. Gane was a smart-aleck and a murderer. Nobody regrets that more than I do, but I'm not responsible for his actions."

Lee was looking at Stanley and slowly opening a little sheaf of papers.

"There is one thing more. A few days ago you made accusations which no one was over-fond to. You got your information from Slanty Gane. There was a thousand dollar bill in his pocket when caught and we know where it came from. But there was also something else which Slanty Gane took from Matt Blairs' desk the night he killed him."

"He took nor of his own accord," said Stanley, angrily, "that you were Blair's son and that he could prove it."

"If you'd saved him your money first, he'd tell you anything you wanted to hear. I'm not Matt Blair's son. I'm not Virginia's brother, and Stanley knew it. I happen to have proofs. And I'm not proud of it."

A chair rasped. Bradish hopped forward, reaching.

"My mother," said Lee steadily, looking straight at Bradish this time, "was Anita Ceballos, Don Luis' daughter, the girl you married secretly when you were down and out and deserted when you saw better fortune within your reach."

"I didn't know," Bradish said hoarsely. "Nobody ever told me that there was a child. I give you my word of honor—"

"I'd rather you didn't. Honor didn't count when you deserted my mother. I'm not here to rake up any circumstances. They're all there."

He pointed to the paper under his hand. They lay in a tumbler drift on the desk.

Bradish rose. It was the slow, heavy move of a beaten man.

"All right," he said, his voice unpretentious, "I suppose I had it coming to me."

Joey's voice cut in: "Ain' now ye kin go, Mist Bradish, because Lee lets ye go. There's your car. Get in it quick, for if ye stay here another five minutes I'll throw a gun on ye myself!"

It was a silent group. Stanley reached the car first and slipped hurriedly into the driver's seat. Bradish followed his son—the only son he had to own.

The engines throbbed, the car shot forward.

Silence came, and then the stir of relaxed tension. Lee raised his head, bent woodily as he had watched the fleeting car. Ling stood before him, looking like a benevolent old idol in weathered ivory.

"Bimeby, Lee?"

"That sounds good to me, Ling. Breakfast for everybody, the best ever you've got. Marie will help you."

He waved a friendly hand to the men outside and walked slowly back. Virginia was beside him wanting his hand on her shoulder.

Joey lingered for a moment, with a gulp of emotion, and then he went on tiptoe.

"It's over," Lee said in a tired voice. "Thank God. I'm going to sleep again with a clean slate. . . . Honey —come here!"

She came blindly, shaking under the release from days of intolerable tension. "Oh, my dear, my dear!"

The last whisper of the closing door left them alone.

ALBERTA FIELD CROP PRODUCTION—1939-40 COMPARED WITH 1938—16

If the production of all field crops in Alberta for the 1939-14 crop year (August 1 to July 31) is taken as 100, then the production for 1939-40 would be represented by 434.5 and for 1938-39 as 438.2. For all of Canada, however, the production of field crops in 1939-40 is 142.4, as compared with 113.1 in 1938-39, when 1913-14 is calculated as 100.

The investment increase noted in Alberta is due largely 4 other increases in wheat production. The crop of 1914 was just a little over one million and in 1939 it was estimated at 5,370,000.

Alberta has shown by far the largest increase in field crop production in Canada. Saskatchewan is next largest, and in that province production rose from 100 in 1913-14 to 76, it is about classed up by now.

LENDEBOOK

A social evening or a party or whatever you may like to call it, was given at the school last Friday 15th March by the L.C.C. It was very well attended, and the entertainers ran from bridge to all sorts of games, little "contrivances" dealing with war, politics, farm topics and the "neighbors" of course. There was also an auction sale of articles brought by members. A dainty lunch was served and all present report it as A1 evening, for everyone pleased themselves here they spent it as we look forward to another in the near future.

Long life, health, wrath and happiness are the wishes of their Lindbrook friends to Mr. and Mrs. Chas Anderson now Miss Mary Sorrel, on on the occasion of their wedding last week.

Winter is struggling hard to make its hold, but it's slipping, and we are the horses and humans too on the go roads, which by evening are bogs of mud; still we have to have it to have summer later.

BE MORE

During March of each year the secretary of every rural municipality is compelled to make a list of all lands that are in arrears of taxes for a period of more than one year. The reeve signs this list and it has to be in the Land Titles Office before April 1st. A caveat is then placed on the parcel of land listed at a cost of one dollar per parcel. To release the caveat another dollar is charged. Ratepayers may save this two dollars by paying up their arrears on or before MARCH 27th.

Shall I Vote for
KING or MANION?

There is only one decision to be made by the Canadian people on March 26th . . . It is this:

Shall our country's war effort be handed over to unknown, unnamed politicians . . . to a make-shift cabinet with Dr. Manion as the self-appointed leader? Or . . .

Shall our country's war effort be continued vigorously and faithfully by the known and proven administration of Mackenzie King?

That is the question YOU must answer.

Up a Blind Alley?—or—Out in the Open!

It is time for plain speaking. Dr. Manion's pretense of offering "national" government is sheer political deceit. Because even if he were elected to office, Dr. Manion could not organize or lead a truly national government. The parliamentary group which might follow him would fail to represent all Canada. It would not represent all the people of this national Liberal party. It would not represent the people of the C.C.F. party. It would not represent the people of the historic Conservative party which Dr. Manion has now scuttled.

He can not be deceived! Dr. Manion cannot give you National Government.

The best he might give you would be government by unknown followers. He invites you to follow him up a blind alley—to vote for a government of his own imagination—answerable to some undisclosed political group.

Mackenzie King offers you something entirely in the open . . . the most truly National government Canada has ever known. His parliamentary followers represent the people of every province in Canada — every section of our country—every economic, social and racial group. There is not an area of this country not represented. Every one of our people . . . without grouper representation in the Mackenzie King following.

Mackenzie King's cabinet ministers are well known to you. They are broadly experienced men, eager and able to continue the sort of administration which brought progress to Canada in times of peace and national pride in Canada since the outbreak of war.

The Mackenzie King administration is answerable to the people of Canada —to no one else.

The Responsibility is Now Yours

Canada is facing the greatest crisis in her history. It is YOUR responsibility to say how she is to deal with this crisis. Therefore when you go to the polls on March 26th you should consider only what is best for Canada—what is best for the Empire and our allies —what is the sure, direct road to Victory and Peace.

FORWARD WITH

The question of appointing a tax collector cropped up two or three times during the meeting. Mr. Eaton interviewed Council regarding appointment, On motion of Councillor Kertzman, it was decided to table the question until next meeting.

Letter from Dept. of Public Works re weeds was read.

Moved by Councillor Brown that J. W. Sunley be appointed weed inspector and fire guardian for 1940. —Carried.

The question of re-appointing a legal advisor on the basis of a retainer fee basis was considered and on motion of Councillor Coombes A. T. McLean was appointed solicitor for M. D. No. 467 to March 15, 1941, at a remuneration of $250.00.

The matter of continuing the present agreement with the Mercury came up for discussion. Mr. Watson was present and stated that as far as he could learn the arrangement had found favor with the ratepayers. Financially there was not a great deal of profit to him, the advantage being more in having a paid circulation of 900 rather than one of 300.

On motion of Reeve Wallace it was decided to renew the present arrangement with the Mercury to March 15, 1941, namely the Mercury to be sent to all ratepayers, assessed at $1.50 per year, this to include the insertion of all municipal advertising including the annual financial statement.

Telephone numbers and addresses of councillors was recorded.

The new municipal policy was discussed at some length, it having previously been agreed to participate in it. Briefly, the plan provides a number of farmers with forage crop and at least one bull in their district, the bull to be paid by the two governments and municipality. The financial set up is rather complicated but over a period of three years the plan provides $6275.00 worth of seed to the ratepayers at a total cost to the municipality of $637.50. The ratepayers purchasing the seed would pay $1375.00.

On the motion of Councillor Brown, Mr. John Warner was appointed supervisor regarding the promotion of this policy.

Moved by Councillor Kertzman that forage crop seed plan be restricted to a sweet clover, brome, crested wheat, alfalfa. And that $900.00 worth of seed be ordered in proportion to orders already received.

A tax arrears list of his division was handed each councillor.

Letter from Mr. Chas. Holmberg, former councillor was read. Mr. Holmberg said he would like to express his appreciation of the co-operation afforded him in the past by the council. He had served on the council for 18 years and it was with some regret that he withdrew his nomination. For the benefit of his successor he recommended that a forage crop rotation be reserved and arranged.

Moved by Councillor Anderson that a vote of appreciation be recorded to Mr. Holmberg for his faithful services over a period of many years on the council.—Carried.

Letter from Old Age Pension Board. They requested information re Mr. Frish, Edmonton, who was making for an increase. On motion of Councillor Brumby Mr. Frish was recommended for full pension.

Letter from the Canadian Institute for the Blind asking for a donation was tabled.

Letter from the Dept. of Municipal Affairs consenting to transfer of part of 22-51-20. This is the Donald Scroggy, transfer of which has been under discussion for the past two meetings.

Re matter of claims of Bank of Montreal, Tofield and Mr. Chalk, items for land taken for road diversion, originally donated but not registered. It was moved by Councillor Anderson that payment be made on the basis of 1940 assessment of Marshall.

Letter from A. T. McLean saying that C.P.R. official had interviewed him re claims of C.P.R. regarding land taken for road.

Letter from Adams Machinery Co., stating that generally speaking the district's machinery was in good shape. Machinery was inspected while in storage and they would like to inspect the motor later.

Letter from F. Greenacott asking for position of space man on big south. Also one from Oliver Grey asking for position. Both letters were tabled until next meeting.

Letter from Dept. of Agriculture re borse disease. This was a similar letter to the one read last year.

Letter from A.A.M.D. re poplar poison.—Tabled.

Letter from R.D. of Bright enclosing a copy of letter sent to Mr. Gardiner, Dominion Minister of Agriculture re another payment on the 1939 wheat crop before the 1940 seeding time. Bright R.D. desired Cornhill M.D. to send a similar letter to Mr. Gardiner.

Letter from Councillor Anderson, secretary was instructed to write Mr. Gardiner a similar letter.

Dept. of Agriculture wrote asking if Council were interested in purchasing a car of pedigree seed grain. Seed is available and seems reasonable in price. Tabled until next meeting.

Council was of the opinion the district was well supplied with good seed.

Letter from Mr. R. E. Willson re damage to property of scout hall. He had been accosted for the West hall. But as he has only rented a quarter, the other quarter being crown land.

On motion of Councillor Swabey, 1927, 1938, and 1939 taxes on the quarter held by him will be relanded.

Letter from Holden Crown hospital stating that Miss Conklin had been admitted as an emergent acute appendicitis case. And as the bill of hospital account was not paid, the M. D. of Tofield would be liable. It was followed by Council that Miss Conklin had not permanently resided in any district for the past two years.

Invoice from Dr. W. A. Wilson re Albert Elder, Hay Lakes. This was tabled.

Letter from Royal Alexandra hospital re Barry Blanchard. They would like charges for extra care included in the year future.

Letter from Royal Trust Co., asking for tax statement re the Machkowski farm and asking if M.D. is likely to obtain title in the near future.

Letter from Canada Life Insurance Co. wanting to know if title to various lands in which they are interested will be taken by the M.D. in the near future.

Letter from A. T. McLean. The letter was to the effect that if land taken for road for sale list, advertised in the usual way, then consideration can take place, which consolidation subsequently was allowed to lapse, then Municipal District was in same position as if taxes had never been consolidated.

Re: A. Shank and Mr. Stefferman both desired to rent N. E. 7-51-20. Mr. A. Shank attending meeting which doubt was expressed as to the wisdom of renting these pasture quarters, the letters were read.

It was then approximately six o'clock and on motion of Councillor Coombes meeting adjourned until 10 a.m. the following day, Thursday.

Editor's Note:—In order to not tire our readers with too much municipal news in one issue, a report of Thursday's meeting has been held over until next issue.

On the way home the car lights went out and they ended up in the side ditch near Alec Donald's but right side up. We understand on another day that Lawrence, Mrs. Rieke's young brother, who had been staying with them, had been taken to the hospital. Another married brother and his wife are also staying with them while their new home is being built on the neighboring quarter. We understand her parents are also moving to this district. Mr. Rieke's uncle brought the quarter just across the road from them.

SPONGE CAKES

This is the time of year when cook delineation as sponge cakes have a special appeal. They are the ideal dessert to the appetite to carry spring but also to the homemaker who is

Warble fly attack beef and dairy cattle in every part of Canada where they stock is raised. The damage they do is not generally realized but it takes millions of dollars annually out of the farmers' pockets through the spoiling the hides by the holes made by the grubs, through injury to cattle from fright and worry when the flies are burning around, and through cost, to prevent treatment and prevention and wastage of beef. In recent years warble fly damage has been considerably reduced in some districts by systematic control measures, including the use of derris or cube washes to the backs of the animals, in the county days in spring and summer, warble flies lay their eggs, attaching them on the hairs on the legs and lower parts of the cattle. The heat of the flies is sufficient to cause pain among the animals so that they run wildly about the fields. The small grub hatches from the eggs in from three to seven days, penetrates the skin, and migrates through the tissues of the animal, in some cases congregating in numbers in the region of the gullet. They remain there during the summer until late winter when the commence a second migration and come to the surface of the back which they perforate to enable breathing holes. In about two months they squeeze their way through these holes and drop to the ground, ready for the change of hard back, seed-like objects about three-quarters of an inch long. Pupation is completed before spring work. NO VACCINE WILL BE SUPPLIED AFTER APRIL 30, 1940.

M. S. West will administer vaccine if desired. Some for as in 1939. Ryley March 19, 1940.

Ash Curling Trophy Brought To Tofield

The Ash Curling trophy which has been competed for in many parts of Northern Alberta was brought to Tofield and Viking last week. Two rinks shipped by Law and Chapman journeyed to Viking and playing rinks skipped by Gareth Lunn ..... won the cup.

A challenge was received almost the next day two rinks from Innisfree making a bid for it. The same local rinks who won it, successfully defended it, and for the time being at least the cup will stay here.

It is many years since the Ash trophy was brought to Tofield. It was here, roughly about 15 years ago, being taken from Tofield by Viking.

Municipal Council Set Municipal And School Mill Rate

Continuing their March meeting in to the second day, Cornhill Council met on the morning of Thursday, March 14th.

Letter from Mr. Albert Hay was read. Mr. Hay announced his intention of fencing west line of E. W. of S.E. of 4-50-20. He also wished to purchase S.E. of 4-50-20. He was willing to take about 10 acres per year, turn over half of the crop, but was unable to make a down cash payment.

On the motion of Reeve Walker Mr. Hay's offer was declined.

Letter from Misericordia hospital regarding Mrs. Catherine Schmidtman. Council had not heard of this lady and letter was tabled.

Letter from Hail Insurance Board announcing further discounts was read.

Letter from Canadian Legion War Services asking for a grant was read. The Secretary was instructed the letter was tabled.

Letter from Mrs. Grene Grenmer of Minisink applied for mother's allowance. There are six children. On the motion Councillor Mindell the allowance of $10.00 per month was recommended.

Letter from City of Edmonton re Mrs. Donald and four children. Mr. Donald had joined the army, and the family were in need of assistance until first pay cheque arrived. City of Edmonton issued temporary relief and were asking Cornhill to reimburse them.

Mrs. A. Kozack wrote asking for clothing in the value of $25.00, and on motion by Councillor Kortzman, clothing list as submitted by Mrs. Kozack was passed.

Adjournment for lunch.

Resumings:—

Letter from Mrs. Cherry asking for $37.00 for rent of building the A. Kozack family lives in. The matter stopped when Mr. Kozack was taken off relief some time ago. The letter was tabled.

Mr. Herman Brand made application for relief. There were six children. He had been allowed $6.00 except during July and September when the but sawmilling no more.

was come hired— Hired elsewhere

Relief application of Mr. Bruce was considered. Mr. Bruce has a car and council was of the opinion that car should be sold before relief was issued. On motion of Councillor Conobee relief was refused.

Mr. Stinson's case was tabled.

Letter came up for discussion again. On motion of Councillor Swabey it was decided that Mr. Stinson's contract having ended March 18th, no remuneration be allowed after that date. Further arrangements to be made at the July meeting.

A list of accounts were passed for payment.

Council then made out the 1940 budget, a fairly lengthy and arduous task. In the main, expenses will approximate those of last year There is bound to be a slight over expenditure or under expenditure, but the council budgeted for a total expenditure of $26,800.00.

Municipal mill rate for 1940 then came up for consideration. In view of the new assessment, the secretary had prepared considerable data for the guidance of the councillors. The decision to set a rate hung in the balance for some time, first, the probable effect of 12 mills, then 13 mills, then 14 mills in turn being thrashed out. The final choice fell on 13 mills. A by-law covering this was given a first, second and third reading and lawfully passed.

The question as to how the district road building money, should be allotted was discussed. At present all divisions share equally, despite the fact that their road building needs and their tax paying ability vary greatly. No action was taken.

The question of allowing a discount of 10 per cent on all current taxes paid early came under discussion. The plan seemed to have worked out well in the past year and on motion of Reeve Walker, it was decided to allow a discount of 10 per cent on current taxes paid within sixty days of the date of the tax notice.

School Mill rates were then discussed and set. Holden School District mill rate was set at 10 mills; Camrose 10 mills; Clover Bar 11 mills; Lamont 18 mills. A by-law covering the above was formerly passed.

It was decided to hold the tax sale on October 15th, 1940. A tax attorney list made out so as to obtain was drafted by the individual councillors.

It was moved by Reeve Walker and carried unanimously that title deeds already advertised for sale and not in good standing or not under consolidation.—Carried.

Meeting adjourned 5:45.

ELECTION RESULTS

Even though the provincial election has held a week ago, the final standing of the different parties in the provincial legislature is uncertain This is due to the proportional representation system of voting, which calls for two or more counts in some cases, to decide the winner. The delay has also been somewhat prolonged by the provincial government running so soon after the provincial vote.

While day by day, even hourly, the provincial situation changes, there has been no change in the official Social Credit members to have a majority over all other parties in the new legislature. The latest reported standing is:

	Elected
Social Credit	30
Independents	17
Labor	1
Leading
Social Credit	9
Independents	1

In Clover Bar, F. M. Baker is leading. In Camrose the Hon. D. B. Mcken, Minister of Agriculture is elected. In Vegreville, George Weyther is elected. All these are social creditors.

In the federal election as is pretty well known, the Liberals swept the country, piling up a very large liberal majority. They won a total of 243 seats the Liberals had gained 177 and the National Government 58. The rest was made up of C.C.F. with 8, and a number of lesser known parties. Five were still doubtful.

Alberta elected seven liberals; one labor and seven members (social credit); and two remain in doubt. The 17 federal constituencies in Alberta

In the Vegreville constituency in which part of the Tofield district voted, A. Hlynka, New Democracy was leading A. E. Archer by a good margin. Dr Archer piled up a substantial lead in the early returns but this was gradually worn down as the outlying polls were heard from. The Tofield poll gave Archer a substantial majority. It is likely that A. Hlynka will be elected, though no one in this complete returns are available.

Oh! See What The Easter Bunnies Brought!

Last week end, just in time for Easter, Mr. Chas Kallal brought a generous roast of beef to the Mercury office. You know, Mr. Kallal handles cattle much the same as we handle linotype slugs, they keep coming and they keep going. He had, however killed one for his own use and if the people in Chicago get beef just as good they have certainly no cause to complain, it was very nice.

400 Canadian Women Prepare For Service As War Drivers; Groups Training In Eight Cities

Determined to fit themselves for an active role in the War, 400 Canadian girls and women in eight cities are undergoing training in the Volunteer Auxiliary Drivers Corps, under the direction of General Motors of Canada and its dealers.

Without parallel in the Dominion since its inception in the first of the New Year, the course is designed to instruct women in elementary automotive mechanics and roadside repairs, and to help prepare the for voluntary service as war-time military chauffeurs and ambulance drivers.

Classes of girls and women, many of them from prominent families are in various stages of training in Toronto, Hamilton, Montreal, Quebec, Windsor, London, Sarnia and Brantford Organization of the Corps in other cities is planned in the near future, according to executives of General Motors of Canada who are conducting the activity.

The trained instructors, who include service experts, report that their pupils are increasingly keen and consistent in interest in the work is equally intense among English speaking and French speaking girls and women. Classes in French are being held in both Montreal and Quebec city.

Voluntary Enlistment

General Motors officials emphasize that the Volunteer Auxiliary Drivers Corps is in no sense a Government or military undertaking, and no person taking the course obligates himself to make any use of the knowledge and experience thus acquired. The purpose of the Centre is not to enroll recruits for the army or its allied services, but merely to give to a group of Canadian girls and women such training as will make them more readily acceptable to the military authorities in the event that the need for women chauffeurs or ambulance drivers ever arises.

The Course has two main subsections—the theoretical part, and the practical training. Once the "recruits" have mastered the fundamental principles and theories of the internal combustion engine, and the functions of its various parts, they don most and attractive overall uniforms, which become their own property, and undergo instruction in dismantling, assembling and repairing these parts of a motor car or truck engine which come under official army regulations governing "road side emergency repairs".

While it is not the purpose of the Course to turn out full-fledged mechanics, it is intended that the graduates should be able to effect certain temporary repairs and to correct the minor engine troubles which are the cause of a majority of breakdowns.

Hrid is Dealership

The lectures and practical classes in all cases are held in General Motors dealerships, where in the practical sessions the personnel of the dealer Service Department co-operate with the lectures in demonstrating and teaching the actual mechanical tasks.

"The Volunteer Auxiliary Drivers Corps has been organized and conducted as the contribution of General Motors to the cause of prospective ness among Canada's civilian population," declared J. E. Johnson, Vice-President of General Motors Products of Canada Limited, in revealing details of the Course—which are carried on without the knowledge of the general public until very recently, and which cause is light when a newspaper reporter happened to visit a dealership where a class was in session.

"We shall be fully repaid for our time and expenditure, however," added Mr. Johnson, "if even a few of our graduates, as a result of their training, become more skilled drivers —either at the wheels of army vehicles or in the almost equally responsible task of driving cars in their own communities, where our V.A.D.C. schools exist as a definite and valuable contribution to the cause of public safety."

Forest Tent Caterpillars

(Science Service News)

According to the Annual Report of the Forest Insect Survey for 1939, recently issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, serious infestations of tent caterpillars occurred in the northern part of the Prairie Provinces. "The infested area extended from west of Prince Albert to the Nelson River. Centre of infestation were Nipawin and Hudson Bay Junction, Sask., and The Pas, Man. The last named locality was first attacked in 1936 by an outward extension of the Saskatchewan outbreak; in 1939 the infestation had extended far beyond it to the north-east. Infestation has again started around Lesser Slave Lake and on the upper reaches of the Athabasca River, and the population is building up again over a large area west of Edmonton".

Dr. D. N. Smith of the Dominion Entomological Laboratory at Winnipeg, states that the forest tent caterpillar is not a single species but a group of species, birch, alder and willow and that black poplar is quite immune to its attacks often being found in full foliage when the surrounding aspen and birch are completely stripped of their leaves.

An epidemic of tent caterpillars is a spectacular event. The trunks of trees become covered with a dense mass of caterpillars, often two or three deep, crawling up and down or clustering motionless, apparently to make a rest between feeding period. After defoliating trees in one area, the caterpillars descend to the ground and crawl in enormous numbers, often for long distances, to reach the new centres of food, leaving behind them a forest as leafless as it would be in winter. In their migrations, the larvae may cause considerable annoyance to travellers, campers and the woodsmen. A few years ago in northern Saskatchewan, a motor-boat raced cook for a fire-fighting crew was caught in tangled masses of caterpillars, the concussion caterpillar found ways and means to defeat the cook's sanitary measures. Meanwhile, in the bush, the men walked in trails more with the caterpillars crushing and sliding in the midst of their passage and dodging with slight success as the caterpillars falling from above. They were forced to work with gloves on the better to hold the handles of their dangerously slippery tools. In the camp, tents, and even bunkers, were swarming with caterpillars while all around the sound of falling excrement was like that of rain upon the forest floor.

Large numbers of the tent caterpillars frequently stop trains, the driving wheels not being able to gain traction on the rails covered with the crushed bodies of the insects.

At the time of pupation, the caterpillars spin their cocoons in protected situations on underbrush, small tree growth, fences, eaves of houses and outbuildings, fire towers and even in the concavities of immense trees. They are very likely to spin their cocoons on telephone lines. Observers report that in some years crawlers catch on aprons and jack pine bore so many cocoons as to appear covered with a heavy snow.

Epidemics usually last about three years and reappear in cycles of 10 to 12 years. Some areas seem to be the crossroads of several of these cycles and suffer attack year after year in a varying degree. After a heavy infestation, the trees usually severely formed, but they are noticeably fewer and smaller than under normal conditions.

The forms of infestations is usually very rapid and due to bacterial and fungus diseases or to parasitic flies and wasps. Artificial means of pillar bands or a living border for their suppression. By learning to control and guide each natural agency of pest determination, it may be possible, some day, to bring about a wholesale outbreaks in their beginnings or arrest their spread. This problem is under investigation at the Winnipeg Entomological Laboratory. In the meantime, artificial means of control can be used to protect small areas, shelterbelts and ornamental plantations. The Department of Agriculture Science Service, recommends the spraying or dusting of trees with creosote of lead as the principal remedy, but other methods can be used, and detailed information concerning these can be obtained by writing to the Dominion Entomological Laboratories at Indian Head, Sask. or Winnipeg.

The Wheat Situation

The possibility of the European war ending influenced wheat prices downward in the fore part of the week. If there was no war in the world today and if shipping could ply the oceans unmolested there would be a superabundance of wheat and greatest price levels could not be maintained. It is now calculated that the world carryover on July 31 will be close 1,400 million bushels, an all time record, and about 300 million bushels above the usual carry over. In normal times of peace the "bearish" influence of such a huge over-supply would have a most serious effect on prices, and the facts that Argentina had a disastrous crop failure in 1939 and the United States has poor prospects for a winter wheat crop this year would not be able to offset the depressing effect of the huge carryover.

If we accept the statements of leading statesmen in Britain and France, the war will not end soon. Undoubtedly Chancellor Hitler of Germany is using every opportunity to end the conflict. The official view is that Hitler's word is valueless, and repeated peace expressions German signs are not worth the paper they are written on; also that if peace is declared now it will only be a few years before Europe is plunged into another terrible war. There will be no better circumstances to achieve success. On the basis of these arguments the war may continue and we will go on and probably will last for several years.

On the other hand, people should recognize that there is always the possibility of peace. If the rest of the world knew that Finnish leaders were meeting in Moscow with the real leaders of that nation were accomplishing peace the world would fight to the last ditch. One can imagine how future trends accurately by the interminable wrangling over peace terms.

Senator Woolen, United States "peace ambassador" to Europe, is conferring with Mussolini, who had previously held a conference with Hitler, and is presumably discussing the possible terms which Britain and French octus firm to the belief that basic ideas of peace terms have been agreed upon.

Pessimistic reports are pouring out of the United States and every winter wheat belt. The temporary impression is caused by abundant winter snows and a thaw and a frost effect. The weather has been cold and grain is not making much growth. Any prolonged period of drouth will have most deleterious effect on the subnormal crop.

In Canada primary deliveries are declining at a surprising clip for this time of the year, and possibly the estimate for the 1939 wheat production will again have to be raised. Gordon Brown of Regina, Canadian Crop observer, estimates the year end Canadian carryover at 245 million bushels, compared with 209 million last year, and an all time high of 219 million in 1928.

Crop prospects in the west are not considered good. The long time experience is that when moisture reserves are very low a big crop is never harvested. Nevertheless there is not sufficient growth as yet to warrant decidence of spring rains.

It is reported that irrigation will probably open on the Great Lakes and the Lethbridge about the middle of next month. The low water level which on the lakes and indications are that it will be a large crop. A huge crop is expected the minute the water is on the farms. The ship owners are trying to get the government to permit higher rates than the 10c. fixed by the Board of Grain Commissioners. Such a move will be vigorously opposed by the farmers of Western Canada.

Little news is coming out of Europe regarding the harvesting of the crop there. The European crop will be a factor this year, but the low excess wars cannot be fought without a good supply of food. It is many years since the world was fighting approaching a crop failure, but this year the chances seem to favor at least a subnormal crop.—Wheat Pool Budget.

White Washing Hints

White-wash is cheap, readily available, sanitary and easy to apply. It protects the surface and brightens up dark interiors.

The surface to be white-washed should be free from dirt, dust, grease and scaly material. A stiff brush may be used to clean the surface. Just before the white-wash is applied, the surface should be slightly dampened. White-wash is easy to apply with a brush, but a sprayer may be used. Use a wide brush, working rapidly, and do not attempt to "brush out" white wash as is done with paint. Under ordinary conditions, one gallon of white-wash will cover approximately 225 square feet of wood, 180 square feet of brick and 270 square feet of plaster.

The following formulas are suggested:

(1) Add 15 pounds of common salt to 7½ gallons of water.

(2) To this solution slowly add one pound of quick lime, stirring well.

(3) This the mixture to a milky consistency with water.

A. (1) Make a paste of one sack of hydrated lime and 2 gallons of water.

(2) Dissolve 8 pounds of salt in 2 gallons of boiling water.

(3) Mix (1) and (2) when cold. Stir thoroughly.

(4) Into the resulting mixture, add 5 pounds of Portland cement.

It is always advisable to prepare the lime and water and paste a few days before it is to be used.

G-M Car Production Shows Unimpaired By War Orders

Oshawa, March 14.—The production of passenger and commercial vehicles by General Motors of Canada is proceeding unimpaired by the acceptance of war orders, it is revealed in an official statement issued by Harry J. Carmichael, Vice-President and General Manager of the Company.

"In the interests of accuracy," said Mr. Carmichael, "and because of ill-founded reports which always circulate in war-time, it is advisable at the present time to emphasize that the production facilities of General Motors of Canada are more than adequate to fill all orders for private and commercial motor vehicles, in addition to war orders which General Motors, in common with other large industrial concerns, has received from the Dominion Government and other friendly Powers.

Contrary to reports which have arisen, in some instances, found their way into public print, added Mr. Carmichael, "this Company is perfectly able to make in full every contribution to Canada's war effort without altering its customary production schedules."

Low Cost 20-Day Vacations To Pacific Coast

Winnipeg, March 25.—Arrangements have been made by the Canadian railways to operate a series of 20-day vacation fares to the Pacific Coast during the summer holiday season, according to an announcement today by J. A. Bence, secretary of the Canadian Passenger Association, Western Lines.

These 20-day vacation fares proved so popular with the travelling public during the last two summers that this year it has been decided by the Canadian National Railways to make the fares available every Friday, Saturday and Sunday from May 31st to September 27th.

Tickets will be good to Vancouver, Victoria and Seattle, as well as to Jasper in the Canadian Rockies, from all stations in Ontario, west of Port Arthur and Armstrong, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Another feature this year is that stopovers will be allowed at any point on both the going and return journey. Tickets will be good in tourist and standard sleeping cars.

As a result of these low cost fares, the railways anticipate a heavy tourist travel westbound during the summer months.

A Closer Financing Scheme

Quite a number of farmers have wondered just how the Government Forage Crop Seed plan is financed. They know that any number up to 80 farmers in a municipality may purchase limited quantities of forage crop seed at half the market price plus freight, for which they pay cash, but do not know just how the other half of the cost of the seed is paid for. Therefore the following, though dealing with figures should be interesting.

It is fairly well known that the plan spreads over three years and so we will start off with the—

FIRST YEAR

Municipal District puts $300.00 in a special account in the bank. The federal and provincial governments between them furnish the municipality with $900.00 worth of seed. This seed is sold to those asking for it for $450.00, which money is placed with the $300.00 in the bank, making a total of $750.

SECOND YEAR

$750.00 worth of seed is purchased, and sold by the Municipal District for $875.00, this $875.00 being placed in the bank account of the Municipal District adds $187.50, making a total of $562.50.

THIRD YEAR

To the $562.50 left in the bank the Municipal District adds another $562.50. With this money it purchases $1125.00 worth of seed which it sells out to farmers for $562.50, thus wiping out the account and leaving the slate clean.

DETAILS

Value of seed bought and distributed	$2775.00
Cost to the Municipal District	$ 487.50
Cost to the farmers buying seed	$1375.00
Cost to the two governments	$ 912.50
	$2775.00

East Versus West

There is published in Montreal a splendidly written monthly news letter entitled "The Printed Word", and [illegible] the tone of many of its articles, this publication is engaged in defending the maintenance of tariffs now enjoyed by manufacturing industry. In recent numbers "The Printed Word" pays its tribute to the view that the West has a general need for East, and in turn attention to the growing industries of Alberta and Manitoba, and then infers that because of this Western industrial expansion the West can not truly appreciate the differences of opinion with the East.

Most courteously we venture to say that "The Printed Word" [illegible] is missing the point at issue.

The West has not, and never did have any quarrel with Eastern Canada. The issue is not one of the West against the East, but is of a Western and all Canadian farmers against those manufacturing industries which are sheltered behind high tariff walls, and the protest of the farmers is against those highly protected manufacturing industries only, and whether they operate in the East or the West makes no difference, for the burden imposed by high protected industries on our farmers obliges them to sell their products mainly on world unprotected markets, and we believe, more than our farmers can possibly bear, and if continued will certainly force them down to an uneconomic low and dangerous standard of living.

Something also, which is even of greater importance, happens to land, is that these high tariffs curtail imports, and so automatically curtail the export of our products, and if continued, will certainly place large numbers of our farmers in leave their farms, and so be forced into unemployment and on relief.

We most certainly would like to hear a discussion from "The Printed Word" on this particular problem. Do they consider it fair and just? And in the meantime we respectfully point out too that many good authorities consider that the high tariffs set up during the last decade have had much to do with bringing about this present period of world depression and unemployment, and in addition to doing high damage by restricting as they do international trade, have been a primary cause of the present disturbed desperate international war situation.—(Searle Grain Company, Ltd.)

IN EARLY BRITAIN
We have traced the art of brewing from the Greeks of 500 B.C. up to ancient Rome. The Roman soldiers introduced it to early Britons. Previous to their invasion the usual drinks of the early Britons were water, milk and mead (an intoxicating drink made from honey). Beer being suitable to the climate, and so readily made, by an intelligent people with plenty of corn, it was gladly welcomed and soon became the national beverage.

The Condition Of Wheat Seed In Relation To Disease

(Science Service Note)

The use of sound, disease-free seed is an important step in attempting to grow a uniform high yielding crop of wheat, states P. H. Simmonds, Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology, University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon. It is understood, of course, that the seed should be true to variety, clean, and of strong germination. The importance of knowing the percentage germination cannot be urged too strongly. Such a test will show the vigour of the seed and frequently give, as well, indications of disease. If the germination percentage is low indicating weakness or disease, one should carefully examine the seed in an endeavour to determine the cause. Sometimes this is very noticeable as in the cases of shrivelling, frost injury, heat damage, mechanical injuries, fungous observations and so forth. Heavy infestations conducted at the Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology at Saskatoon have shown that plants from seed damaged in any way are likely to be stunted by rootrot fungi. These fungi are common in the soils and are also carried on seed. If injured seed must be sown, great care should be taken in the selection of a seed treatment. It might also be advisable to increase the seeding rate. Tests have shown that the recently developed organic mercury dust treatments such as are used for smut control, give some protection to weak or diseased seeds. The use of doubtful seed, however, is not advisable under ordinary conditions.

Occasionally wheat seed samples show many discoloured kernels. This is usually a definite indication of a fungus disease which may attack and kill the young plant during its early development or invade the crown and retard the growth throughout the season. Consequently, samples showing a large amount of discoloration or smudge must be looked upon with suspicion. Seed showing only a trace or a slight amount, may be used, but it would be advisable to treat such lots with a dust as mentioned above. When there is doubt as to the importance or nature of the disease in seed samples, they should be sent to a plant pathologist for examination. Information on plant disease problems may be obtained from the nearest Dominion Plant Pathology Laboratory. These are located at Edmonton, Saskatoon and Winnipeg.

WHEN ONE DISH IS THE WHOLE MEAL

One-dish meals save time, fuel, flavour and motions—especially the motions of dishwashing. They are, at their same time, thoroughly satisfying and nourishing, while containing all the necessities of a well balanced meal.

The following recipe for "Meat Tickets" is a particularly handy way of achieving that all-in-one simplicity. Baked apples with whipped cream make an ideal dessert and one can cook the sauce in the same pan as the main dish.

Having several cans of Canadian fish such as salmon, or chicken boiled always on hand, is an additional time saver in preparing this dish, though any left-over fish will do just as well.

Choose large potatoes. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) about 50 minutes. Cut off top, scoop out potato, mash, adding butter salt and hot milk or cream. Fill the potato shell with creamed salmon or other Canadian fish. Over this piece a layer of carrots, asparagus, or what have you. Then the well-seasoned mashed potato in a mountain to top the whole for —a piece of butter atop this. Pop them into a 350 degree F. oven to heat through and to brown.

Serve on heated platter or individual dish garnished with parsley and cold slaw if desired.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

In 1929 the "Crop Testing Plan" grew in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, in co-operation with the Dominion Experimental Farms, a large number of small plots of different varieties of wheat. Each plot was sown with exactly the same amount of carefully measured seed so that accurate yield tests could be determined. The average of the plots yields, in bushels to the acre, in Alberta, where there was no rust damage, were as follows:—Garnet 35; Red Bobs 54; Marquis 48; Thatcher 46; Reward 41; Reward 39.

In Saskatchewan, where bush stem rust and a little leaf rust occurred the yields were—Thatcher 42; Reward 39; Regent 39; Apex 39; Marquis 32.

In Manitoba, where much black stem rust and much leaf rust occurred, the yields were—Garnet 32; Regent 41; Apex 39; Thatcher 39; Reward 37.

The Dominion Experimental Farm officials state that the yield per variety, both obtained from these plots, support the results that have been previously published in their annual Experimental Farm Station tests.

Considerable interesting data also was made at the same time, of determining how much the usual practice of "rolling" reduces the yield per acre. The results of this test will be shown in a future "World of Wheat" article.

Creamery Short Course Results

The Creamery Short Course, which is a joint undertaking by the Dairy Department of the Provincial Farm, and the Department of Agriculture, Edmonton, has come to a successful conclusion. Examinations were held on Friday, covering the work taught during the past four weeks. Twenty students from all parts of the province attended the railway camp-school where the cabs had been quartered and two meals served.

Neither did Clarence like the familiar attitude of Mr. Rafter. Hitherto, almost every Sunday found the genial host of the camp-school in the pulpit conducting the service, and in lighting half.

Since their diet of whitefish and cisco at Hedchmer had been more planned by rolled oats and condensed milk, Clarence found the former to be more amiable. He sawed the bear in two, leaving the hind part, newly on the north train, who immediately cooked each meal for the cubs.

John Bull Wants Breakfast Bacon

London—Mason, the rural mission organizer for Essex, has passed out of the limelight, chased by a question by the British newsmen to a change in diet. The people are tired, he said, of food boiled mason on the smoove by the brown shortage and extolled its virtues to housewife and epicure.

But neither housewife or epicure thought much of the new-old dish (it was new to many in England but is Scotland they've been eating it for years at home). Now the subject of food has decided to forget about mason.

"The ministry had only one eyes cash," said a ministry official, "Mason has been required a taste for it. I think most people prefer their usual breakfast dish of bacon."

He recalled too that supplies of mason and ham were more abundant than a few months back. The weekly ration per person doubled from four to eight ounces soon after rationing was instituted. What's more, bacon and ham can be ordered in restaurants without ration books and ham sandwiches are still obtainable.

Huge supplies from Canada under the British government's agreement to buy up the dominion's exportable surplus helped eliminate the shortage.

Red Cross Wants Names Of Airmen

Toronto, April 1.—A nation-wide appeal is being launched by the Canadian Red Cross Society for the names and addresses of Canadians who have joined the Royal Air Force and other Empire air formations in the hope that about 1,500 Canadian lads had gone to England to join the Royal Air Force without telling anyone war was declared.

"At that time," an explained, "there was a great rush on the part of the Canadian boys to get into the Royal Air Force. Our own lads were afraid they wouldn't get in if they specified they were Canadians, so they joined English addresses were estimated at 1,500. It may be larger, for the British War Office had no definite records."

"Every name we get from them will have a visitor attached to it and it will be her job to see that any Canadian patient is cared for and that news is sent to his relatives here in the Dominion. After the last war, thousands of mothers thanked us for this service."

Regarding prisoners of war, Dr. Routley declared that the Canadian Red Cross was able to send parcels of food and clothing to Canadians interned in belligerent countries and to keep relatives informed of their condition.

"We can keep track of our men who are serving with Canadian units," Dr. Routley said, "but it is important that we get the names and addresses of those 1,500 or so air force men who have not specified that they were from Canada."

The National Commissioner quoted the instructs of the Canadian from Florida, Ontario, who for eighteen days was thought missing or dead. His parents had received this note in a roundabout way, but the British War Office could send no report, simply because the young man had not given a Canadian address. The Canadian Red Cross investigated and quickly identify the parents officially that the lad was reported missing.

Utopias And Nonplanning Divide British Opinion

Federation is a word widely talked, and it's a plank in Labor's platform— A Declaration of the Rights of Man under debate—Common people go slow in accepting new theories.

(By Peter Lyne in Christian Science Monitor.)

London:—The man in the street in Britain is much concerned just now with striking a balance between these planning pastoral Utopias and these war, either from cynicism or political policy, refuse to consider any plans at all for a better world until the war is won.

Whereas formerly it has been mainly by intellectual and political circles who have debated such questions as economic justice for all countries and equal rights for all men, today the audience has been enormously widened.

Federation is a word heard on all sides; the Labor Party which polled more than 8,000,000 votes at the last general election, has made it a plank in its platform. A newspaper with a circulation of 2,000,000 is daily debating a new Declaration of Rights of Man. Other million-seller periodicals have been fostering the Federal idea and the virtues of H. G. Wells and other prominent writers on a new world order.

While the ordinary man is on his guard against false hopes being engendered by ideas which give insufficient attention to practical details and difficulties, there is widespread feeling that mankind has now has the opportunity and a tremendous desire to plan anew.

Most Follow Public Opinion

It is recognized, too, that if peace is to be lasting the foundations of the new order must be built according to the will of the people. Therefore whatever the skeptics may say about Federal Union and the rights of man a large section of the public in this country is taking a sincere interest in discussions of such plans. To endeavor to undervalue the interest at stake is soon as the first step—a step moreover which can be taken before the war ends.

Among prominent persons and organizations rendering active service in examining the question of a New Magna Charta are Sir Archibald Sinclair, leader of the Liberal opposition in Parliament, Archbishop of York, Lord Sankey, a former Lord Chancellor, Prof. Archibald Main, Moderator of the Church of Scotland, Mr. Clement R Attlee, leader of the Parliamentary Labor Party, the Earl of Lytton, a former Viceroy of India, Mr Bernard Shaw, Mr. H. G. Wells, Sir Norman Angell, Nobel peace-prize winner, Sir Richard Gregory, President of the British Association, and Miss Margaret Bondfield, first woman to hold rank of Cabinet Minister in Britain.

"Let the rights of man be proclaimed after the war in a formal document like the Scottish Covenant or Magna Charta or Bill of Rights," said Sir Archibald Sinclair speaking at a matriculation as Lord Rector of Aberdeen University recently. He added that the document should be signed by nations and vanquished alike a fact by all nations prepared to accept the responsibilities of maintaining the fabric of western civilization.

The draft charter of rights which is the basis of the debate being conducted by the Daily Herald contains 10 chapters. They are headed:

(1) Protection against violence (2) Factual (3) Fundamental law (4) Protection against secret violence (5) Common inheritance. (6) Freedom of thought. (7) Freedom of association. (8) Freedom of trade. (9) Property rights. (10) Freedom to travel

One of the most interesting points raised by letter from ordinary readers of the debate has been that the Rights of Man must be defined as well as the Rights of Man. The idea that man's responsibilities or obligations are as important as his rights has been evolved by the Rev. Henry Carter, Methodist leader and a member of other correspondents.

And Nobody Listened!

The war is building up a magnificent fund of apocryphal anecdotes, and the following take—which has just arrived in the United States via London—is doubtless as fictitious as it is illustrative. A family of Schmidts, it seems, had a son in a German U-boat, and they and their whole Rhineland village were very proud of him. Came the day when they were informed that his submarine with all hands aboard and been lost.

The Schmidts were properly sympathized with by the village. A local Gruppenführer who called on them advised them to take comfort in patriotic marches on the radio, and the family turned the dial anxiously after his departure, and to their consternation found themselves listening to a German rates from London. The voice said: "We shall now read a further part of the names prisoners of war. They have been saved from U-65 and are interned in Great Britain." Listening with all their ears, the Schmidts heard the name: "Matrosengefreiter Otto Schmidt."

They did not listen any more, but rejoiced mightily. They started out to tell their friends. And then stopped short. There was a penalty of three years' imprisonment for listening to the foreign radio! So the Schmidts contained themselves and rejoiced inwardly. So did the whole village, which in its various ways heard the news, too.

At the memorial service, already announced for the next day but one of the hero, the officiating clergyman referred reverently to the fate of the young man's name and never actually pronounced it. That evening the Burgermeister called on the Schmidts and told them he was a great believer in dreams, that on the previous night he had distinctly dreamed that Otto was safe, and that if he were long, he wouldn't worry any more. The miller, the butcher, the baker, and many others made overtures to the Schmidts very much the same story. Everybody shared the good news. And nobody had listened to the London radio!—Christian Science Monitor.

Did Not Like 'Competition'

Calgary, April 3.—A man who has been in the habit of writing annoymous letters to city police criticizing them for the manner of bootlegging operating in Calgary, was described in police court Monday as "one of the chief bootleggers in Calgary's east end" by Detective Sergeant Mal. Colin Bayd.

The man was William Kilby, 34, charged with being in possession of liquor purchased on a permit other than his own. He had been refused a permit. Found guilty, he was fined $50 and costs or 40 days. He will take the jail term.

When Kilby was arrested Friday night by Detectives Bruce McCannel and E. Melver, after they found liquor in his room purchased on permits other man's permit, they asked him to write out "chief of police" several times and secured other samples of his writing, the court was told. The writing checked with that of the letters and Kilby then admitted writing the letters.

Hundreds Of New Uses Found For Farm Products

Line Elevators Pressing For Research in West

Farm chemurgy—the new ally of agriculture—is aimed at serving as consumer new things and necessities of life at low cost and yet provide greater income for the farmer, said Cecil Lamont on his return from attending the Sixth Annual Chemurgic Conference of 1,000 leaders of American Agriculture, Industry and Science held in Chicago Mr. Lamont represented the Line Country Elevator Companies at the conference.

At the meeting Mr. Lamont put forward a proposal that the Farm Chemurgic Council form an Eastern and a Western Canadian Division. The proposal will be considered by the newly elected Board of Directors of the Association at their spring meeting. Mr. Lamont has been asked to submit proposed names of Canadian representatives to act on the Board of Directors.

Mr. Lamont's address outlined to the gathering the new discoveries of research for finding new industrial uses for farm products. Representative of new large industrial concern said that the Chemurgic Council was formed in 1935 and since 1936 on scientific research work has been carried on which has made up of products which were not known or in use 20 years ago. This research work has cost $2,000,000 annually on research. Each new product which is found is only a small percentage of six years of preliminary research. On May 15th it will put a new type of automobile on the market made from coal, air and water by the Dupronsolor method and will place silk stockings. It is claimed that these so-called "nylon" stockings are identical with silk stockings in their resistance and will wear much longer than silk stockings.

The four regional research laboratories established by the United States Government will be in operation this year. They are dedicated to finding new industrial uses for farm products and the Government is expending $4,000,000 annually for their upkeep.

Mr. Lamont said that the North-West Line Elevators' Association will be asked to further representations to the Dominion Government for the appropriation of funds for the establishment of a Western Division of the Canadian Research Council at the forthcoming session of parliament. The purpose of the laboratory will be to find new uses and extend markets for wheat and other products of the Western farm.

Figures were presented to the Chicago meeting to show that industrial recovery of the United States used two per cent of their gross income on research while only one-seventh of one per cent of farm income is spent on finding new uses and extending uses for farm products. Mr. Lamont pointed out that the amount being spent on research in Canada for new uses for farm products is very small, practically nil.

The Chicago meeting heard of the great strides which have been made in finding thousands of new uses for soya-beans, milk, coal and wood. From cellulose, a product of wood 16,000 new things have been made and new ones are being made. New uses were being found for casein, a product of skim milk, also from corn and soya beans products. Entire experimental feeding for cows and sheep-meat had been made from soya bean proteins. Synthetic rubber had been made from coal, limestone and water, which measured our users against the high cost of rubber which prevailed during the last war. In Arkansas alone, 25 cotton ginnert and men have formed of the States, 90 new industries had been established for the processing of new industrial commodities during needs from products of the farm.

Glass that crystalizes is a new commodity which will be on the market within a short time, said Mr. Lamont.

Leaders of farm organizations of the United States were present at the gathering. There was a tendency on the part of those farm leaders was to frown on governmental subsidies to farmers in the way of "export subsidies, acreage control and reduction and over normal granaries, which they contended had failed in their purpose. The farm leaders advocated tariff protection for home-grown farm products and looked toward farm chemurgy as the salvation of the United States farmer. They advocated replacing surplus wheat acreage with agricultural commodities which were now being imported. Increased acreages of flax, sugar beets and cultivation of range lands for cattle and sheep out of marginal wheat lands was advocated. Those farm leaders also advocated chemurgy as a means of creating new industries. This, they mentioned, would bring about more employment which in turn would create

North West Line Elevators Send Out New Publication

We are in receipt of the initial number of "Sentinus and Harvest" a new publication of the North West Line Elevators Association. The publication is of four pages 9½ x 11 inches and contains some timely information to the agriculturists. There has been over 90,000 copies mailed to farmers of the three prairie provinces.

Line Elevator Agency Makes Interim Payment

An interim payment of 14 cents per bushel on wheat handled through Grain Sales Agency, Limited, operating under the Wheat Co-operative Marketing Act (1939), was announced late last week. Grain Sales Agency is comprised of 2500 line country elevators. Under the Wheat Co-operative Marketing Act the line elevators accepted grain from farmers who wished to pool it. An initial payment of 70 cents per bushel, which guarantee was guaranteed by the Dominion Government, was made.

The corporation was informed that Russia was now producing 1,000,000 acres of sun flowers for oil extraction from which 400,000,000 pounds will be produced annually. Each new product is found in relation to the average of six years of preliminary research. On May 15th it will put a new type of automobile on the market made from coal, air and water by the Dupronsolor method and will place silk stockings. It is claimed that these so-called "nylon" stockings are identical with silk stockings in their resistance and will wear much longer than silk stockings.

The four regional research laboratories established by the United States Government will be in operation this year. They are dedicated to finding new industrial uses for farm products and the Government is expending $4,000,000 annually for their upkeep.

Mr. Lamont said that the North-West Line Elevators' Association will be asked to further representations to the Dominion Government for the appropriation of funds for the establishment of a Western Division of the Canadian Research Council at the forthcoming session of parliament. The purpose of the laboratory will be to find new uses and extend markets for wheat and other products of the Western farm.

Figures were presented to the Chicago meeting to show that industrial recovery of the United States used two per cent of their gross income on research while only one-seventh of one per cent of farm income is spent on finding new uses and extending uses for farm products. Mr. Lamont pointed out that the amount being spent on research in Canada for new uses for farm products is very small, practically nil.

The Chicago meeting heard of the great strides which have been made in finding thousands of new uses for soya-beans, milk, coal and wood. From cellulose, a product of wood 16,000 new things have been made and new ones are being made. New uses were being found for casein, a product of skim milk, also from corn and soya beans products. Entire experimental feeding for cows and sheep-meat had been made from soya bean proteins. Synthetic rubber had been made from coal, limestone and water, which measured our users against the high cost of rubber which prevailed during the last war. In Arkansas alone, 25 cotton ginnert and men have formed of the States, 90 new industries had been established for the processing of new industrial commodities during needs from products of the farm.

Glass that crystalizes is a new commodity which will be on the market within a short time, said Mr. Lamont.

Leaders of farm organizations of the United States were present at the gathering. There was a tendency on the part of those farm leaders was to frown on governmental subsidies to farmers in the way of "export subsidies, acreage control and reduction and over normal granaries, which they contended had failed in their purpose. The farm leaders advocated tariff protection for home-grown farm products and looked toward farm chemurgy as the salvation of the United States farmer. They advocated replacing surplus wheat acreage with agricultural commodities which were now being imported. Increased acreages of flax, sugar beets and cultivation of range lands for cattle and sheep out of marginal wheat lands was advocated. Those farm leaders also advocated chemurgy as a means of creating new industries. This, they mentioned, would bring about more employment which in turn would cre-

The Outlook For Canadian Barley

The outlook for barley in Canada is closely related to developments attaining out of the war. As pointed out in our review of the international barley situation, normal trade in barley has been disrupted, first, by the disappearance of Polish supplies, second, by the rise in ocean freight rates and the scarcity of tonnage and, third by certain deliberate actions as the curtailment of imports of Californian barley into the United Kingdom. So far, importing countries have taken less from abroad of both feed and malting varieties and have shifted their demand from impermeable sources to the Argentine. There are signs now that importing countries have reversed their policy and are buying cereals in more normal quantities. This, in itself, is favorable to a steady demand for Canadian barley. Our favorable geographical position should also become more and more significant as time goes on.

Demand for barley as Feed grain in Canada has also been affected by the war. Even before the war began the hog population had been increasing. On June 1,1939, there were 4.2 million head of hogs in Canada compared with 2.3 million head on June 1, 1926, with the largest expansion occurring in the Prairie Provinces. The agreement whereby Canada has agreed to ship up to a weekly maximum of 6.00 million pounds of bacon and hams up to October 31, 1940, should further stimulate production and increase the demand for barley which is the chief feed for hogs in Canada.—Pioneer Grain Company Ltd.

THE ELECTIONS IN RETROSPECT—

WITH THE thunder of two elections dying in the distance, Albertans may now look out and survey losses and gains. To those candidates who won, the gain will no doubt be considerable. To those party workers closest to them, the result may or may not justify the effort. To those candidates who lost, the scene would be drear indeed. Carried away by their own political exuberance, surrounded by friends whose continual encouragement must have buoyed up hope, the cold figures of election results was a "let down" which required all the fortitude mankind is capable of. But to the ordinary man, to the ordinary farmer, the election result did not mean so much.

Before the election, Albertan's were served by a government which in effect was a link in the democratic governmental set up of Canada. After the election the situation was unchanged. Short of a dominion wide upheaval, the situation is unchanged. The result matters very little whether the ordinary citizen votes on the losing side or the losing side. Win or lose, he will be called on to pay the shot. This was quite well illustrated a few days before the election in the Mercury Office Window were pieces of advertising soliciting votes for three provincial candidates. A working man signed to read them, whereupon a bystander said, "Take your choice you'll get no matter who gets in, you'll still have to work for a living."

On looking back, there is no real cause for those whose sympathies and preferences went to glory, to bemoan their fate. Neither should there be a desire on the part of those who won, for gratulation. Taking for granted that Alberta is politically important enough, and it is to its benefit to use the two party system, Alberta now has a reasonably well balanced legislative assembly. The government has a sufficient majority to impose its will and the opposition is strong enough to thoroughly test on the floor of the house every piece of legislation submitted.

BLADDERS OF LARD—

IT IS A long time since bladders of lard were really common. The melon shaped, perfectly smooth containers are rarely seen around country butcher shops to-day. Though there was a time when the shop just didn't look the same without them. New bright lithographed tins have been standard containers for lard for many years, these in part at least being supplanted by the one pound package.

One of the things that must have puzzled the Canadian housewife during the past year or so is the gradually increasing price of bacon, and ham and the gradual decreasing price of lard. Up to a few years ago when pork rose in price all pork products including lard, rose also. But now, judging by current quotations on lard, this product is definitely a weak sister. What is the reason? Well, right now there are at least two, the war and the inroads of the vegetable fat industry into the lard market. Great Britain is calling for bacon and still more bacon, but it is not asking for lard. In fact according to one food authority, the war is simply hastening the end of lard as food shortening in Great Britain. Owing to the necessity for saving space on Atlantic transport and for the preservation of foreign currency, Great Britain has been forced to import practically all imports of hog fat from the United States, the principal supplier of this product to Great Britain. The authority mentioned, speaking of Great Britain, says: "In about six weeks time lard, as used by manufacturers and the housewife, will cease to exist. I am confident that this product will never return."

So it would appear as if scientists have another problem on their hands. They gave us seedless oranges and seedless raisins, now they can tackle the problem of the "lardless pig". Certainly the plump round pig of years gone by is more definitely than ever a back number. While perhaps to the lard industry the change in shortening demand is no joke, we are reminded of one we frequently heard as a boy and can't help resist telling it now. In England there is quite a demand for "streaked bacon," layers of fat and layers of lean. Much bacon is also imported from Ireland. One day an Irish pig raiser was asked how he made his bacon streaked. He replied: "Well, we feed the pigs heavily one day and starve them the next."

If forging makes pigs fat and starving them makes them lean, then perhaps the secret of the lardless pig lies in not feeding them at all!

DOUGHNUTS—

ON MARCH 30th, at Bangor, Maine, the Hotel Men's Association met and did honor to the humble doughnut and the man who modernized it.

There was a time, horror of horrors, when there were no doughnuts. How people got along we do not know, but that is history. Then the light dawned, ninety years ago—in this way. Captain Hanson Gregory, master of a schooner and dabbler in the culinary arts is said to have first invented the famous ring doughnut. So legend says, the captain once lost six men overboard after they had eaten too many holeless doughnuts. They "sank to the bottom like plummets before a rescue could be made." From this incident, again we quote legend, the name "sinkers" came into being. Anyway the captain, being resourceful evolved the plan of making doughnuts in ring form so that the heat from the fat had not so far to go to cook the centre of the dough. Whether the captain, thinking of the six men gone, wanted in a spirit of revenge, to turn the tables on the doughnuts and from then on have them fashioned in the shape of lifebelts, we do not know. But we do know that over the whole American continent, from young boys and old boys, from young girls and, even though they may have to make them, from old girls, three cheers go to the captain who left such a legacy to all mankind.

Scotland

Are you not weary in your distant places,
For, far from Scotland of the mist and storm,
Memory lures, the sun-coins on your faces,
The days so long and warm?
When all around you is the strange fields sleeping,
The dusty roads where no feet come nor come,
To the highlands and the lowlands of your home?

Let torrents pour then, but the great winds rally,
Snow-silence fall, or lightning blue the night;
The lights of home shines brightly in the window,
And, smiled son of Scotland, it is right.
For you have wandered over seas of longing,
And now you dream, and now you will may weep,
When all the recollections come a-thronging
Of the old country where your fathers sleep.

Invictus

By William Henley.

Out of the night that covers me,
Black as the pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever gods may be
For my unconquerable soul.

In the fell clutch of circumstance,
I have not winced nor cried aloud.
Under the bludgeonings of chance
My head is bloody, but unbowed.

Beyond this place of wrath and tears
Looms but the Horror of the Shade,
And yet the menace of the years
Finds, and shall find me unafraid.

It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am master of my fate;
I am the captain of my soul.

Recognition

Nathaniel Hawthorne, kindhearted author of "The Scarlet Letter," once, passed at Liverpool, was visited by a young Yankee boy who had crossed the sea to seek his fortune, and new Yankee, friendless and penniless. The boy presented a pompous bore. The clerk doubted that he was an American, and decided he was trying to steal a pass. Any, but upon the lad's insistence, told Mr. Hawthorne of the young fellow.

Hawthorne looked keenly at the caller, smiled, and said: "You want a passage to America?"

"Yes, sir."

"And you say you are an American?"

"From what part of America?"

"United States, sir."

"What state?"

"New Hampshire, sir."

"What Town?"

"Exeter, sir."

Hawthorne looked at him a full minute before asking finally, "What is the best apple in your town?"

"Pippin-milk Folsom, sir" said the boy. His eyes glistened at the Celtic recollection.

"It's all right," said Hawthorne to the clerk, "give him a passage."—Wall Street Journal.

Liberal Ahead By One Vote Acadia Riding

Federal election in Acadia riding in southern Alberta was left in doubt Tuesday as to result, with the Liberal leading the Social Credit-Democracy candidate by just one vote.

The closest previous vote in the dominion, with the Social Credit-er ahead on Monday by three votes, was returned Tuesday as the closest on record. Active Service vote, which gave the Liberal a margin of three votes. That made the count a tie, but a few hours later on of the five missing civilian polls, reported, giving the Liberal Province to the Social Credit-ers four.

But there are still four civilian polls in the constituency to be reported, out of the total 100 polls. These polls are those isolated by bad roads, but their results are expected to be known within the next few days.

Sponge Cakes And How They Are Made

(By Katherine Baker)

The distinguishing features of true sponge and angel food cakes are that they contain no shortening and no baking powder. They are leavened solely by air beaten into the eggs. Most sponge cake can be made however, with baking powder and fewer eggs but now that the price of eggs is lower, we suggest that the homemaker try her hand at the real thing. The points to remember in making a sponge cake are to use the finest and lightest flour on the market and to sift it several times to incorporate as much air as possible, to beat eggs whites until they are stiff enough to hold up in peaks but not dry, now fine sugar only in combining the ingredients, employ only the folding motion and fold only enough to mix ingredients.

Now you know—and here is a sponge cake recipe guaranteed to produce a perfect cake if the rules are followed.

Sponge Cake

1 cup sifted cake flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1½ tablespoons lemon juice
6 egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon colored
1 cup whites
1 cup sifted sugar

Sift flour once, measure, add salt, sift again. Add lemon rind and juice to beaten egg yolks and beat with rotary egg beater until very thick and light. Beat egg whites with flat wire whisk until stiff enough to hold up in peaks, but not dry. Fold in sugar, a small amount at a time; then egg yolks. Fold in flour, a small amount at a time. Turn into ungreased tube pan and bake in slow oven (325 degrees F.) 1 hour or until done. Remove from oven and invert pan 1 hour, or until cold.

Boy Taken Among Baboons

The story of the "baboon boy", a South African native about 18 years old who was nurtured by baboons and behaved like one until rescued by a party of hunters, is authenticated, according to Dr. F. Foley Jr., of George Washington University, by evidence presented to him by Dr. Raymond A. Dart of the University of Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, S. A.

Natural scientists have always been reluctant to listen to stories of human beings alleged to have been brought up by wolves, apes, etc., but this one seems authentic, Dr. Foley says in Science, the organ of the American Association for the Advancement of Science that the boy was captured when he proved slower than the group he was with, in running away from the hunters. After a year of "unlearning" he was turned over to a farmer for whom he has been working.

His arms were abnormally long and his buttocks developed for jumping around trees walking on all fours. He mimicked a baboon and exhibited other animal-like mannerisms, according to Dr. Foley, including a violent dislike for bathing, and a tendency to "monkey-climb". In food he preferred raw corn and cactus. Today he has become a dependable worker and is considered a responsible individual. He has learned the use of knives and forks and is able to relate some details of his past.

Toronto.—"Unduly low wage scales" for Canadian teachers should be remedied at once, declared J. W. More than half of Canada's 24,000 teachers, he said, are paid less than the girls who bind the school books, while 12,000 earned less than $10 a week during 1939.

Blast Of Oats

(Solomon News Review)

Almost every farmer has noticed, at some time or other, a condition commonly known as "blast" or "blindness" of oats. He will have noticed that some of the spikelets in the head have failed to form kernels. These spikelets, which are commonly found on the lower part of the head, are quite empty and the chaff has a white, papery appearance. Sometimes a third or more of the head consists of these sterile and non-productive spikelets.

The cause of this condition is not very difficult to explain, states Dr. Johnson, Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology, Winnipeg. The soil plant forms its spikelets some weeks before it comes into head. If the conditions of early growth have been very favorable, it will produce a large number of spikelets. If weather and soil conditions thereafter remain good, it may be able to carry all these spikelets to maturity. But if adverse conditions set in during the later stages of growth, the plant apparently responds by cutting off the nourishment supply from the youngest and least-developed spikelets, chiefly those located at the base of the head. In consequence these die and wither while the older spikelets in the upper part of the head keep on growing. The adverse conditions that conspire to bring about blast include drought, rust and leaf injuries such as are caused by grasshoppers and other insects, roots, basketworm and so forth.

As these are factors over which the farmer has little or no control, he is naturally not in a position to remove the causes of blast. That is done and partly because of the more not to say, however, that he can do vigorous development of early-sown nothing to reduce or minimize blast oats.

Social Credit Now Holds 36 House Seats

With the result in doubt in only one riding, Alberta's Social Credit government Tuesday held 36 seats in the next legislature of 57 members. Independents held 19 and Labor 1.

Seven counts Monday gave two more seats to Social Credit, these being the new riding of Spirit River, won by H. E. Dubok, and Acadia-Coronation, where the winner was C. E. Gerhart.

Grouard is the only riding where the count has not been completed, but J. A. Mandzuk, S.C., is reported to have a lead of 150 over Lieut. J. H. Trembley, Liberal, and member for that riding in the last house. Lieut. Trembley now is overseas with the Edmonton Regiment.

In most parts of Canada, the factors that bring about blast however appear, towards midsummer. If the oat plant has already come into head by the time these factors exert their action, it very largely escapes their influence. It is therefore clear that the chief weapon of the farmer to combat this yield-reducing condition is early sowing. The oat plant is by nature a cool-temperature plant. It usually develops well in the late spring and early summer while temperatures are still low and moisture abundant. But whether it has livened able and with it come the various factors that promote blast. Experiments have shown conclusively that early-sown oats yield better than late-sown—partly because blast is reduced and partly because of the more vigorous development of early-sown oats.

Grenfell Dominion aid for missions was a right which all members should demand, said Rev. J. W. Buchanan, secretary of the Alberta Teachers' Alliance in Calgary last week. Speaking before the annual convention of teachers, Mr. Buchanan said Alberta's 2,000 teachers concentrated on the matter of educational financing somewhat during the early way. Recently he had declared Canada's educational system to be haywire except in Alberta.

Chapter 1

It was the smoothest Formal the Serenity ever gave. I mean it really was," enlisted Norma Poole.

"Far be it from me to doubt it," murmured Janet.

"Did I tell you about the favors?" inquired Norma eagerly.

Janet nodded. "Yes, you told me."

She might have added that she heard the serenity dance decreased until she was weary of its subject, but Norma meant to be kind and after all it was not her fault that Janet Phillips had not been able to go away to an exclusive finishing school with the other girls in her crowd.

"Want to dance, Norma?" asked Dicky Allen, "or are you afraid?"

Norma was wearing Ted Hughes' frat pin, and she adored being teased about it. "Certainly not," she cried, displaying all her dimples. "Ted and I are terribly troublesome!"

Norma's departure left Janet conspicuously stranded on a large pink damask sofa. At the tea table Priscilla Leigh was explaining on the plans for her debut party in the fall. "All alone, Janet," asked Ted Hughes, dropping down beside her.

"Yes," said Janet with a little grimace.

"I was sorry you couldn't come to the June prom," he said. "You're the only girl in the crowd who didn't show up. We missed you."

"I missed being there."

"Gordon was but without you."

Janet carefully made her face expressionless. "Was he?" she asked.

She did not glance toward Gordon Key who was dancing with Priscilla Leigh.

Until nine months before it had not mattered that Janet Phillips did not have a car of her own and a well-to-do father and a large house in which to entertain her friends. She still recently had it made any social difference because her mother worked in a department store. Before her marriage Anne Phillips had been a Radcliffe. The Radcliffes were one of the town's old aristocratic families. Janet's grandfather had been governor of the state at one time. When it had become necessary at her husband's death for Mrs. Phillips to go out and make a living for her three children, her friends applauded her courage.

Bay City was a conservative southern town of twenty thousand inhabitants. Everyone of any social pretensions lived on the right side of the town branch and went first to the old frame grade school on Lenox Avenue and later to the new Brick High at Darwin and Shain.

As a matter of course Janet grew up right along with the daughters of her mother's old friends. She had not realized a break was inevitable when she and her girl friends graduated from High School.

The boys in the crowd had been going off to colleges and universities for several years, but the group remained intact until the girls themselves departed for finishing schools the preceding September. Janet had counted the days until their return for the summer. Yet it was now only the third week in June and she had definitely discovered that she no longer belonged.

It was no one's fault. Nobody, again with the notable exception of Priscilla, wanted Janet to feel left out. Her path had diverged too sharply from the others. She was studying interior decorating in the Conrad at home. When she finished her course she was going to work, and the moment no longer as keen a bit in common with her friends.

"I'm for another slice of cake," said Ted when the radio paused for station identification.

He led the way to the tea table and which Gordon was moving with Priscilla Janet's cheeks burned.

"Hello, Janet," he murmured. "How are you?"

"I was never better," said Janet with her most brilliant smile.

Priscilla laughed unpleasantly. "Excuse it, darling, if I seem to have monopolized your boy friend this afternoon."

"I don't mind," said Janet.

The arresting point was that when she said things like that, nobody believed her. The crowd was convinced that Gordon was breaking Janet's heart.

But no, and dance with Janet Gordon," said Priscilla. "Didn't you always use to say she could dance circles around the rest of us?"

Janet had had a certain set that sort sounds since her friends came home. Someone was forever pairing her off with Gordon because that was how it used to be. She and Gordon had never been formally engaged, but for several years it had been understood that she was eventually Gordon's girl.

"Sorry," said Janet, and to save her life she could not keep the acid out of her voice, "I don't believe I care to dance just now."

Priscilla gave a trill of malicious laughter. "Don't tell me love's young dream has curdled!"

Gordon looked miserable and guilty and confused. "I didn't realize I was neglecting you, Janet," he stammered.

"It's quite all right," said Janet stiffly. "It may seem incredible, but there are compensations for being neglected."

Priscilla gurgled. "That sounds like the well-known sour grapes, darling."

Janet could see herself in the mirror above the piano, a tall slender, black-haired girl in a crisp blue frock, a demitasse held carefully in one hand and glass bottoms down the front.

"My teeth are on edge," she told Priscilla, "and I'm afraid my face has nothing to do with your grapes."

Priscilla shrugged her shoulders in a cynical manner and Gordon looked more comedonce-striken than ever.

"I guess you'll excuse me, Janet," Priscilla said as usual tomorrow, Janet," he said.

Janet shook her head. "You forget I have classes in the morning."

"But it's the club meeting."

"Country clubs may come and go," said Janet lightly, "but seamen school is something you don't cut even once or you're dropped."

"Whatever made you enroll?" protested Priscilla. "It's dumb enough to go to a party band colleges when everybody's away and there's nothing else to do."

Janet shrugged her shoulders. "The Normal has no social standing," Priscilla, "and I've always been handicapped by it, but people go there because they want to be there. If you're for a paying job," Janet pointed out. "At least when I get my diploma in August I'm promised a place at Tracy's."

There was another awkward pause. "You're going into the store?" faltered Ted in a record feeble effort to retrieve the conversation.

"The story where your mother works?" Priscilla added with disagreeable emphasis.

"Yes," said Janet, her lips tightening.

Gordon Key was his widowed mother's adored and only child. They were impoverished gent'efolk. By the interlocked thumb. "I don't believe any woman can hitch the world without enamoring herself," he admitted degrees. He's quoting his mother, thought Janet.

It was then she became aware of the man standing in the doorway. She did not know how long he had been there, or how much he had overheard. He had a lean, controlled face and eyes which were not easily read. His heavy black eyebrows nearly met above his nose, which was a little hooked so if it had been broken. His skin was swarthy and he was tall and unusually broad across the shoulders, but his waist and hips were narrow. He had a small white scar at the side of his mouth, and was dark enough to be an Italian, but his eyes were Irish blue.

"You asked me to look you up if I came down this way," he said to Priscilla.

"Tony Ryan!" Priscilla gave a little squeal of delight and ran across the room. She put in both hands in hers and drew him over the threshold.

"It's Tony Ryan, everybody!" exclaimed Priscilla as if she expected the whole town to overreact them.

"What are we supposed to do?" Janet asked Ted. "Fall down and die over, or kiss his hand?"

Ted did not answer. He and the others were crowding in a body to meet the great Tony Ryan who at fourteen had been lightweight champion of America, and at fifteen had realized that the big money in the wrestling world is in promotion and, and who at twenty-seven was said to be ready to retire with something over half a million dollars.

"You said if you ever came off down here, you'd look me up," Priscilla deliriously, "but I simply didn't believe you'd do it. I never imagine that anything so perfectly gorgeous might happen."

"Why shouldn't I drop in on Bay City and look the old town over?" Tony boomed heartily.

"After all" he went on softly, "my mother used to nake in washing for all the best families in Bay City. When I delivered clothes at back doors I pretended myself a child's be poor white trash from the wrong side of the branch forever," he said. "Funny, isn't it? As a ragged little tyke in a shanty in Shanty Town I used to stand and dream some day I'd walk in at the front door of a house like this and be treated as visiting royalty."

The corners of his wide mouth curled down slightly in that grim gesture deeprived. As if he were sneering at himself, Janet thought.

"Darling," cried Priscilla, giving him a languishing glance, "it's too delicious that you've risen proportionally overnight!"

Tony Ryan grinned. "All in the good old American tradition."

Janet turned away abruptly. A great sense of loss and grief had been caught to believe apparently were true. She had not known, for instance, how decisive money is in the world. Her bank of high school graduation presents, but a Tony Ryan could stride roughshod into society because he had the admission price.

"Going so soon, Janet?" asked Priscilla carelessly.

"Yes," said Janet. "I'm using Jim's car and I must pick him up. He's at the club exhibiting for Lieutenant McCall, you know."

Priscilla looked at her sharply. "Don't be surprised when she reached the battered Plymer which her brother Jim had bought of a used car dealer, to find that Gordon had followed her quickly.

"Are you mad at anybody?" he stammered. "I told you it's quite all right," said Janet, "I wouldn't have returned you to consider over this afternoon if I had known you had a previous engagement with Priscilla. I didn't mean to cause, only I met Tony Ryan and the whole crowd was here. She wouldn't let me go."

Gordon was perspiring. "It's not that," he said miserably.

"Tonight?"

"Mother didn't know I was taking you to the dance. She couldn't have known, or she wouldn't have accepted Priscilla's invitation."

Janet sat very still for a moment. She was going to have to take Priscilla to the dance?

"I'll ask Jim to bring you, Janet," Gordon said, she requested sharply.

"You're such a peach!"

"Yes?" murmured Janet and drove away.

That same afternoon Jim Phillips looked up from the tournament schedule he was making out for the next day to discover Ruth Hetchcote waiting at him from the doorway of the caddy room at the Country Club.

"I haven't a partner, Jim. It looks as if you'll have to go around with me," she said restfully.

Jim laughed. "I can't think of any way I'd rather spend a balmy June afternoon than golfing with a Hetchcote."

Ruth smiled. "But then you've always been right partial to Ted and me."

W.W.W. Club News

The regular meeting of the W.W.W. Club was held on April 8th at the home of Mrs. George Lee. The meeting was called to order by the president. The secretary being absent Mrs. G. Lee took her places for the day. The garments which had been made by the members were then examined. It was decided to send for more goods to be made into garments before the next meeting, by the members. Arrangements will be made for the sale of these garments at the next meeting. Thirteen dollars had been sent in to Mr. A. E. Allen of the Local Red Cross branch. Members approved of the action of the Secretary in doing so. Miss Daley, on behalf of the Firdevale Club handed in a dollar to the Club for replacement of cups broken at their dance. Visitors to the meeting were Mrs. Roger Ray, Mrs. Wallace Lee and children and the Misses Dark, Winnie and Jean Bruce. A very delicious lunch was served by the hostess. There will be no May meeting, owing to the busy season. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Ernest Lougheed on the first of June.

The dance sponsored by the W.W.W. Club and held in the Woodlawn school on March fifteenth was very well attended despite the muddy condition of the roads. Quite a nice sum of money was realized. We take this opportunity to thank all those who attended and say who helped in any way to make the dance a success.

Large Votes For Alberta Roads

With nearmal $2,000,000 voted by the provincial government for roads and bridges, either maintenance or new construction, during the present year, there is confidence in rooter club circles that the program will be extensive.

Provincial authorities, it is reported, intend to press Ottawa to augment the provincial grants for road purposes. If this is done, the Jasper highway, east of Edmonton, and the Trans-Canada highway, east of Calgary, should see some major improvements this year.

While road work may be delayed somewhat owing to the late spring it is understood that crews are being organized to push operations as hand as speedily as possible as soon as the construction period opens.

Officials of the Alberta Motor Association are giving careful study to road conditions and will maintain information service to the public informed of conditions in various districts.

During recent years this service provided by the A.M.A. without charge, has been welcomed in all parts of the province. Motorists can place full dependence upon the reports issued by the A.M.A., which are based upon official information.

BIG NEWS—

THE NEWS THIS week that Germany had decided to invade Denmark and Norway was perhaps the "biggest news" since the actual declaration of war. That the Nazis should invade Denmark, to most observers, caused little surprise. Denmark joins Germany and occupation by Germany of Denmark would give Germany a much extended North Sea coast line. In addition it would ensure supplies of dairy products (for which Denmark is famous) to Germany, without the necessity of paying for them. Compelling a people to take "credit notes" in exchange for real goods, as the Germans are doing, is in effect simply just taking them. That the Germans met with such little resistance from the Danish people is not surprising either. They had no adequate powers of resistance of their own and the invasion was so swift as to make resistance practically useless. Moreover, ever since the Ottawa agreements by which Canada profitted in bacon exchange, for Denmark's expense, Germany has been a very good customer of Denmark. Denmark is a comparitively small country of a few million population. They buy a lot of fodder and ship a lot of dairy and meat products and the economic upheaval in 1933, caused by a change in Britain's buying policy, left deep in Denmark. At that time people were reading of the millions of young pigs being killed in Denmark. To some extent Germany took Britain's place as a buyer of Danish dairy and meat products and this has given her some influence on Danish public opinion and official action. In any event the occupation of Denmark by the Germans was without opposition.

While it is easy to understand why Germany invaded Denmark it is not easy to understand why she invaded Norway. The need must have been very great. If not it is the purest irresponsible for such a risky and as proved costly undertaking. Germany must need this product desperately. As a jumping off place for bombing planes enroute to the British Isles, Kiel or any other North Sea port, Norway

An Ancient Agricultural Society

To those who are interested in the efforts that have been made in the past to advance agriculture, and to improve the welfare of farmers, we most heartily recommend a splendid book which has recently been published. It is entitled "Memoirs of the Philadelphia Society for Promoting Agriculture." It costs $2.50 a copy, and copies can be obtained from Mr. John M. Oake, 350 rowen Avenue, Lansdowne, Pennsylvania. Mr. Oakes is a member of the Society and is one of the committee charged with publishing the most interesting material.

The book tells of a number of highly interesting early experiments made to try to solve farmers' problems similar to those with which we are still struggling today.

The early members of the society which was founded five years ago, had, it seems, an amazing insight into the requirements of agriculture. One of the early members was George Washington, President of the United States, and the membership also included four of the men who signed the American Declaration of Independence and who were high ranking officers in the American Revolutionary Army. The First Treasurer of the United States and many other prominent men of that type too, were members.

The first meeting was held very soon after the end of the War of Independence, and the first step taken by the Society was to send to England "For a skilful English farmer acquainted with the best improved modes on husbandry in England and to be employed on a farm to be recommended by the Society in the vicinity of Philadelphia, for a term

To the buyer, who of necessity must pay for the farm with earnings profit, the farm value is very closely linked with its productivity from operative land in fall as dopting, the yields were definitely in favour of spring operations and done on compar

Janet Phillips finds herself left out of things when her wealthier friends, as Ray L. leaves home to there finishing school and college. Priscilla Leigh at the moment is interested in Jack Stone, while Ruth Key is making up to old dowager Mrs. Gordon had recently married Miss Helen Sanders.

She took a stance, more reminiscent of Babe Ruth than of Wilbur Hagen's fine narrow style, and with her jig, gave her club head a peculiarly vicious flick and flailed the air. This time she dug up a divot of turf from behind the tee and lost a ball, but the ball remained undisturbed.

"It looks as if there's more to it than buying the latest thing in sports clothes," she announced mournfully.

"Don't be silly," said Miss Helen pacifyingly. "It'll take time to get out of hand."

In Jim's opinion she had a rather temper, nevertheless he found it impossible to watch her without a tingle in his pulses. Every movement she made was graceful.

"There!" she cried. "I've done it."

"Really?" murmured Ruth.

Howard frowned and again started to speak, only to be forestalled for the second time by his companion. "You never had a driver in my hand before," she said and sighed again.

"Jack didn't mind an emergency operation for appendicitis half so much as having to be away from the club in the height of the season," Jim explained. "The minute I said I'd take over his duties here, his fever dropped. He called me a blithering idiot to give up the fishing trip I'd planned, but he squealed my hand in the old curmudgeon."

The foursome ahead of them moved on. Jim and Ruth had no caddy. He stepped and made a...of soft wet sand for her ball before she could drive off a couple of...them from the...house. Jim did not need to...round. He knew who it was, by painful flush which rushed into Ruth's sensitive face.

"Oh, hello, Ruth, how are you?" murmured Howard Leigh. "You haven't met Miss Sanders, have you? Helen, this is Miss Hetchote."

Jim stared steadily at a point far down the fairway. He knew full well that his commenting mayhem around when the laugh's counted their for Howard Leigh, and never more so than when he was tearing the thumb...screws out of Ruth Hetchote. No...had he had an...of Howard's objections been in love with him for years. It was warned that they would marry...eventually, only Howard was forever flying off after other girls. Until such of his affairs ran to...course Ruth suffered exquisite torture. For a week Howard had been...during himself to his sister's visit...or from New York, but Ruth Hetch...rue was a thoroughbred. Nothing of...her unhappiness was in her eyes...

"How do you do, Miss Sanders?" she murmured as I put out her hand.

"How do you do?" murmured the other girl.

"And this is Ted, our club pet." Howard went on in an offhand manner.

Jim glanced at her, muttered an acknowledgment, and then gazed quickly away. She was so pretty a girl as he had ever seen, with a...pointed face and exquisite golden skin and long bronze hair knotted on her neck. She had sultry dark eyes and a petulant red mouth, and she was beautifully dressed in a...colored sports ensemble with white accessories.

"We were just starting a round," said Ruth hesitatingly. "Would you care to join us?"

"Why not?" asked Miss Sanders. "I've never played golf, but Howard's going to take fifteen minutes off and show me how."

"Really?" murmured Ruth.

Howard frowned and again started to speak, only to be forestalled for the second time by his companion. "You never had a driver in my hand before," she said and sighed again.

TENNIS NOTES

Wednesday night April 17th, the Tofield Tennis Club held its annual meeting for the purpose of organizing for the coming season. Some twenty-five enthusiasts attended. The club starts the year with a Bank Balance of $2.97 which is exceptionally good considering the club had to start from scratch last year. Now they have three courts all equipped, and well fenced, and do not owe a cent. This is quite a record for any sports club. The coming year the club proposes to use more chain and give the courts a coat of calcium chloride which should make an ideal playing surface as well as stopping weeds. The fees were set at adults $4.00, school children $2.00, Family limit $7.00.

The following are the officers for the coming season. President: Mrs. Geo. McFadzean; Vice Pres., Mrs. F. Lacy; Sec.-Treas., Mrs. R. Coutts. Social Committee: Chairman Mr. F. Dunn, Mr. Wilf Gordon, Mr. Bert Bailey.

Membership Committee: chairman, W. R. Worton, Miss M. Kalfal, Mr. A. Boffin.

Social Committee: chairman Mr. H. M. Call, Mrs. F. Glover, Miss G. Jacobs, Mr. James, Miss Marie Malcolm.

All those interested in tennis please get in touch with anyone of the membership committee. The opening date of the club is set for May 1st, which is one first half holiday, so make sure your name is in before that time.

"Hell's Kitchen" For Next Tuesday

A picture just loaded with tears and scorching drama. Those "Dead End Kids" are the cream of juvenile productions, give to the American and Canadian audiences a story of absorbing interest. The world said they wouldn't go straight, but these "Dead End Kids" formed a government of the boys, by the boys, for the boys—and turned a vicious crime school into a model home.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Kalfal Celebrate Silver Wedding

On Sunday afternoon eighty or more friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. J. Kalfal met at their home in order to commemorate their silver wedding anniversary. Had the conditions of the roads been better a much larger number would have been present.

Mr. and Mrs. Kalfal came to Canada from Illinois and were married in St. Joachim's church in Edmonton on April 12, 1915. They have lived in the district since, making a host of friends. They have six sons and three daughters.

Father Schmeltzer, of Tofield, acted as chairman and a delightful program was enjoyed, after which the guests of honor were presented with a chest of flat silver from their friends as a token of the esteem in which they are held in this district. A delicious lunch was served. The bride cut the three-tier wedding cake and served a piece to all.

Claim Russia Backs Sweden

London, April 24:—Heavy news agency reported Wednesday that usually informed sources said the Soviet ambassador has advised the British government that Russia is backing Sweden in it resistance to German pressure and would regard extension of the Reich's influence in Scandinavia as contrary to Moscow's interests.

This statement was reported made by the Soviet envoy, Ivan Maisky, in a talk with Richard A. Butler, undersecretary for foreign affairs, at the foreign office.

The foreign office itself refused to confirm or deny this report, but its officials admitted Maisky's call Monday was not connected with negotiations toward the proposed Anglo-Russian trade agreement.

In addition to stalling Moscow's opposition to German expansion in Scandinavia, Maisky was said to have given Butler some indication of the Reich's plans in the north.

The weather still continues to make things difficult for the farmers people with visions of bumper crops due to excessive moisture, but we never get a chance to get them in on time. Most of us right now would like to see a little sun and a change from mud-rollering.

Miss Thelma Masterson spent the week-end at the Brassington home.

A birthday surprise party was given on Miss Star Brassington's honor young friends, accorded of about 30 members which they have gathered for the musical festival. The games, they rules to be added to the piano fund. The program starts at eight o'clock. In addition to the above items they will present at the festival they are having a stunt called moonvalet similar to that of Wrigley's Treasure Trail. So for a very enjoyable hour or two, plans to be there. You need the line and lines need your support and interest.

There seems to be a dearth of a young fellow for Miss Lorraine Weaver. Mrs. Francis and Mrs. Bill Weaver left for Edmonton after the show. The weather has so far not permitted any spring work in the fields, and the roads keep everybody from going out. The chief pastime seems to be discussing the weather, the state of the war. The weather prophets are very much at present, the war is doleful enough at this time and the cloth business could be better for the tailors. Better luck next year, we hope all we live here instead of in Europe. As that old cowpoke says—

No use to bother, mope or cuss,
If things was changed they might be worse.

Alberta Pacific Offers $1,000,000 For Bawlf Assets

Meetings of Shareholders Called To Approve Deal

Winnipeg, April 18:—As offer to purchase the entire undertakings of the Bawlf Grain Company, Limited, for $1,000,000 in cash has been made by the Alberta Pacific Grain Company, Limited, according to notification forwarded today to the shareholders of these two large grain handling organizations. Meeting of Bawlf shareholders has been called for May 30th to accept the offer and a meeting of Alberta Pacific shareholders will take place 21st to approve the offer to purchase the Bawlf Company. Both meetings will be held in Winnipeg.

Directors of both companies have communicated with shareholders recommending approval of this transaction.

The Alberta Pacific was organized in 1901. The Company passed into the hands of the public in 1926. It now operates 362 country elevators and has terminal connections at the Pacific Coast with a capacity of 2,100,000 bushels. The Bawlf Company owns 130 country elevators and a terminal elevator at the Head of the Great Lakes with a capacity of 1,250,000 bushels.

LAKESHORE

The school children hope the weather will permit them to hold a concert they have planned for April 26th at the school. They are presenting numbers which they have prepared for the musical festival. The money they raise is to be added to the piano fund. The program starts at eight o'clock. In addition to the above items they will present at the festival they are having a stunt called moonvalet similar to that of Wrigley's Treasure Trail. So for a very enjoyable hour or two, plans to be there. You need the line and lines need your support and interest.

There seems to be a dearth of a young fellow for Miss Lorraine Weaver. Mrs. Francis and Mrs. Bill Weaver left for Edmonton after the show. The weather has so far not permitted any spring work in the fields, and the roads keep everybody from going out. The chief pastime seems to be discussing the weather, the state of the war. The weather prophets are very much at present, the war is doleful enough at this time and the cloth business could be better for the tailors. Better luck next year, we hope all we live here instead of in Europe. As that old cowpoke says—

No use to bother, mope or cuss,
If things was changed they might be worse.

Regina Planning To Move Mennonites

Regina, April 15:—Bureau of labor and public welfare, department of municipal affairs are completing details for removal of 25 Mennonite families from Saskatchewan to new farm lands in interior British Columbia.

The families moved out from south of Swift Current and from the Hague district north of Saskatoon. They are going to the Burns Lake area in British Columbia, directly west of Edmonton.

Some of the families concerned have been farming on lands to which they had no legal rights. Others have no farming. All have been, to a degree, a relief problem. They have wanted to move to the coast province, and Saskatchewan officials have agreed under an agreement they have with the B.C. government.

Plan For 170 Airmen

Accommodation will be provided for about 170 officers and men at an air observers school to be established at Edmonton's airport, details of the plan received from Ottawa here on Wednesday.

Two hangars will be erected. One will be a big structure measuring 160 feet by 300 feet. This contains the offices and classrooms and is 165 feet by 300 feet for the Edmonton Arena. The second hangar will be about one-half the size of the big one.

Largest of the other 14 buildings will be a ground instructional school unit in the form of a letter "H". One section of this building will measure 225 feet by 80 feet. Another will be 156 feet by 80 feet and the linking unit will be 80 feet by 80 feet.

Plans Completed For Musical Festival

A hard working committee headed by Mr. Broughton with Miss McCrea as an able secretary is putting the finishing touches to the arrangements for the music festival to be held here on Friday, May 3rd.

A general outline of the event has been previously announced but a glance at the time table for the day, published on page three, will give one an idea of the importance of the occasion.

Those desiring to attend any one or a number of events exclusive of those in which they have paid a fee for a very nominal sum. This ticket is good for any one of the seven places or all of them.

In the evening the program will be presented one at the Variety Theatre and one at the Curling Rink. Admission to these programs is separate and distinct from the day programs. For the evening programs a limited number of reserved seat tickets may be purchased. As there is likely to be crowded house at both evening programs early purchase of tickets is suggested.

The full Festival Committee is as follows: Hon. Pres., J. H. McLean; Pres., A. Broughton; Sec.-Treas., Miss J. McCrea. Holden representative, Miss M. Claire Shirley. Ryley, Mrs. E. Kalfal; Bruce, Miss Foster; Village, Miss Clarke.

HEARTS WALKING

Chapter III
SUNSPOTS

Janet Phillips finds herself left out of things when her wealthier friends in Bay City come home from their finishing schools and colleges. Priscilla Leigh—at the moment interested in Janet's old friend Gordon Kay — is making herself disagreeable. Gordon had just broken with adult Gordon has just drunk a day with Janet. Priscilla, Janet's mother, Miss Phillips, James Smith, her son Jim the youngest Brownlee Leigh and Hesie Sanders, on the sport links, due to nothing to golf for the summer and efforts to give Miss Sanders lessons. Although he doesn't like her, he is fascinated. Meanwhile, Janet goes to the apartment of her sister Bernice Brownlee has just paid off her bridge losers and asked her guests of the afternoon to leave before her husband Bill comes home and sees the lipstick glasses.

The moment the door closed behind her friends, Bernice began emptying ash trays and disposing of highball glasses. "Would you mind carrying these glasses to the bath so the trash barrel in the hall, Janet?" she asked. "I don't dare have them lying around the apartment. Bill's a regular Sherlock Holmes at spotting evidence."

Janet felt a little sick. "Don't you think it's awfully cheap to do things behind Bill's back?" she asked when she returned.

"If Bill weren't so unreasonable I wouldn't have to," murmured Bernice, busily putting the porcelain on.

She was a small, curved person with a dimple in her left cheek and one in the middle of her chin. Her eyes were red brown and she had extremely straight black lashes and lovely little feet and hands. To Janet, who was taller and whose black hair did not curl Bernice had always seemed absurdly childish, in spite of the three year's difference in their ages.

"Bill is sweet when we are sober together," admitted Bernice and flushed slightly. "No one could be sweeter, but he's so dreadfully narrow."

Janet's voice was unsteady. "You haven't a very strong advertisement for love in a cottage. I mean you don't see in love with Bill I used to every you. Now all the being seems to have come off the wedding cake, or has it?"

She did not know exactly why, but she needed desperately to be reassured about many things which until recently it had never occurred to her to doubt. But there was nothing reassuring in the bitterness which hardened Bernice's pleasant face so that all at once she looked years older.

"Love's a lot of phooey, Janet," she said in a curt, disillusioned voice. "It's the honey with which nature bait the trap. For heaven's sake, take me for an example — Mother for as that goes, and don't be the kind of saps we're bred!"

"I don't believe Mother regrets having married a poor man!" cried Janet breathlessly, because even to think such a thing was as if a fist had landed on her heart.

"Listen, Janet," said Bernice looking intense, "you don't have to tell me that Mother's, small at make up the best of a bad bargain, but don't kid yourself. I don't care how much you love a man, after you've been married to him a year or so you wonder where you ever got the idea that love makes up for everything."

"Hello," said Bill gruffly, tossing his hat over on the overstuffed couch and working when it landed beautifully on a pile of gayly colored magazines and slid to the floor.

"Hello," said Bernice, putting a plate of sliced bread down on the table with an exquisite thump.

"Janet, I didn't see you!" exclaimed Bill his face lighting. "How's my niece it? sister?"

All right, I guess, murmured Janet, doubtfully.

All the members of Bernice's family were fond of Bill Carter. He was a big, self-conscious young chap with thick black hair, a look of which was continually falling down over his eyes. When he smiled he had an engaging boyish look, which offset his protruding jaw and the stubborn line of his mouth.

"Going to fend with us?" he asked.

Janet shook her head. "I have to go out to the club for Jim."

Bill was starting at the table on which Bernice had just deposited with another thump a similar platter of warmed over hamm. "You're lucky," he said to Janet. "We're supping out of a tin can as usual."

Bernice sniffed. "I'll say she's lucky. Nothing on her mind except what dress she'll wear to the dance tonight. Single girls have all the fun."

Bill scowled. "As you've mentioned before."

Janet glanced from Bill's lowering black eyes to Bernice's flushed cheeks and she swallowed painfully. I guess I'll run on," she stammered. "You can't be blamed for getting out before we start throwing things," said Bill, the corners of his mouth turning down like clamps.

"You," said Bernice, pushing a chair violently up to the table and sitting down glaring at each other across the narrow expanse of the dinette, as if it were a No Man's land lined with the barbed wire of their hostility.

Janet Phillips walked home from the bus stop and been porch into the building. She lived was a three-story red brick structure built in the flats it a time. It had been built in the days before real estate men considered it important to have a certain available foot of ground for income purposes, and stood well back from the street with a neat lawn in front and a deep back yard. Each flat had a large front and back porch and there were no elevators or unclimbers in the building.

"I know it dates me," Anne admitted to her friends, "but I'd rather climb stairs and run out to the alley with trash than to give up my old-fashioned back and my front porch home."

Anne's former home lined the rail- ings on both porches of her flat and kept her busy nine months in the year. In the winter she had to have something in bloom from early spring to late fall, and she was even crabbed and prune and the shelves in the bed by the kitchen door.

Old Mr. Jacoby was sitting on the front step reading the afternoon paper when Anne came up the walk. He was wearing a tattered hat and gentleman with a courtly manner. He "hooked," as he expressed it, in the next housekeeping room in the basement and looked after the furnace in the winter and lawn in the summer.

"Good evening, Miss Anne," he called out. "Warmer today, ain't it? Ought to be fine for them Scouts of theirs, eh?"

Anne smiled. "And for your rheumatism."

"Nope," he said, "it's not so good. We can look for rain within twenty-four hours."

Anne chuckled. "I'll carry my umbrella tomorrow."

Mr. Jacoby claimed that his trick knee was an infallible barometer of weather conditions. Some of the younger generation in the building made fun of his prognostications, but Anne did not. She could never forget the date she had been in when she was a little girl and her father's little brood in to the flat, a date in which nothing second real to her except that new grave where she had buried her carefree youth. It was Mr. Jacoby who brought up a bum bowl of hot soup which he had made himself, sparing with fine courtesy the liver which slid down Anne's wan cheeks as she sat there at the kitchen table in her new widow's weeds, Janet on her lap. Bernice clinging to her mother's arm, Jim trying to be manly though it was only ten.

"Don't worry about the future," said Mr. Jacoby then. "God will give you strength to meet each day as it comes."

It was trite counsel, and this indefatigable ago he disposed to jest at such simple faith as Mr. Jacoby's, yet it had comforted Anne Phillips. It still comforted her.

She was smiling when she climbed the stairs to the second floor and unlocked her door. "Anybody home?" she called out, her usual greeting.

"Just me," came Janet's clear young voice from the farthest recess of the flat.

"Hello, dearest," Anne murmured, reaching for the apron she kept hanging on the pantry door in slip over the smart black crepe dress which she wore to the store.

"Hello, Mama," said Janet. "Come on out and cool off. Supper's ready except the ice, and there's no one cracking the ice till Jim comes. I was going out after him but he telephoned that he'd drive in with Ruth."

Janet was lying back in one of the canvas deck chairs which the family moved about from porch to porch as desired, stretched out full length, her arm flung up above her head so that her face was in the shadow. There was dejection in the listless manner in which her long straight limbs were disposed. Anne Phillips felt the dawn of uneasiness. It was unlike Janet to droop.

"Tired?" asked Anne, trying not a sound like the over-anxious mother who nags her children to an aspiration by an excess of solicitude.

"A little," admitted Janet.

Her mother waited with that uncanny spot inside her stomach growing but, whatever troubled her child she was not ready to discuss it.

"Have a hard day?" asked Janet.

"No more than usual," said Anne and laughed. "Mrs. Henry Leigh was in looking for a dinner menu. I turned the check over for her, but she refused it.

"It makes me sick, puny having to plan and honor parties like that!" cried Janet. "It would be different if we weren't a hundred times more refined than Priscilla Leigh or her mother will ever be!"

Anne looked at her daughter a startled glance. "I don't mind being patronized by Jennie Leigh, Janet. I know she lived with her father's folks back of their meat market and brought it polite to pass the hamburger to company. Not that she doesn't deserve words of credit for the way she's worked to get on. Ever since after she married Henry, Dr. she has and knew about how to do things for herself. Priscilla has third practice removes the was so that the oil flows freely at all temperatures, and the fourth practice removes the last trace of impurities and gives the oil its final polish, ensuring the production of an oil of superior quality.

Imperial Oil Announces New Motor Oil

New Refining Methods Give Qualities Never Before Obtainable

A Toronto survey shows that the petroleum industry leads in scientific research work and this is one reason why the quality of motor fuels and oils is continuously being improved. A notable improvement in motor oils is announced in this issue of this paper by Imperial Oil Limited. The New Marvelube oil which is now being sold by Imperial Oil agents and dealers in this district is said to last longer, give better protection of engines and save economy of operation because its refining has been carried further by new scientific methods developed by long research work in the company's big research laboratories.

The new oil is said to be the first oil to be made by using the four modern refining processes by taking all four of these processes, instead of only a smaller number, practical scientists assumes they have obtained qualities never before possible in a motor oil. Each refining process removes some of the undesirable properties from the crude oil that the oil finally produced is a pure lubricant, containing nothing but the qualities necessary to provide oil lubrication at all temperatures.

One process separates the gummy black substances from the oil which cause heavy carbon deposits in an engine. Another process removes undesirable components which cause oil to break down and form sludge. A

THE MUSIC FESTIVAL—

JUST a week and a day from the date of this paper, the Holden Division School Festival will hold its annual meet at Tofield. While there is a certain amount of satisfaction in announcing that for the first time in its history, Tofield will be host to several hundred picked student competitors, there is a great deal more to it than that.

Life is a blending of many things. Commercial endeavour, religion, sport, music, pictorial and other forms of art and literature, to mention a few. The complete absence of any one or the complete domination by any one of these things in an individual's life is apt to create a sub-normal or abnormal mental out-look. It is, in part at least, so that future Albertans should understand something of music and stage art, and understanding them, enjoy them, that these yearly festivals are held. While the competitive element is very necessary to bring out the best, the idea behind the whole endeavor is not so much to build up and idolize a few stars as it is to raise the general level of understanding and performance of music and art among the people of Alberta.

It is only a matter of a few years since music festivals were commenced and they have created increasing public interest each year. It is to be hoped that the coming festival to be held at Tofield will be a success in every way.

FIFTY THOUSAND CARIBOU—

IT MAY BE, as the advertisements oftimes say, that fifty thousand people buying the same thing can't be wrong, but we are losing faith. Some few weeks ago we published a dispatch, that according to the evidence of fifty-thousand caribou, we were going to have an early spring; they were moving to fresh feeding grounds so the dispatch said, and lordy, who ever heard of nature failing to tell the truth with such numerical strength. Anyway we are afraid the caribou were mistaken, certainly they didn't find spring over the next hill.

There is room for argument as to whether an early spring or a late spring is best for the crop. Some farmers of experience favor getting the seed in early, others maintain late seeding is better. There has even grown up a well grounded belief that a late spring and a good crop go together.

Far be it from us to express hard and fast opinions regarding agriculture. We leave that to the professionals of which there are several hundred hereabouts. But we have noticed that on a patch of burned over grass land, the color changes from brown to green within a few days of the same date each year. Weather conditions may be such as to hold up or speed up seeding operations, but the grass depending on nothing but the ground temperature and moisture, does its growing and gives a greenish tinge to the patch about May 1st rapidly increasing in color and being really green by the 15th.

GRASS—

Here is a tribute to grass which comes from the pen of a famous United States senator, Ingalls, of Kansas:

Lying in the sunshine among the buttercups and dandelions of May, scarcely higher in intelligence than the minute tenants of that mimic wilderness, our earliest recollections are of grass; and when the fatal day arrives for the foolish wrangle of market and forum is closed, grass heals over the scar which our descent into the gloom of earth has made, and the carpet of the infant becomes the blanket of the dead.

Grass is the forgiveness of nature—her constant benediction. Fields trampled with battle, saturated with blood, torn with the ruts of cannon, grow green again with grass, and carnage is forgotten. Forests decay, harvests perish, flowers vanish but grass is immortal. Beleaguered by the sullen frosts of winter, it withdraws into the impregnable fortress of its subterranean vitality and emerges upon the first solicitation of spring. Sown by the winds, by the wandering birds, propagated by the subtle agriculture of the elements which are its ministers and servants, it softens the rude outlines of the world. It bears no blazonry of bloom to charm the senses with fragrance of splendor, but its homely hue is more enchanting than the lily or the rose. It yields no fruit in earth or air, and yet should its harvest fail for a single year, famine would depopulate the world.

A Motherly Concern

Once Queen Victoria visited a large city in England, where a choir of three or four thousand children were gathered to sing her a song of welcome.

The next day the officials who had been in charge of the arrangements received a telegram from the Queen. If they expected her to make some reference to the ceremonies of the day before, they were disappointed; for all the telegram contained was the one sentence reading: "The Queen wishes to know, did the children all get home safely?"

Moral Rearmament

(East Sarnia, Ontario, Abn.)
April 16, 1940:—With great confidence and joy here the Canadian people received the appointment of the Major General The East of Alliance as their new Governor General. As the uncle of the Queen, his arrival will link us all more closely with the motherland and help to kindle the fraternal wrath surged through all our hearts during the visit of Their Majesties to Canada.

His capacity and ability as a statesman is well known to most of us. Wherever he has been he has left behind a store of spiritual power which is the binding link of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Last year on December 1st, the East spoke to the entire world from London in a broadcast over the B.B.C. and the Mutual Broadcasting System, in which he summed his power and concern for the confusion in the world and his desire to be part of its reconstruction.

In it he said, "A year ago on Armistice Day I was privileged to attend three words, 'Moral Re-armament' must be the fundamental of this generation. We are up against a conflict between the miracle of God's Spirit can break the power of pride and selfishness, all hate and fear and hatred; for spiritual power is the most powerful force in the world. This is true as never before today.

"There is a deep spiritual struggle which faces mankind everywhere — this struggle against the menace of human selfishness in ourselves, in our nation and throughout the world. Upon the issue of this struggle the future depends. Victory in it will bring us a world of lasting peace and prosperity, that hate-free, greed-free, fear-free world for which everyone of us longs."

Record Travel To Canada Expected

Plans Canada will receive an unprecedented influx of United States tourists this year is disclosed by reports of passenger agents of the Canadian National Railways in large American centres. In the opinion of C. W. Johnston, general passenger traffic manager, it is evident that Americans are taking to heart President Roosevelt's proclamation to make 1940 a travel year to foster good neighborliness, and good will between countries such as the United States and Canada. Due to the war situation, Europe is practically barred to American tourist travel and it is increasingly obvious there will be a heavy volume of transit up to Canada. This, too, is emphasized by the fact that the Kiwanis International has set aside a special week, April 28 to May 4, as United States-Canada Week, commemorating the one hundred and one hundred years of peace that have existed between the two countries.

These men are finding special sacrifice and danger, "We are pressing for more spiritual power and devotion. We pray that their labour will not be in vain and that their victory will open the way towards a new world we all are endeavouring to build. For all of us the guiding Voice of God is ever available, strengthening and directing.

"There is no other way to struggle which faces mankind everywhere — this struggle against the menace of human selfishness in ourselves, in our nation and throughout the world. Upon the issue of this struggle the future depends. Victory in it will bring us a world of lasting peace and prosperity, that hate-free, greed-free, fear-free world for which everyone of us longs."

Start Season's Road Program

Immediate attention will be given at the opening of the spring road construction season to projects which were unfinished last fall, according to information which officials of the Alberta Motor Association have received from the provincial government.

One of these will be the completion of reconstruction of the Jasper highway, west of Edmonton, while another is finishing of the highway from the vicinity of Medicine Hat to Walsh, on the Saskatchewan border.

Work on the Jasper highway, most of the stiff, is to be completed as speedily as possible, while it is planned that there will be no major reconstruction after July 1 on the route, in view of the anticipated rush of motorists to take advantage of opening of the new Jasper-Lake Louise scenic highway.

Starting of the Red Deer-Crossfield section of the No. 1 highway also is on this year's programme, while extension of work on the St. Paul and also to Bonnyville. Other projects are planned for southern Alberta.

Let Your Neighbor Know!

It is really very simple and your neighbors will appreciate it. For among them there may be one, there probably is one, who is looking for just the article you have for sale. Articles left unused tend to deteriorate, often become obsolete, yet there are people, in modest circumstances perhaps who would gladly pay a few dollars for the article you have no further use for

Or it may be Chickens, a Calf, Cow, Horse or any other animal, or Farm Machinery that you are desirous of selling. Everyone appreciates a bargain and there are many bargains scattered throughout this district which would be quickly picked up if prospective buyers knew of them. A CLASSIFIED AD IN THE MERCURY will let your neighbors know if you have anything for sale. The rates are low, the selling average high.

Obvious Hitler "Never A Sailor"

London, April 24:—The Scandinavian invasion has proved "that Corporal Hitler can't never have been a sailor," Arthur Greenwood, deputy leader of the parliamentary Labor party, told the national defence public interest committee Wednesday.

"Hitler has embarked on a foolish, short-sighted adventure," the Labor leader continued, "which is bringing very vividly nearer the end—though the struggle is going to be a long one—a war which might have been a stalemate war for a very long time.

He noted that "even the United States is now piling up expenditures on armament, but because she is directly threatened but because nobody knows how far the war will extend.

"Before this struggle is over every neutral will be driven in to the fight," Mr. Greenwood said.

"I am not one of those who would plead with neutral powers to join us. I am satisfied that the powers arrayed on our side against Germany are amply sufficient."

THE WORLD OF WHEAT
By R. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

On a recent long sea trip on a neutral freight boat, I was greatly heartened with the evidence abounding on all sides that the British Navy rules the seas.

I saw with my own eyes, day after day, for nearly a month, British merchant ships quietly transporting goods and products; and every few days a British cruiser would come along, enquiring where we were going, and what we were carrying.

At almost every neutral port that we visited, there were to be seen from one to half a dozen German freight ships, tied up at remote wharfs, or anchored in back bays; the officers and crews, under armed guards, eating out their hearts in miserable despair, and literally starving their cargo week by week, for part of their freight had to be held every so often to pay for provisions and materials to be sent in order to buy food for the German crews.

Every person who lived in these foreign countries that I visited, saw with their own eyes that Hitler definitely ruled the seas, and the right struck me, in addition how fortunate we were, in Canada, that our agricultural and other products could move out in comparative safety to the markets of the world, under the protection of this rare shield—British Navy.

Canadian Red Cross

Toronto, April 15:—Almost a million pieces of hospital and surgical supplies and clothing have been shipped overseas by the Canadian Red Cross Society during the past two months for the men of the Canadian forces and for distribution by the Red Cross Societies of war-torn parts of Europe, it will be reported (Tuesday) at the Annual Meeting of the Central Council of the Society in Toronto. Delegates from all over Canada will be present.

From February 1st to March 31st, 1,766 cases were shipped to the Canadian Red Cross Society in London, England. They contained thousands upon thousands of the articles made by the women of Canada-hospital necessities and knitted articles.

Thirty cases of hospital supplies were sent during the same period to the French Red Cross Society; 344 cases, including clothing for refugee women and children, to the Finnish Red Cross; 44 cases to the evacuee children of London; 34 cases for Polish refugees.

Large quantities of woollen articles of clothing so necessary in the winter months under modern warfare have been distributed to the Canadian men in the Aldershot area by the Society's Canteens Committee, and many grateful appreciation of the comfort of home-made socks has been expressed by many officers on behalf of their men.

Dr. Fred W. Routley, National Commissioner, yesterday received a report from the overseas Canteens Committee that volunteer visitors had been recruited and sent now attached to many hospitals in England and Scotland. It is the duty of these women to look after Canadian men lying wounded in these hospitals and relay their needs to the London office, from which parcels are forwarded regularly. Whenever necessary, messages are sent by the hospital visitor to the patient's nextious parents in Canada.

"This service, which, unfortunately, must grow to large proportions as the war goes on, is one of the most important pieces of work done by the Canadian Red Cross Society," Dr. Routley stated.

Mrs. A. Laird (nee Miss Myrtle Hill) is spending a few days with Mrs. Norman Scott.

Mr. Moon visited Wetaskiwin last week and attended the funeral of Mrs. Moon's father who passed away in the Charlotte Hospital. Mrs. Moon has been with her parents for some weeks.

Misses Jack Smith, Blake Chittenden and Tommy Daleel of Edmonton spent the week-end in Tofield.

The roads have not been fit for horses to be on either.

THE CANADIAN HOG SITUATION

Evidently the British government figured that the supply of bacon from Denmark might be cut off during the course of the war for it had previously arranged with Canada to ship 3,000,000 pounds of bacon per week. A definite price for this bacon was set and there has been comparatively no fluctuations from the figure of $9.60 per cwt. for select bogs at Toronto.

The hog prices in the United States have been substantially lower than those in Canada, the difference being in February. These imports caused a congestion of supplies in Canada, which was further accentuated by the failure of the British government to supply sufficient shipping to take the increased Canadian quota. Consequently, in February and March, when 28 children were killed and 668 injured the majority of them under 13 years of age—as a result of playing with carelessly discarded blasting caps. The British government also placed orders of commercial explosives, such as dynamite and blasting caps, which have carried on from year to year a relentless campaign to parents, teachers and children to keep away from the dangers of playing or tampering with explosives. Every child should be told to notify immediately an officer of the law or a responsible adult so that the danger may be removed.

CANADIAN RED CROSS SOCIETY ALBERTA DIVISION

Since February 1st the Alberta Red Cross Divisional Headquarters has shipped 304 cases of war and relief supplies, chiefly to Great Britain. The last shipment of 66 cases went out Saturday.

This latest shipment included 8,448 pairs of socks, 774 pairs of pyjamas, 2,093 sweaters, 1,454 scarves, 1,026 pairs of wristlets, 372 pairs of mitts, 550 pneumatic jackets, 209 bed pads, 1,230 abdominal binders, 954 sling bandages, 782 bed gowns, 1,573 children's coats, 168 sheets, 1,872 T bandages, 250 surgical towels, 1,603 bed wader bottle covers, 540 personal property bags, 682 ice bag covers—a total of 25,020 articles and the fifth case shipment.

In addition there were shipped 350 cases of clothing for Finnish relief and 754 for Polish relief.

We have been rather remiss with strictly local Red Cross news. We expect to pick up the thread of this again next week.

MUSIC FESTIVAL POSTPONED

Owing to the bad state of the roads in many districts of the Holden School Division, the Music Festival planned for Friday of this week has been postponed until Monday, May 20th. It is unfortunate that this event had to be postponed after so much hard work and elaborate preparations had been made, but the committee felt that everything considered this was the best course to take.

It is to be hoped that better road conditions and fine weather will prevail on the new date chosen.

BLASTING CAP WARNING

Renewed efforts are being made this spring, as a campaign, to protect children from the dangers of playing with blasting caps. Statistics gathered by the Explosives Division of the Department of Mines and Resources at Ottawa reveal that these accidents to children begin to increase in early spring and continue to a high point in July and August. Statistics gathered over the United States in the federal railway imports of pork from the United States in a quantity equivalent to the average monthly imports during the period of January 1st to September 30th, 1939. The total for these eight months was a little over 15 million pounds, or about 2 million pounds per a month. Furthermore, it was provided that the pork could not be imported only under license issued according to regulations prescribed by the minister of national revenue.

Canadian hog production has been increasing during the past year, and marketing in 1940 will be the largest recorded in the history of the industry. The number of hogs on farms January 1, 1940, totalled 4,780,000, or 1,300,000 greater than on December 1st, 1939. This was also an increase of about 670,000 over the number of hogs on farms January 1, which is an unusual shift.

Hogs on Alberta farms on December 1st, 1939 totalled 1,098,000, an increase of 183.7 per cent over the figures of December 1st, 1938. Alberta is second highest among Canadian provinces in hog production. On December 1st, 1939, Ontario had 1,892,000 hogs, being the leading Canadian province in that respect, Quebec was third with 848,000 hogs, and Saskatchewan fourth with 841,000.

The bacon exports from Denmark to Britain in 1939 totalled 1,389,000 cwt. This is a substantial supply, and Canadian farmers will have to extend themselves to make up the deficiency caused by the blockade of Denmark. The Danish bacon industry is bound to suffer because Germany is sure to take the surplus and it will not be paid in good money such as was the case when Britain bought it. To meet the second importation of feed grains will be stopped. Denmark has been able to buy imported feed grains very cheaply, principally corn from Argentina, and the lack of this will cause a serious depletion of livestock numbers.—Wheat Pool Budget.

BRIDAL SHOWER

On Wednesday, April 24th about twenty-eight friends of Mrs. Stanley Smith (nee Gladys Weatherill) gathered at the home of Mrs. F. Lauritzen to wish the bride every success and happiness in the future. The afternoon was spent by a few contests of wit, after which Miss Ruth Lauritzen brought in a very prettily decorated corsage basket with gifts for the bride. Those were opened by Mrs. S. Smith assisted by Miss Helen Cochran and passed around for all to admire. Mrs. Smith then thanked one and all for their kind remembrance and useful gifts. A very tasty lunch was served by Mrs. Lauritzen, after which all departed for their respective homes.

HEARTS WALKING

Chapter IV

SYNOPSIS

Janet Phillips finds herself left out of things when her wealthier friends in Bay City come home from their finishing schools and colleges. Priscilla Leigh—at first a normal 16 tortured in Janet's odd friend Gordon Kay — is making herself disagreeable. Gordon has just broken a date with Janet to go to dinner at Priscilla's. Jim Phillips, Janet's brother has run into the pampered Hoover Leigh and he is not at all to Janet's liking. Jim is working as golf pro for the summer at the club of which Miss Sanders is president. Meanwhile, Janet goes to the apartment of her sister Mrs. Bertram, who has just paid off her elderly lovers debts before her marriage to Howard Bertram. Janet is to leave before the husband, Bill arrives home and sees the lighted chasm.

"It depends on what you want out of life," said Aunt Jessie. "She was never the least in love with Henry. She was supposed to be. She told about a young man who worked in her father's butcher shop. I think he's still working in somebody's butcher shop, although I doubt if Jessie Leigh has thought of it once in years.

"There, you are, muttered Janet, reading Bertram Lewis Janet's face. In a pen or so it doesn't matter if you married for love or not, because if you don't, by their lights, the thrill has gone out like a light.

"The thrill didn't go out," said her mother with a catch in her voice.

Janet drew a long breath as if she had been granted a reprieve. "I didn't for you, did it?" she asked unsteadily.

"Never."

Anne had her hand over her daughter's and Janet clung to it. "Thanks for being you," she whispered.

There were tears on her cheeks. Something had struck at her emotional roots, thought Anne and had a fierce desire to gather Janet into her arms and protect her from everything which menaced her.

"How about a little food for the man of the house?" shouted Jim, flinging open the front door.

Anne was astonished to find that it was dark. "Heavens," she cried, starting to her feet, "we should all be starved!"

However, no one betrayed an appetite a thought there was delicious supper salad and a plate of cold roast beef and tender potatoes with Janet had scraped out as I mashed an ice cream bucket in their shells at the last minute to brown with paprika and cheese. Jim usually ate as if his long gaunt body was hollow, but not on this occasion.

"I met Howard's newest girl friend this afternoon," he announced abruptly.

"Helen Sanders?" inquired Janet. Her brother nodded. Anne looked at him quickly. Jim was red as a beet under the slur of his self-possession.

"I would say that Helen is the prettiest girl on the north shore that I ever saw," remarked Janet.

"She's a spoiled brat who needs a good going over with a rattle of sticks," muttered Jim, but he looked at Anne's eye.

"H'm, Jim," exclaimed a small voice from the direction of the baby's porch, "Come and get me!"

"You bet!" cried Jim.

The interruption ended a disagreeable tension Anne detected relief in Jim's face as if he was glad to step up from the table and from the disturbing topic of Miss Helen Sanders.

He got down on all fours and when with some assistance Danny mounted he raced prancingly to bed and ever it seemed to devour more than Danny's vast delight. He was half roughing with laughter and Jim had about run out of breath when Danny

"I don't need to ask if my son is here as usual, making a nuisance of himself by can hear him down the block," said Cathy Wood in her low slurred voice.

Jim picked up Danny and swung him high in the air. "Tell your old lady, Sonny, that the only thing we'll like better is twins just like you."

Janet was gazing curiously at Cathy. It was strange to think of Cathy as a mother. She was only twenty. Sometimes Cathy looked like a mere child. She had been left an orphan when she was fifteen. She has, she said slept on park benches and washed clothes in cheap restaurants before she secured a place as in the storm of third rate road show. The company made brief stands on to what the profession labels the tank circuit.

"You remember the theatrical couple in the play Lightning?" asked Cathy. "The ones who got married in Peoria and it rained? Something like that happened in Peoria's father and me. He was a chorus man and neither of us had any folks and it snowed all the week and everybody was blue. It was anything for a change."

They were married and the company gave them a wedding supper in the village after the show. Dan Howard laughed. "It practically there and halfway back with a champagne cocktail, Beautiful."

He erred slightly, because he had not expected to be buttonholed outside the door by Jim Phillips. "Heaven knows why," said Jim grimly, "but you can trust Ruth Hyslate's eyes-ing without half trying."

"And what's that to you?" inquired Howard.

"Just this," snapped Jim, "you're young over there to ask her to dance or I'll push your face in. Remember all the mean little tricks you played on me in school. I'm a cuddy and you could get by with it? If you call it wouldn't give me the greatest amount of satisfaction for the least amount of trouble to ruin your fascinating countenance, you're all wet."

The small silver tray on which Miss Helen Sander's catchall reposed received slightly in Howard's grasp. "I'm not afr-ad of you," he said huskily. "Of course I'll dance with Ruth. I mean to all along."

"I'll deliver it," cackled," said Jim who, despite his fighting affair, always heeded me like a little man and dance with Ruth. It's now or a punch in the eye."

"You make me sick," said Howard slightly, in Howard's grasp.

Nevertheless he carried out instructions with Jim at his elbow. Jim called Ruth's attention to Howard waiting against the railing of the veranda dancing in the floor above at the local night club. The salary was not large, but she did not have to go to work until noon and Howard knew she was fetched shortly after 2 o'clock. Ruth's face lighted with delicious composure. Howard was conducting her to the dancing table a long with your other partner at the Club?" she inquired.

Jim flushed. "You'll be surprised, I even double as official hostess if necessary."

Helen Sanders arched her delicate eyebrows. "So I've been stood up. It's a unique experience."

Howard's shoulders shook against Jim's. "Yes, please."

"I'll drive you down to the club, Cathy," Jim went on.

Anne saw the light in Cathy's color rise before she remembered to veil them with her short black lashes. I don't want to put you to any trouble, Jim," she said softly.

"Too trouble," said Jim. "It's right on the way to the office."

"I forgot, Jim," admitted Janet as he turned toward the door. "You're supposed to take me to the dance tonight."

Jim stopped short. "The heck I am! What's happened to the fellow I've got my eye on? We never used to be able to stay for him around this place."

Janet bent her breath. Jim-ny! at her defiantly, and then at Gordon broke a date with you, Jim, if you want I know, but you needn't take me to the dance I'll live without it."

Jim departed carrying Danny whose small head was drooping with fatigue. However, before Jim left to drive Cathy over to the night club he came out upon the Essex back porch which was separated from his own merely by a low railing between your staircases, and called out to Janet.

"I'll be back in time to doll up for the dance, Jan. Hop along, old dear. Get my white flannels out, there's a good girl, and see if you can find me a decent shirt for me."

Jim Phillips, that same evening signed outfit of one of the most French dance opening off the Champs Elysees broke into a crooned version of Ruth Hyslate's eyes-ing words. From his position on the veranda he could observe without be be observed.

He tried to fasten his gaze elsewhere but was unable to turn from the scintillating person of Miss Helen Sanders. Howard Leigh was dancing only with Miss Sanders. As a rule Howard did not choose to carry his endorsee too far where Ruth Hyslate was concerned. It was not part of his intention to let her escape him entirely. However occasional his current affair might be, he usually gave some thought to Ruth's pride, but not this night. Jim, looking on with a frown, could not hear the stricken look on Ruth's face as Howard, de rue and got me a drink," murmured Miss Helen Sanders who had been startled out on to the veranda between dances. "A champagne cocktail, if you can find such a thing in these parts," she went on languidly. "If not, anything except that perfectly atrocious concoction your floor committee calls punch."

Farmers Cautioned About Speculation On Food For Export

Farmers and farm leaders are cautioned against succumbing too liberally the speculations appearing in the press since the German occupation of Denmark with regard to what the cutting off of Danish supplies to the United Kingdom may mean to Canadian agriculture, says a statement released on April 17th by the Agricultural Supplies Board.

It is true that Denmark held a position of major importance as a source of bacon, eggs, and dairy products for the British market. This is indicated by the figures released in April 11 by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, and widely published, in effect that in 1938, the last year for which complete "British import" data are available, Denmark supplied Britain with 320 million pounds of bacon, 236 million pounds of butter, 97 million dozen eggs—while the same source as reported to the United Kingdom" there that the situation changed but slightly in 1939—roughly 400 million pounds bacon, 260 million pounds butter, 97 million dozen eggs—while the same sources indicate that Danish exports to Britain during the first two months of the present year did not vary widely from those for the same period of last year.

There are impressive trade figures with respect to the products mentioned, but British market stands. Denmark supplies represented 62 per cent of Britain's total bacon purchases, 25 per cent of her total import of butter, nearly half her total import of eggs. From the Danish standpoint, the changed marketing situation is even more striking since the above mentioned shipments make up about 40 per cent of her total exports of all commodities in 1938.

A second consideration is that Denmark is not only removed from the British market picture for the period of the German occupation but will likely be a lesser factor in exports of foods and agricultural products thereafter. For it must be remembered that Denmark's large production of these commodities was not only possible because of, as a maritime nation, she could import considerable quantities of feeds. Despite great efforts in recent years to increase home production, the best information the available obtains that she imported from 20 to 25 per cent of her feed grain. Now that she has fallen within the orbit of the enemy, Denmark finds herself blockaded. And lacking the opportunity of bringing in much of these feeds, she may be forced to liquidate a portion of her live stock. This process, of course, will enable her temporarily to step up her export field after his crop had been and poultry, with Germany presumably as the market—but it is a process of "killing the goose that laid the golden eggs."

What does this removal of Denmark from the British supplies picture seem to the Canadian farmer? This much can be said: According to official advice received by the board, Britain is at the moment heavily stocked with home and domestic and Irish production are keeping up well. She is also supplied with bacon, the loss of Danish supplies of both these commodities, considerable as it is in volume, can be at least partially offset by reductions in rations, increased only a short time ago because of large supplies on hand. The determination of the Canadian authorities of the future change for the purchase of these things must manifest for the enormous governments of the war will undoubtedly lead to exploration of the new possibilities before new sources are sought of supplies formerly contributed from the Scandinavian countries.

Should Britain later need to increase, and butter to replace in part supplies heretofore received from Denmark, apparently she will have to turn to the North American continent. The United States has exploited a of many agricultural products, and experts of all commodities in 1938.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strauss, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

At the suggestion of the Dominion Experimental Farms, in 1938, the "Crop Testing Plan" availed a large number of special plots in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, with carefully measured amounts of seed in each plot. The plots were all sown on clean summerfallow.

On half of the plots the weeds were permitted to grow in the same way that they would grow in a farmer's field after his crop had been sown, and in the other half of the plots the Elevator Agents carefully pulled the weeds every few days during the whole course of the growing season.

The harvested material was analyzed, and by the Dominion Experimental Farms, at Ottawa, and the results of this experiment are most interesting. They reveal that for the average of the three years between the wheat plots (using Thatcher wheat) that were sown grew at 9 bushels to the acre, and the plots that were not weeded grew 36.6 bushels to the acre, which means that the weeds were controlling an increase of 6.3 bushels to the acre, or 17 per cent more was realized.

Those results show clearly that weeds are a very great factor in keeping down weeds in his fields should return handsome dividends.

Twins May Have Company Names

New York, April 29:— "Grand" and "Uncle" will be Christian names of twin sons recently born to Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Scott if the father has his own way. Scott, a freight traffic representative of the Grand Trunk-Canadian National Railways, definitely decided on these two names when he was given a choice his wife to agree. The Scotts, formerly of Philadelphia, now live in Brooklyn.

A Message To Hitler

FOREWORD

Ottawa, April 5.—The attached open letter to Adolf Hitler was written by an American barrister, Robert A. Morton, 401 South Spring Street, Los Angeles, California. It was published a few days ago in a Hollywood paper and Canadian newspapers have been granted the right to re-publish it, without charge by the author who states that he wrote it "with a desire to describe the tragic situation that can arise when the personal liberties, and the natural principles of humanity and justice, are outraged and suppressed in a nation."

By Robert A. Morton

Only a few words to you, and the first warm glow of Spring will touch the devastated lands and peoples of Europe. From the beginning of time, Herr Hitler, Spring has been nature's promise to mankind—a promise of new beauty, new life, and renewed inspiration for trust and hope. Spring is the symbol of peace. Perhaps you will not be moved. But in this year of 1940, Spring may bring the fulfillment of another promise, Herr Hitler, YOUR promise of restitution and death for countless thousands of women and children. That is to be your Spring gift to the peoples of Europe and to the human race—your gift to the world as the leader of a national group engaged in destroying civilization in Europe.

For the national interests and honor of Germany, you have pledged a Spring harvest of Blood and Tears. You are bordering on a reversion to primitive brutality, in fundamental ideas. Its causes and treatments are well known.

Herr Hitler, in an armistice by democratic nations, the prosperity of your people was the envy of the world. Learned physicians of Germany and other countries were in demand. Courageously submit yourself to physical, mental and sane. You say that rendezvous will be perfect with the promise of American children, and with the Spring and blossoms of all the world.

In the name of the world now living, whom you have promised to destroy this Springtime, and of the children yet unborn, I accept your promise of Death in the Spring and first trainees at Edmonton and Northern Alberta Aero club were

The Week In Edmonton

Edmonton, April 29:—Applause from 2,500 spectators was the reward of 2000 Northern Alberta gymnasts who performed in a P. T. display at the Edmonton Arena this week. Participants in the physical training project of the dominion-provincial youth training scheme, they gave an excellent exhibition of their prowess. Officially begun in 1938, the scheme has resulted in classes being formed in all parts of the province. There are now 178 groups in 70 Alberta communities.

Provincial authorities are hopeful of obtaining $150,000 for further youth training purposes this year. The grant will as usual be matched by a like sum from provincial coffers. Although the dominion launched the scheme on a three year basis last year, advent of war may cause change, it is considered possible. The first enlistments are passed at the federal house session opening May 16 the grant appropriations will not be known. But with the growing importance of the various youth projects in all provinces it is certain that the vocational training spheres will remain unchanged.

Under authority of the Trade and Industry Act, the Alberta Power Spreads Board holds power to fix gasoline and oil prices in the province, it was pointed out during the week. This was made clear in view of reports that a special session of the Legislature might be called to implement recommendations which the MacGillivray commission might make in regard to the province's price setting. The Price Spreads Board, headed by W. D. King, deputy minister of trade and industry, was set up immediately after the outbreak of war under provisions of legislation already in the statutes. The MacGillivray commission has been investigating the oil industry, and any official report of that investigation is now being awaited by the cabinet.

University of Alberta will make available to the federal authorities 30 surveying instruments for use in the construction of new military airports in the west, it was intimated this week. Loaning instruments is not a matter of policy, but is being done as a small contribution to Canada's war effort, it was added. Meanwhile, first trainees at Edmonton and Northern Alberta Aero club were

WHEAT PAYMENTS—

Regina:—Announcement that he has recommended changes in the Canada Wheat Board Act was made by Hon. J. G. Gardiner, federal minister of agriculture. If they are adopted, an interim payment plan will be provided for wheat delivered to the Board. This will mean that farmers will receive the initial 70 cents per bushel when the wheat is delivered and the additional payment when the Board had accumulated sufficient money to warrant such action, said the Minister. This will remove the present necessity of waiting until the grain is all sold. Mr. Gardiner also suggested that participation certificates now held by grain growers be made negotiable.

DOUBLE STANDARDS—

Quebec:—"I have always been against allowing women to vote and I am still against it," declared Premier Maurice Duplessis, when he explained the government bill granting Quebec women the right to vote in provincial elections, Mr. Duplessis thought it strange that "the Premier (Mr. Godbout) who has always opposed such a bill should be in favour of it now". But he was given its third reading recently and now awaits ratification from the Legislative Council.

GOOD NEWS—

Toronto:—The Allies war effort is getting one little publicity in North America, according to W. G. Watson, local born member of the British Parliament. He said he was going to tell the British minister of information, Sir John Reith, when he got back. "Why, we are doing wonderfully well and nobody seems to be doing anything about spreading the good news," said Mr. Watson.

Man Killed When Hit By Lightning

Lightning blasted death and destruction into a West Salisbury home on Monday afternoon, killing a veteran of two wars, who won decoration while serving as a lieutenant in the last war, injuring his wife, missing their only son and turning their farm dwelling into ruined shambles.—Ibrulsion.

The lightning flash struck as the family was sitting in the three-roomed home listening to a radio broadcast.

Although the roof and four walls of the house were shattered and split, no fire did not break out. Tuesday, the smoke-blackened roof still was lodged precariously on what remained of the walls.

Charles Wood, 16, a son, escaped injury the flash, pulled his mother out of the wreckage, rushed back into the house, found his father dead, then ran to the home of neighbors nearly a mile away for help.

Born in England, Mr. Wood served in the South African War at the outburn of the century, and soon afterwards came to Canada.

At the outbreak of the first Great War he joined a Winnipeg regiment. He won the Military Cross while fighting in France, and several other military decorations.

When he returned from the war, Mr. Wood began farming at West Salisbury and had lived there ever since.

HASTINGS LAKE

At long last the roads are becoming passable and we are quickly getting into circulation again. For the past few weeks we have done nothing but sit with our fingers crossed and wood on our backs, humming "The Flowers That Bloom In the Spring, Tra-la." Now everybody is in a rush to get those last few loads of hay, some grain and supplies and get on the land. Mr. Thompson's was the first car to get up the school road since the thaw, when last Thursday he was able to make his complete rounds with the mail. Mr. Barrow dragged the road on Saturday and Mr. Hoover is dragging it today, Tuesday, so it should be in fair condition.

We are sorry to hear that Mr. Peter Donald is still very ill and it is the earnest hope of all that he will soon be feeling much better.

Glen Anderson is also on the sick list, having a touch of pleurisy. Melvin Lindberg is helping out with the work. Glen has just returned from the west.

Miss Clara Lindberg spent last week at home visiting. She returned to her job near Camrose on Friday.

Mrs. Lickness is back at Mrs. Hansen's after a lengthy visit in Irma.

Mr. Joe Donald has been home on a visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. Donald.

Miss Audrienne Tough accompanied her aunt home to Lamar last week and plans to remain there for some time.

The April meeting of the Ladies' Club was postponed because of the roads. The May meeting will be held at Mrs. Fontaine's on the 16th. The roll call will be answered with a Mother's Day verse, also with the seed exchange which was to have been for last month.

Dutch Donald has relatsed.

Church Service will be held in the schoolhouse on Sunday, May 19th, beginning at 7:00 p.m.

Meetings of teachers in districts where a School Fair is to be held this fall are being arranged by W. G. Melcher, Vermilion, District Supervisor of School Fairs.

U.S. Wedding of Interest Here

In the Free Methodist Church Saturday evening, Miss Karene Giffen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Giffen, became the bride of Mr. John Rand, son of Mrs. Laura Rand. The seven o'clock ceremony was read by the Reverend Sandy Wagg.

Preceding the service, Miss Clarice Quartette of the Seattle Pacific College sang, "Oh, Love that will not let me go" and "Wonderful River of Love."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a very blue afternoon frock with the small Mr. Barrow dragged accessories. Mr. flowers worn Orchids received. Miss Beatrice should be in fair condition.

HEARTS WALKING

Mrs. Harry Pugh Smith

Chapter V

SYNOPSIS

Janet Phillips finds herself left out of things when her wealthier friends in Bay City come home from their finishing schools and colleges. Priscilla Leigh, at city manners, invites Janet to a dance at the Country Club. Janet's brother, Jim Phillips, Jarvis's brother, has brought the dance invitation from Priscilla. Janet is delighted at the prospect of the dance but is worried because she has no clothes for the occasion. Jim offers to drive her to Bay City to buy a dress, and Janet accepts.

"I'm ready," she said.

Again at dinner, Janet and Jim talked about the dance. Every one was supposed to be there and he wondered, he asked Janet, if she had yet got a date for the dance. Janet answered that she had not, and Jim asked if he might have the honour of taking her. She replied that she would be delighted to dance with him.

"Now that's settled," Jim said, "I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll take you to Bay City tomorrow morning and we'll have lunch there and then I'll bring you back in time for dinner. How does that strike you?"

"Why, it sounds wonderful," Janet answered, "but I'm afraid I can't go. I haven't a thing to wear."

"Want to dance?" he asked.

"Yes," Janet admitted with a little laugh.

There was an interval of silence which Janet found trying. In the end when he hadn't made a little bonfire of his cork-tipped cigarette, Jim got up from his chair and walked over to the window. "Looks like a nice day tomorrow," he remarked in a casual way.

"Yes, doesn't it?" Janet agreed.

He said he must be here to return to the subject of dresses in the slender story and home town in the role of a connoisseur of her throat.

"You dance beautifully," murmured Jim, wonders when the music ended.

He still did not trust himself to look at her. Howard Leigh was coming to the dance, with a novel and still Jim said nothing.

"I'll see you in the morning," she asked, "for our first lesson?"

Jim swallowed hard. "Yes," he said unsteadily although he knew the first lesson was behind them.

It was not apparent on the surface that Janet Phillips no longer occupied the same position in respect to her old crowd which she had once held. She did not suffer for lack of parties at the dance that night.

Gordon did not look happy. In spite of his mother's persistence, Gordon had never liked Priscilla.

Even when it was her whim to be amiable, he never knew what subtle family was prominent locally. You see, he didn't care about the Jarvis money but the distressed cries he heard when I finish my course in music don't appeal to him. He prefers decorating."

He was studying the dead end of a match he held. Which someone else on him eternal decorating. I might have a career."

"My grandfather's house!"

"I figured he papers a couple of days."

"But," cried Janet breathlessly, "it's dreadfully run down. That's why the property go practically for nothing. We couldn't go back there and no one would want to live there and no one would have it changed, or any of you could. I had liked me at the altar—the sad I am—I'll be glad to marry any money."

"I," said Tony Ryan. "It's like that," he muttered. "When I was a child My new resolution . . . that I'll only act if promised myself you're too good for me." he mused with that I'm by the best of everything. At that time the old Earl of Ryan's ear to believe my efforts material to represented my idea of a dental of his life. . . . I went about the world, almost thing of the track. "Yes," she said it up the plate," said Janet idly. "Bet of the few times I ever saw her but her friends were too tactful. She of my way not to pass the house. scattered an excuse when the music I ain't pleasant to be reminded that stopped and escaped in the dressing room.

She arrived at the ballroom to find that her partner for the next dance had looked everywhere for her before entering in disgrace to the bar. Had Janet followed her inclination Tommie's me.

She would have hunted up Jim and asked him to take her home she felt sure he was bored to death and eager for an excuse to go, but at that moment a couple drifted by her on the dance floor. Janet could scarcely be blame for her eyes. From the rest of her person on his ragged face, her brother Jim was anything but bored.

"Oh, no!" cried Janet.

She did not realize she had spoken about until someone who had come up behind her addressed her. "Shall we try it on the dance?"

She turned sharply. Tony Ryan stood at her elbow. Evidently he had arrived at that moment arrived. She he looked to make an excuse for not having brought him. However, he gave her no chance to do anything of the kind. He merely put out his arms and Janet, who offered to dance off with her as if he believed any girl would feel flattered to be asked out by the famous Tony Ryan.

Janet was glad when Priscilla came and, glad when Priscilla came she was positive and strive to stamp across the room to assert her claim to the roaring celebrity. But when Janet was edged gracefully around by Tony Ryan so that Janet was edged into a position from which she could see and afterward it was out, then finally said good night to Priscilla. She was very young, Tom Hughes with whom she had the next dance.

The last dance of the evening was the only one in which Jim and Janet were partners.

"Enjoyed it?" he asked.

No far as Bernice and Bill Carter were concerned, the party at Lee Fletcher's that same evening was not a success. They ran the radio and she—and made a great deal of noise, the people in the adjourning apartment knocked on the wall, but spy accounts. But they do show the extent of Nazi espionage in Norway. They made a mistake, even then, in the cities overawed able to speak his own mind in his own government warn. ing not to discuss such things in public places, but those three were alone and they were friends. No one else was near. They thought they were safe in case they listened, why they did quietly. Imagine if you can, sitting in a Winnipeg restaurant and looking all around for U.S. agents before you guardedly expressed criticism of President Roosevelt!)

The day after the lunch in Oslo my relative received an anonymous letter saying: "Either done not stand for criticism. You have been overheard criticizing the U.S.A. and we must warn you, be careful what you say.

He thought it was a joke. But his companions denied all knowledge of it. The boys decided not to let the incident pass. Knowing no one but the waitress, could have possibly heard them, they decided she must have been responsible.

That evening they waited outside the restaurant until she came out and then followed her. She went straight to the German consulate. Reporting the affair to the authorities they learned, later, that core enough she was a German spy.

The other illustration: One evening a school principal friend of ours with his wife and their friends, were in the trading a supper dance. Argue the whys and wherefores and who's fault of the war came up for discussion. A wife or so later the principal received a letter saying: "You have been 1. Germany. Never again. You will be remembered when the time comes. Hitler stands for no criticism."

The letter had a return address in Germany. The principal wrote a hot answer, saying among other things: "I am a free man in a free country. I can say whatever I please and am not afraid."

Later he received another envelope containing a photograph of himself with his wife and friends, taken at the supper dance. An enclosed note said: "Yes, you have been. We are doing. You will be remembered."

Such are the methods of the German secret police in their efforts to pave the way for an onslaught on a peaceful neighbour.

German Espionage In Norway

by Anne Bentzoil in the Winnipeg Free Press

(Miss Anne Bentzoil, former Manitoba women's tennis champion, visited Norway a few months before the war. She records incidents in her own experience of Nazi espionage in Norway.)

When I was in Norway last fall German spies were everywhere. My friends always spoke of them, of how they were appearing in greater and greater numbers. All recognized the danger. Yet, they asked, what could Norway do, striving as it was to stay out of the war and preserve itself from Nazi wrath which surely would have fallen on it if it had attempted to close out the spies.

Two spy stories, one concerning a relative of mine and the other a friend illustrate the incredible manner in which Nazi agents, so far back as last fall, had wormed their way by to every part of the country's life. They are not spectacular, story-book spy accounts. But they do show the extent of Nazi espionage in Norway. They show, even then, in the cities overawed able to speak his own mind in his own government warn. ing not to discuss such things in public places, but those three were alone and they were friends. No one else was near. They thought they were safe in case they listened, why they did quietly. Chemical refrigeration, raises an article in the current issue of the C.I.L. Oval, has enabled British Columbia fishing industry to make enormous strides. The frozen fish trade is still a junior partner in the $18,000,000 commercial fishery of British Columbia, is assuming yearly a greater importance and claiming a larger and larger share in world markets. Fishing vessels are the process of sharp freezing, the industry effort to compensate all over the world son food which retains the indispensable attributes of freshness. YELLOW GOLD and GRIZZLY BEAR

The story of R. J. Stern, prospector, driven from his newfound wealth by a hungry monster, never to locate again the fortune within easy grasp.

By C. V. Trench in Forest & Outdoors

It was just turned midnight by my watch when Sam, our fellow prospector in the camp helper, came into the tent and roused Gregg and me.

"Get dressed," he said, as he switched on our lowerie camp lantern. "Me 'saw man call out. Mebbe lost, mebbe hurt."

Hurriedly pulling on boots and clothes, picking up our rifles, and carrying the lantern, we followed outside. For long seconds we stood mute. All we could hear was the occasional howl of a wolf and the soft hissing of snowflakes as they floated into the roaring fire Sam had built up.

"Now you weren't mistaken, Sam?" Gregg demanded.

"Sure," Sam nodded. Know-um man—call all right. If 'im 'ort bad mebbe wolves get 'im."

"I'll try a couple of signal shots," I said, and fired two bullets into the ground. The reverberations rolled all about the surrounding hills and valleys then slowly died away and again all was deathly still, the roar of the shots seeming to have frightened the wolves.

"Ugh!" Sam grunted, "Im mebbe too sick to call out again. We better look-see."

Gregg and I exchanged glances. For a week on our annual hunting trip we had camped beside an unnamed lake in the Rocky Mountains of British Columbia. In all that time we had not seen a single sign of any human beings other than ourselves. Now Sam insisted that he had heard a man calling, and Sam was a trustworthy native.

"Perhaps," I suggested to Gregg "you had better stay here and keep the fire going while Sam and I scout around."

Gregg agreed and Sam and I started off on what I though would prove to be a wild goose chase. But I was wrong.

Although the freshly-falling snow had almost obliterated the tracks he had made in bringing in a deer earlier in the day, Sam, with the aid of the lantern was able to follow them, explaining: "Mebbe man 'ere called out from cut a'ew side."

It was logical reasoning and brought results.

We had not gone more than half a mile when the beam from the powerful lantern picked out an object moving slowly towards us. As we saw what it was, Sam and I halted and stared aghast. On our hands and knees, raising at us from bloodshot eyes in blood-caked face, and resting half-upright on arms that were also covered with dried blood, was a man.

He was trying to call out. We saw his lips move. Then we saw him drop face downwards with arms outstretched in the snow.

At the same moment we saw something else; greenish eyes luminous in the glow of light. Walwol At once Sam and I started to shoot and drove the cowardly brutes back into the timber, then turned to the side of the stricken man.

We dropped to our knees and raised his head. Agony was written on his face and again his lips tried to form words.

"Don't try," I told him. "You're all right now."

At that he mercifully fainted.

Half an hour later we had the man (we learned later that his name was B. J. Stern) stripped and stretched out on a pile of blankets in the tent, with Gregg, fortunately a well-trained first-aid man, dressing his wounds.

Stern's condition, although they were ugly to look at, had bled freely and would have hurt badly, were not usually serious and no bones were broken. Their nature told us that they could have occurred in only one way, from the vicious, raking blow of a grizzly's powerful forepaw. For deep furrows had been gouged from the top of his head, standing across the right shoulder down to the right forearm. The heavy sweater, top shirt and undershirt we removed from his body were in ribbons, but his legs were not hurt. Sheer loss from loss of blood and lack of food and water for days had brought the raving along on hands and knees.

We then set about the business of getting him well enough to sit in a chair, so that we could convey him to the nearest hospital.

It took a week of rest, careful nursing and good food to accomplish this, and then he told us how he had come so close to losing his life in that section of mountain wilderness. I told us with a grim note of injured pride in his voice.

A prospector by choice, for more than twenty years he had prospected alone in the rugged mountain fastnesses of British Columbia; here and there he found small outcroppings of gold-bearing quartz. On the shores of tumbling mountain streams he panned varying quantities of alluvial gold. But never a worthwhile strike of any kind. Not until recently when he had made a real find. For weeks he had washed a single-handed, quietly content that at long last "Lady Luck" was beaming upon him. But equally as swiftly and the fickle goddess frowned. A big grizzly, doubtless attracted by the enticing aroma of bacon and syrup, began to prowl around Stern's camp at night.

Stern was more irritated than alarmed by the near presence of the beast, for it seemed that each night he had to cache his meagre supply of flour, beans, bacon, syrup, tea and other supplies in the branches of a big tree; food he was trying to also get it until he had recovered sufficient gold quartz to make it worth while to journey to the nearest town and cash in, record his claim and obtain further supplies.

Then the fact of the grizzly's nearness meant that he had to keep his rifle by his side waking and sleeping. But not until the night when he and the bear fought it out to a finish did he even glimpse the huge brute, and when that fight did take place the elements of darkness and surprise were all in the bear's favour.

It was Stern's habit to sleep on the floor of the tent, for he was a heavy and laboriously clinging out of the cold each, surrounding the opening each night with roughly-constructed grizzly made out of stout poles. The grating, crude as it was, gave him a sense of security from prowling beasts.

On this night, bone-weary from another long day of toil with pick, hand drill and shovel, he turned in immediately after he had eaten his frugal supper. But, physically weary though he was, his thoughts were jubilant. He was confident he had at last found a claim that would supply more than enough for his simple wants for the rest of his life. And he was not afraid of others jumping it for this was unsurveyed.

That night the grizzly again returned to prowl gruntingly all about the campsite while Stern slept.

But this night the grimly did not contest itself with nosing here and there, eyeing the food in the ropes along ache hungrily, then shambling down across his right shoulder to his right forearm. And then he had staggered out of reach of the stricken animal. The grizzly tried to follow, but could only drag itself slowly and feebly forward by its forepaws.

By now Stern was almost blinded from the blood streaming from his head, but he was not unconscious and pain. He had no other weapon, so means at all of finishing the bear, so, guided only by the blind instinct of self-preservation he reeled away from the scene.

How many days and nights he blundered through the wilderness he did not know, until came the morning when he found himself on the shore of a lake. Here he was beaten down where they had fought over and fed on the offal from the deer and the sibilant hordes were still in the vicinity. They started to close in when they sensed Stern's weakened condition.

He had no means of keeping them off but he thought it would be a question of time before he lost consciousness and the beasts attacked. And then he had sighted the glow from our camp fire. Summoning all his remaining strength he had called out. A minute or two later he had fallen in a heap at the camp fire and, although by now too weak to shout again the sound of the shots had brought us running, making one last effort to crawl towards our fire.

Today he is fully recovered in health but, strive though he might he cannot recall the exact moment of his rich strike. In his weakened and delirious condition he possibly travelled forty or fifty miles before we found him. Of course, he has hunted several times, himself, and others, guided only by the meagre topographical descriptions he is able to give, have also searched, but to date in vain. Yet the lode is there, for in the pockets of a leather belt he wore about his waist he had tucked away the best nuggets he dug out, a collection that brought a little over five hundred dollars when he finally arrived at Vancouver.

WITH THE FORCES

Great progress has been made to date with the British Commonwealth Air Training plan, Lieut.-Col. L. Duncan, acting Deputy Minister of National Defence for Air Services told the executive of the Weekly Newspapers. He addressed them on Friday, May 4 while they were in Ottawa for conference. Contrary to much talk now heard about the plan, he further declared, the programme was being carried out entirely in accordance with the prescribed and pre-arranged schedule. Thousands upon thousands of men were at work. Every province of the Dominion was playing its part or would be called upon to do so. "In a word," he said, "the greatest single enterprise Canada has ever known is launched and well under way."

To all, provision had been made, said Mr. Duncan, "for approximately 110 formations and units to be established from Nova Scotia to British Columbia."

Provisions for the establishment of various schools, aerodromes and equipment depots were completed by the Department of National Defence. A Service Flying School will be set up at Camrose, Alberta, with relief aerodromes at Granum, Alberta, and Penhold, Alberta. Further schools will contribute to the training of airmen with the creation of a School of Air Observation at Summerside, a Bombing and Gunnery School at Chatham, New Brunswick, the location of the necessary ground for the Chatham site. The main aerodrome for the Summerside school will be developed at St. Eleanor's, with relief aerodromes at Mount Pleasant and Wellington.

Artful moonlight, he was trying to draw a band on a vital spot, when Stern's face was laden with blood—proof that the two bullets had reached vital spots. But the vitality of a grizzly is proverbial and it continued to attack with terrific savagery. Stern turned to run. At the same instant the grizzly struck with a powerful forepaw. The wicked claws caught Stern a glancing blow, ripping him crossly from the top of his head down across his right shoulder to his right forearm. And then he had staggered out of reach of the stricken animal. The grizzly tried to follow, but could only drag itself slowly and feebly forward by its forepaws.

Through the slits in the barrier the bull of the grizzly loomed ominous. Sitting up, Stern quietly lifted his rifle to his shoulder. In the darkness he could not hope to pick out a vital spot for a finishing shot, but the bite of a bullet and the thunderous roar of an exploding cartridge is usually sufficient to send even a grizzly bear slumping away.

Stern banked on that fact and crossed the ridge. He heard the bullet smash into the animal's body, saw the grizzly rear up and go tumbling backwards down the slight slope in front of the tunnel. The brute clawed frenziedly in effort to regain its balance and took the crude opening with it in its fall, bowling Stern without that slight but helpful protection!

To be trapped in that hole if the brute attacked again would mean certain death. Stern well realized, as he quickly scrambled to the mouth of the tunnel, at the same time jerking another cartridge into the breech of his rifle.

The bear had picked itself up and was now slowly gruntingly climbing up the rocky slope on the far side of the tunnel. It was too dark to see clearly, but by the beast's actions Stern concluded the first blind shot had been a lucky one; the grizzly's spine appeared to be broken. And in that moment he saw not a wounded and dangerous animal, but only meat, fat, a warm robe and opportunity to be rid of his troublesome visitor for all time. He started after the bear to get in a finishing shot.

My, My, How Time Does Fly

In the summer of 1914, just across the street, north, from where the co-op store is now located, there stood a one storey building known as the Tofield Standard Office This building housed a printing plant, both jobbing and plant being owned by the late R. N. Whillans.

R. N. Whillans was the "boss" and the writer was the employee, although there was always a degree of familiarity between boss and employee that bordered on being cordial.

One evening during the summer of that year as the writer was leaving off work for the day, and having just passed through the front office doorway out on the sidewalk, there passed on the street, going north, a large automobile which were only then becoming popular, driving the automobile was the late D. W. Warner and seated beside him was R. N. Whillans.

The latter, seeing "the help" leaving the office waved a greeting, all the while grinning widely. To one who was for several years had been favoured on a pair of ten point type cases, the passing vehicle looked like a million dollars. Any way, R. N.—on occasion—could very easily look like a million dollars.

During the years that have passed since then, many, many times the writer has seen plenty of automobiles, small ones, large ones. Automobiles that proved themselves just about like an European diplomat and automobiles that soared up like a swift and wooley western cow boy. Have seen them with leaky radiators and bent fenders and others with paint so lustrous as to dazzle the vision. But somehow or other, none have quite came up to the standard of the car of 1914 experience.

A few days ago when "drumming up business", many out of curiosity asked the writer what he thought of the talking questions about a 1928 McLaughlin Buick that stood out in the open for all eyes to see.

Well, it was a good enough car, never got into the million dollar class as the dealer said, and we usually got bought a used car without spending $17 "J. B. Sayer," replied the dealer, hearing the engine run or so. Well, thought the writer, you'll taking a ride in it.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

As announced by the Minister of Finance, the Foreign Exchange Acquisition Order, 1940, has been enacted by Order-in-Council under the authority of the War Measures Act.

Unless exempted by the Order, every resident of Canada who, on May 1st, 1940, has any foreign currency in his possession, ownership or control, whether in Canada or outside Canada, is required forthwith to sell such foreign currency to an Authorized Dealer (i.e. a branch of a chartered bank) for payment in Canadian dollars at the official buying rate of the Foreign Exchange Control Board.

"Foreign currency", for the purposes of the Order, means any currency (including coin) other than Canadian currency and includes bank notes, postal notes, money orders, cheques, travellers' cheques, prepaid letters of credit, bank drafts and other similar instruments payable in any currency other than Canadian currency, and also includes any amount in foreign currency of which a resident has a right to obtain payment by reason of a deposit, credit or balance of any kind at or with a bank, savings bank, trust company, loan company, stockbroker, investment dealer or other similar depository.

The Order does not require the sale of any foreign securities.

The Order does not affect any foreign currency, deposit or securities of any non-resident of Canada and for greater certainty the Order expressly declares that a non-resident visiting Canada for business or pleasure for a period or periods not exceeding six months in the year continues to be a non-resident for the purposes of the Order unless such person enters or has entered Canada with the intention of becoming a permanent resident.

No resident is required to sell any foreign currency if he satisfies the Foreign Exchange Control Board that he held such foreign currency on May 1st, 1940, solely as trustee or agent for a non-resident and that the non-resident's interest therein had not been acquired from a resident since September 15th, 1939, except in a manner approved by the Board.

Under certain conditions stipulated in Section 1 (b) of the Order, a resident who is not a Canadian citizen may be granted exemption, but only after application for exemption is approved by the Board.

No life insurance company incorporated in Canada is required by the Order to sell any foreign currency which it needs for the purpose of carrying on its business outside Canada.

Further particulars may be obtained from branches of chartered banks. Any resident who has any foreign currency in his possession, ownership or control on May 1st, 1940, regardless of amount, should consult his bank at once in order to ascertain the extent to which he is affected by the Order.

Cornhill Council Meeting Comparatively Light

Compared to some previous meetings, the May meeting of the Council of Municipal District of Cornhill was light.

The meeting was held on Friday May 10th at the district's office at Tofield the following being present. Reeve Walker; Councillors Anderson, Brown, Cousins, Kortzman and Sherwood.

The minutes of the last regular meeting together with the accounts passed for payment at that meeting were read and formally adopted.

A letter was read from Mr. P. J. Davis re hospital account of Joe Dion, said amounting to around $40.00. There was some question as to who was really responsible for this account. Mr. Donald had moved around and in accordance some of the municipal authorities were anxious to hand out the money. Mr. Davis declared that the hospital should be paid, and declared legal action would be taken if it was not. It was decided to have Mr. McLean investigate the claim and give an opinion as to responsibility.

The Town of Tofield resheeted the east end road gravel to grade a short piece of road running in front of the highway to elevators. It was agreed to let them do this work the large outfit at $4.00 per hour.

Letter from the Department of Public Works re road grant. Council was informed that the government resolved grants for the roads had not been outlined, and the Dept. could not give any assurances until it was done.

Quite a little discussion centred around the problem of culverts. In the main council favored the use of wooden culverts, due to their lower cost. While they did not last as long as other steel or cement, they lasted quite a few years and the objective of the council was to build as much road as possible with the money at their disposal.

Councillor Anderson called attention to a number of steel culverts the district owned and which were in the yard. These culverts were considered too expensive for expenditure to use under their allotment and he suggested that they be sold to the councillors for use in the different districts at half price. No action on this matter was taken at this time.

Lumber culverts came under discussion and Mr. Burke of the Cowper Lumber was called in. Mr. Burke said the prices for culvert lumber were the same as last year. Thus fact fir would cost $43.00 per M net. There was some in the lumber yard and he would be getting more in. It was left for each individual councillor to buy as needed. Councillor Brown could get his requirements at the same price from the Canwest yard.

It was decided to have a number of sign cards printed for bridges.

Letter from Mr. McLean re Dr. Law's health insurance plan. Mr. McLean's opinion was that the District was responsible for indigents only. It was decided to try and get a definition of the word "indigent."

Adjournment for lunch.

Letter from Mothers' Allowance Department re allowances of Mrs. Grace Grummet. Also a letter from Mrs. Bethel re same subject.

Secretary was instructed to reply to Mrs. Grummet had suggested that she take the matter up directly with the government.

Letter from Old Age Pension Board re pension of Mrs. Detweiler. The Board declined to grant assistance as to an increase.

Application of Councillor Anderson an increase of $2.50 per month was considered.

Letter from Peter Ungstad saying that he has taken a position in his M D Consequently he would be unable to take a position with M. D. No. 407.

Mr. Ungstad was employed as grader man last year and re-engaged for this season at last meeting of council.

A letter from George Mattern asking for the position, also applications of Mr. Trunnel and Mr. Selin and Leo Herndon were on hand. The qualifications of the different men were considered, it finally being decided to do the same as last year, namely, appoint a committee of two to engage a man. On motion of Reeve Walker, Councillors Kortzman and Brown were appointed and authorized to engage a man for the position.

Tofielders Contribute To Navy League

Rallying to support the Navy League of Canada in its work of assisting the widows and orphans of men of the Merchant Marine and their dependents; maintaining Sailors' Homes and Institutes in our large Canadian ports from coast to coast and looking after the welfare of the seamen when ashore; training boys and young men and helping to make better Canadian citizens of them, 134 citizens of Tofield and district contributed $14.00 to the cause in a recent campaign here conducted by Fred Crooke, organizer of the Alberta Division for 1939, 1940.

Holden Division School Festival Here Monday

Postponed from May 3rd on account of bad roads, the Annual Music Festival of the Holden School Division will be held in Tofield on Monday, next, May 20th.

The event, which has been fairly well covered in previous issues of the Mercury, will bring to Tofield the largest number of children ever to come in a single day.

Some award cups in connection with the festival are on display in Job and Company's window. They are very nice cups and the groups or individuals winning them will be very proud, as they will have a right to be. It should be remembered however that the competitive spirit is not the primary motive of the Festival but it is rather to encourage a liking for music and understanding of music and stage craft.

Several buildings in town will be utilized to take care of the numerous competitions running throughout the day. These will include the school, curling rink, town hall, Variety Theatre, United Church.

There will be two full scale public concerts at night, each with an independent program. Items on these programs will be the pick of those rendered during the day.

Any information concerning Monday's event may be procured from Mr. L. A. Broughton, president of the organization, or Miss McCrea, secretary.

Chapter VI

SYNOPSIS

Janet Phillips resents her family's poverty when her wealthier friends come home from college. Priscilla Leigh, whose family has made money, has appropriated the spotlight at Bay City and along with Janet—Janet's Gordon Key. Jim Phillips, Janet's brother has brought her in to Leslie's to which Gordon has promised to take her. Leslie's is a place with rich, red headed Helen Sanders. Jim is rich being as golf pro at the club and has offered to give Miss Sanders lessons. Janet meets Tony Ryan at the dance and agrees to rendezvous at the house when Tony has just bought. In the meantime Bernice and Bill Carter, Janet's sister and her brother-in-law have come home from a wild party which Bill enjoyed. "If I weren't crazy about you I wouldn't care what you did," Bill had just said.

"I don't know why we ever fight," she sighed. "What did you have to tell me?"

"The boss had a talk with me today."

"Oh" cried Bernice radiantly. "You've got a raise at last." Now we can have a car like every one else."

Bill swallowed hard. "No," he said "I didn't get a raise. They're cutting salaries again. Well have to find some way to get by on ten dollars less a week."

She stiffened and drew away from his embrace to stare at him. "You mean we'll have to move? Back to cheap housekeeping rooms without a bath or anything?"

"If you ask me," said Bill in a grim voice. "we were better off there than here, and it darned sight happier."

"When you preach you make me so mad I could die!" cried Bernice in a stifled voice.

"You don't mention my disposition say," remarked Bill savagely, snapping off the light.

Driving out to the club in his buttoned fliver early the next morning, Jim Phillips, after a nearly sleepless night, had arrived at a decision, not a happy one, but one from which he was determined not to swerve. He had made a complete idiot of himself the night before, he did not propose to repeat the performance.

By every standard on which he had painstakingly built his life he could not afford to fall in love with Miss Helen Sanders.

He succeeded so well in convincing himself that Miss Helen Sanders was merely a shooting star which had flashed across his horizon only to disappear, he considered it extremely unlikely that she would keep her promise and appear for the promised golf lesson.

Nevertheless, knocking golf balls idly against the side of the caddy house, he kept his eyes steadily on the drive leading down to the gate and when Leigh's scarlet and white coupe turned in at the club entrance Jim's heart gave an agonized bound.

"Hi!" murmured Miss Sanders, bringing the machine to an abrupt stop with a scream of brakes and a flurry of gravel.

"Hello," said Jim in a voice that did not sound like his.

She was about to the coupe except for the elaborate bag of golf clubs which Howard had procured for her the day before. She was wearing a backless slim frock with a matching halter neck tied under her chin and a pair of blue shorts. A blue silk bandana handkerchief caught her auburn hair back from her face. Her slender golden limbs were bare. She looked disgruntled and sleepy and she scrambled a yawn as she climbed out of the car.

"It's" ungodly hours to get up!" she complained. "I left yesterday's shoe fast asleep."

"That's why I didn't expect you," said Jim.

She gave him a sultry glance. "Maybe that's why I came, to prove the you can't be right all the time"

Jim led the way without comment towards a big stone arch that touched up at the end of a wire enclosure behind the caddy house.

"You're a long way from being ready to hit a ball yet," said Jim. "Let's see you swing. No, no! That isn't a baseball bat. Hold it this way, and for heaven's sake cut out the debutante slouch and get some backbone into your answer."

Jim ignored the black glances she gave him from time to time. He went on quietly showing her where she could swing everything wrong. It was tedious work.

He had to confess that she had proved an apt pupil She hack-did ghastly occasionally, but in the main she seemed to have acquired a surprising grasp of the essentials in the time allotted.

"All right," said Jim when the hour was up, "think will do for today."

She flexed the muscles of her left arm. "I seem to be sore than I realized."

Jim grinned. "Wait till tomorrow. You'll know all about Charley-horses then."

Her glance smoldered. "Maybe I'm not as soft as you think, anyway. I'm going to play around this afternoon, Charley-horse or not," she announced decidedly.

"I don't want you to act foot on the course until you've had four more lessons," he said. "If you continue to pick up you can play Saturday."

"I'll play when I like."

"That's up to you," said Jim. "Only if you do I've lost a pupil."

Their glances tangled and her eyes fell first. "All right," she said sullenly, "I'll play Saturday." She gave him a rueful glance from under her lashes. "You are ever soon to say it before. I ought to hate you."

Jim could feel himself growing warm. "Don't you?" he asked unsteadily.

She had come nearer, so near he could not get his breath.

"Maybe it's because you're different, she whispered, "but I wish you didn't despise me."

Jim could think of nothing except her seductive face tilted alluringly to his.

"I don't despise you," he said hoarsely. "I think you're the prettiest thing I ever looked at."

"Honestly?"

"Honestly" repeated Jim with a painful flush.

"I have a feeling, given a proper chance, we could go for each other in a large way," she murmured, then turned abruptly toward the car. "See you tomorrow morning, Professor," she said and drove rapidly away.

The grounds of the old Radcliffe place took up an entire block. A large, rough stone wall enclosed the property on all sides. Janet's grandfather had made a gallant effort to retrieve the family fortunes, but he was more a statesman than politician and, while he made an excellent governor, he was too honest to manufacture capital from a political career. When he died he left barely enough to settle his debts.

Tony Ryan drove a large boy from his pocket. In passing almost every one followed him up the wide steps to the great brass-studded front door with its dolorous flashlight overhead. In the same oppressive silence they made a tour of the old mansion and returned to the double parlors on the south.

"There's nothing wrong which a crew of high priced carpenters can not put right in a hurry," the real estate agency advises me that Bushy is the best carpenter in town. You'll work directly with him.

"I'll not be able to get out into the office," he continued. "I have a number of loose ends to tie off now that I've finally decided to retire. I'll tell Bushy I want everything in this house put back exactly as it was. You will be in charge of the job which When he's finished we'll take up the question of furnishings."

"I still feel as if I'd be taking money under false pretenses," she murmured uneasily.

"I never allow myself to be cheated, sir," said Tony Ryan, bowing his way back to the car.

By five o'clock that afternoon he was riding and the gulf course was deserted. Jim Phillips had no desire to hang around with the crowd which was having cocktails in the clubhouse. He had invited Howard and Priscilla Leigh, also Tony Ryan and Miss Helen Sanders.

When Jim arrived the flat, Janet was stretched out on the day-bed in the sitting room with a pair of strumming window panes with an expression as mysterious as the weather and Cathy Ford was sitting on the floor beside Danny who had fallen asleep and was curled up under a faded crocheted afghan like a little dog in a rug.

"Hello, everybody," said Jim, sounding more cheerful than he felt. "Hi, Janet" murmured Janet in a listless voice.

Cathy looked up quickly and smiled. "Hello, Jim," she said softly.

Dropping down into a big wicker chair Jim leaned his head back and extended his long legs at full length. "Besides afternoon," he remarked.

Janet's lips tightened. "Some days must be dark and dreary," she spoted bitterly.

Jim laughed. Cathy said nothing. Jim had noticed that on a rule you had to discover what Cathy was thinking by what she did not say. He watched her slim fingers busily engaged with needle and thread. She was mending a pair of brief silken trunks, part of her dancing costume. She held the trunks up critically between herself and the fading light to inspect her stitches.

"They're not much bigger than Danny's pants," commented Jim with contempt.

To his surprise Cathy blushed. The color washed painfully into her pinched face and Jim realized with acute dismay that he had hurt her. "Ah that," he said in an effort to make amends. "when it comes to covering, they're as adequate as the new bathing suits all the girls wear."

"The difference is, I draw a salary for wearing them," Cathy explained and added with a short laugh, "You can get by with less if you don't have to use your amateur standing. If fancy, that's it, how 95% of the girls in society dame with the least on who appear at the bruner cheese ghit."

"It is when you're poor but proud," muttered Jim

Janet stared at him in astonishment. "It's—nothing new for you to be poor," she said. "You've always seemed to think we ought to thank goodness for our clothes because they (supposed to develop character, or what have you-"

"Anything but!" said Anne Phillips opening the front door.

"Heaven help the poor working girls as a night like this."

Jim grinned. "There you go, making a fuss about nothing as usual."

Anne smiled at Cathy. "Anyway our coat like us," she said. "How's the boy?"

Cathy hesitated. "He's been asleep for an hour. He fell asleep too hot to me and it isn't like him to let me down."

She smiled, knelt down and put her hand on Danny's small flushed face.

"Sho—has he any fever?" faltered Cathy.

"Maybe a little," admitted Anne. It seemed to Jim that Cathy's eyes grew larger and her face paler. "Want me to stroll over and ask up a thermometer?" she said briskly.

Anne's check her head. "Try probably just an upset stomach. You'll better leave Danny here on the day-bed until you get home and perhaps so I can look at him occasionally," she added.

"You're all so kind," said Cathy with a little sob. "I don't like to leave him, but I'm afraid Mrs. Gantz is bond to open the door. Jim the baby's head resting like a crumpled yellow flower on the pillow. He stirred after a little.

"Some one's bought the house," Janet said.

It was unnecessary to say what have been the only one which mattered to the Phillips family. Anne, head turned toward the kitchen, paused abruptly.

"Yes?" she asked with a catch in her voice.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

Venezuela is a country which depends for its state revenue upon high tariffs against imports. The prices, therefore, of things to be purchased in Venezuela are very high, and the standard of living of the people is low.

The cost of vaccinating horses is cheap insurance against their possible loss. The injection of the vaccine is effective in giving immunity for about seven months if properly administered. Vaccination has been delayed (this year on account of road conditions, but should be completed by June 1st.

The wet condition of the land will place a premium on horses for power as they can be used on wet land before the tractor.

Vaccine may be obtained from drug stores, qualified veterinarians and municipal offices. It should be administered by a veterinarian or someone who has received special training in its administration.

The danger of humans being infected with the disease ought, and to be overlooked in considering the prevention of an outbreak in Equine year.

Equine Encephalomyelitis

Farmers who do not vaccinate their horses against an outbreak of Equine Encephalomyelitis are taking unnecessary chances. Authentic claim that the disease may occur this year, and the prevalence of a large number of mosquitoes likely to result from the wet spring may cause the outbreak to spread very rapidly.

Sending Rates For Forage Crops

Many factors govern the rates of seeding forage crops. Soil, moisture conditions, topography, condition of the land and purpose for which the crop is to be used are important. For most districts of Alberta, however, the following rates are recommended:

Alfalfa—10 to 12 pounds per acre.
Timothy—4 to 6 pounds per acre.
On irrigated land or where seed is broadcast, the rate may be increased to 6 to 8 pounds.
Crested Wheat Grass—12 pounds per acre. On poorly prepared soil, 14 pounds is recommended.
Red Clover—12 to 15 pounds per acre. Slightly more may be sown on irrigated land or when seed is broadcast.
Alsike Clover—4 to 6 pounds per acre. Increase this amount slightly on irrigated land or where seed is broadcast.

Ottawa:—Canada's Indian population increased from 118,349 in 1934 to 119,480 in 1939, according to the Indian affairs branch of the federal department of mines and resources. Two tribes in Eastern Canada are engaged largely in agriculture, while hunting still remains the pursuit of the northern Indian. On the prairies, farming is carried on with success by the Sioux. Of the Indians, have earned a place in the fishing industry.

UNBALANCED TRADE—

Ottawa:—Canada's favorable balance of trade for January and February, ending on the last day of the month, is reported by the federal trade and industry department. During that period, the report, showed exports of $168,167,000 while imports totalled $143,145,000. The United Kingdom was Canada's best customer, having bought in excess of 900 millions Canadian exports. In the same period Canada imported less than $20% millions from the Old Country.

AN INDIGENT—

Every so often in the proceedings of council meetings the word indigent crops up. It is mostly in connection with the payment of relief or in connection with an application for relief. But while most people have a general idea of what the word means, there are few who, when asked to give a literal definition of the word are able to do so. Even if they are able to do so, there immediately rushes to mind numerous instances of the use of the word which do not conform with their literal definition. There probably is a legal definition of the word but a legal definition of anything is generally surrounded by "whereas's" and "wherefores," and in the final stage emerges as the considered opinion of some judge.

An ordinary dictionary defines the word "indigent" as destitute, needy. A more elaborate dictionary said the word "ruin" as one definitions given. Void means empty, wanting, so the word indigent could be correctly understood to mean, destitute, needy, empty, wanting. It would be difficult to imagine a person being an indigent without being needy or wanting, but it would be quite possible for a person to be an indigent (under the above definitions) without being destitute or empty.

A councillor searching for grounds on which to base his decisions in regard to relief, will find the word "indigent" a tough spot to land on. And it would appear that in the future as in the past, councillors will have to judge each relief case on its merits leaving the word "indigent" to find its own level according to common practise.

A CONTRAST—

A splendid illustration of the difference of opinion regarding concepts of liberty between British and German public men was given last week. In spite of herculean efforts on the part of Premier Chamberlain to preserve peace and in spite of a resolve, when peace was hopeless, to wage war, the British people thought that Chamberlain had let the time had come for a change of leadership. Even then there was no compulsion for Mr. Chamberlain to resign. He could have hung on to office if he so desired, but rather than do so against the people's will, he resigned to make way for a man deemed better suited to the task in hand.

In Germany the government has been kept in power by all sorts of methods including coercion, intimidation, persecution and imprisonment of those who dare raise their voices against it. No doubt there is a fair degree of unity within the central areas of Germany now the country is engaged in a life and death struggle. But this unity was brought about in a manner that will leave no happy memories. Hitler and his immediate associates are tyrannical masters of men. Chamberlain and his immediate associates are servants of men.

Today it is Churchill who is at the helm. Put there by the united demands of a politically free people. And it is quite safe to say that the steel forged by the choice of a free people is quite as strong, quite as sharp and more lasting than that forged on the anvils of intimidation, persecution and imprisonment.

War And Wheat Prices

The effect of the present war on wheat prices will depend largely upon its duration. The experience of the past has been that wheat prices rise and decline a seasonal advance during short wars.

Most European governments have been carefully piling up reserves and encouraging wheat growing within their own boundaries in anticipation of the present war. If Europe hostilities are confined to the present if there is no interference with ordinary importations, there will be no wheat shortage on that continent.

It was towards the close of the Great War that wheat prices rose to zenith. A prolonged war would result in the using up of reserves and the slowing down of wheat production because so many men are in the armies.

In 1864 a ten months war was fought between Prussia and Denmark for possession of the provinces of Schleswig and Holstein. Wheat advanced from $1.20 to $1.28 per bushel in anticipation of that war, but actually declined during the war to $1.10 a bushel.

In 1866 when Prussia fought Austria the war lasted from June to August and wheat prices rose from $1.37 to $1.68 a bushel, but were back to $1.30 by the time the war was over. The Franco-Prussian war lasted from July, 1870 to February 1871. Within a month from the start wheat prices rose from $1.38 to $1.71 a bushel, and then declined to $1.35, afterwards rising again to $1.56 when Russia broke the Black Sea Treaty and trouble was threatening in Italy. Peace was signed in February, 1871, and then wheat was selling at $1.46 a bushel in Liverpool.

French Lad Makes Long Trip Alone

Drumheller, Alta. May 3:—A young French fourteen-year-old boy, arrived in Drumheller by Canadian National recently, had travelled alone from northern France to meet his father for the first time. He was Desire Lagrange, whose father had left France before the boy was born.

In the part of France from which Desire came from he saw few French soldiers ready for battle as that area was occupied by British. The young lad picked up a few English words while mingling with the soldiers. On arrival here someone asked him how he liked Hitler. "I used to like him right," was his reply.

Old Anchor Comes To Surface

Vancouver, May 3:—Apparently having been in the water for 30 or more years, the old anchor which draws to the surface recently near the Canadian National Steamships docks here. The old anchor became entangled with a modern hook from a trim freighter. The Vancouver Harbor Board sent a small floating crane to the scene and the entangled pair from the new and landed it at a nearby pier. Badly corroded with all distinguishing marks soiled away, it weighs about three tons.

Guernsey evidently is anxious to make this war a short one, but it will only be shortened by Germany's defeat. As that country has made elaborate preparations for war, it may take several years before she is beaten down.

Fate Of A U-Boat

(By Tuffail)

This spectacular story of the sinking of a U-boat which attached a convoy, given a vivid picture of the war at sea.

An escort vessel was in company with a convoy. The weather was hazy, a strong following wind and sea, and at daylight three ships of the convoy had lost touch with the others. Soon after ten in the morning there was thick fog, and about an hour later one of the steamers in the convoy a neutral, was torpedoed.

The explosion was seen and heard from the escort vessel, which at once went on to full speed and steered for the position of the submarine. After a few minutes definite contact was obtained with the Asrtic, that wonderful instrument which has been given to us "unspeakable fingers grop the bottom the surface of the sea."

Presently a depth charge was dropped ahead. It was seen for a moment in the clear water, then it became hazy and remained in sight for at least twenty seconds, and only 150 yards ahead. One can imagine the supressed excitement at giggling the depth charge set under the sea was conducted using four of the best officers were received from English service. Baking Beans That Can Be Grown

(Experimental Farm News)

According to statistics, Canada annually imports large quantities of threshed beans for culinary purposes, while according to experimental results at the Dominion Experimental Station, Southern, several varieties of high quality baking beans can be grown successfully every year. In view of the above situation, many farmers in the west could well devote an acre or two to such a crop. Failing a good market price, it would make good stock feed, states F. V. Hutton, Superintendent, Dominion Experimental Station, Southern, Saskatchewan.

Dry shell beans have been tested for many years and two or three varieties have shown themselves to be superior due to early maturity and yield. This year, as to most seasons in the past, Norwegian, a light brown bean, has demonstrated its yield and earliness among the named varieties, of all of course of instruction in English-French vocabulary. A large supply of them have been shipped to Robert England, B.C., R.A., Legion's Overseas Director of Education, at Aldershot, and others have been sent to French instructors for distribution in the various Military Districts throughout Canada.

A statement received by national headquarters of the C.L.W.S. shows that, of all courses of instruction being given the study of French is most popular among the men. In the Aldershot Area Command, in response to a questionnaire, 2,500 applications were received from English-speaking Canadians for classes in the French language and 500 applications from French-Canadians desiring to learn English. Legion Handbooks Helps Canadians To "Parlez-vous"

Ottawa, May 3:— Canada's fighting men who have enrolled in the Canadian Legion War Services' education program should be able to "parlez-vous" by the time this war is over.

Upwards of 4,000 men are attending French classes in Canada and England, and to facilitate their efforts the Legion has issued a 65-page handbook containing hundreds of questions and answers they are not likely to encounter in France. The booklet published in collaboration with the Canadian Association for Adult Education, also contains an extensive English-French vocabulary. A large supply of them have been shipped to Robert England, R.C., R.A., Legion's Overseas Director of Education, at Aldershot, and others have been sent to French instructors for distribution in the various Military Districts throughout Canada.

A Valuable Pamphlet

A pamphlet of 55 pages has just been issued by the Alberta Wheat Pool from its Calgary office that tells the story of wheat. In fact its title is just that. From an educational standpoint I have seen nothing of this nature more complete or more accurate. Compressed into the smallest possible space, with no sacrifice of accuracy, the pamphlet contains everything the average man ought to know about the most valuable product contribution the west has to make to the world. Concerning with an appropriate word for agriculture, the number of all world colours, it proceeds with the origin of wheat, its growth in favor as a food by civilized peoples, the progress of farm mechanization, the contribution of science to wheat growing, what relation fall means to wheat, world wheat acreage, Canada's wheat contribution, wheat in the west, quality wheat, how Canada handles wheat, the three former wells, wheat grading, its transportation, the grain exchange and criticism of it, producer co-operation in Western Canada, the 1914-18 war and post-war periods, start of the pool movement and its objective and operations in the 1929 crash, government stabilization, the 1938 wheat board, royal grain commission, international wheat agreement, the Regina conference, Western Canada's production, wheat policy trends, Canada's farm policy, and statistical and pictorial sections. If there is anything more complete I don't know about it. It is a pamphlet that should be listed in supplementary school reading courses.—The Observer, The Calgary Herald.

HASTINGS LAKE

The Winona Club met at Mrs. Fontaine's last Thursday. Mrs. Fontaine and Mrs. J. Lindberg were put on the visiting committee and their duties will be to visit and send fruit to the sick and shut-ins of the district. Plans for the picnic on May 24th were settled and plans for the strawberry festival to be held in June were discussed. The Red Cross work was gathered in and new supplies were distributed. This ended the business part of the meeting.

The second half of the meeting was by far the merriest, being a party in honor of Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. A. Donald whose birthdays fall in May, and it was a birthday party with all the trimmings right down to the big birthday cake and the fortune. The lucky ones received a lovely gift of china from the club. Mrs. A. Donald was the oldest lady and Mrs. Bramingham the youngest. As May 26 has been declared as a national day of prayer it is hoped a large number will turn out to hear Mr. Layton, the student who is conducting those services.

Five members of the Rosie W. C. T.U. local attended the Diocesan Convention in Edmonton on April 30 and May 1st. It was their first Convention they were all ages and sizes. They were much impressed by the friendliness of the delegates and their whole hearted devotion to the temperance cause. Most of these delegates were gray-haired. We would like to see more young Christian women take an interest in this temperance question.

Holden Division School Festival Grand Success

After suffering the disappointment of a postponement from May 2 to May 9, the School Music Festival had at Tofield on Monday was a grand success. Favored by splendid weather, hundreds and hundreds of children were brought to town to take part in an event for which they had been training for some long time. To pick out special numbers is really a hard task, there were so many of them, but we believe special mention could be made of the Viking school band, which, only five in number, gave a performance, but because it was the style combination of its kind present. HEARTS WALKING

Mrs. Harry Pugh Smith

Chapter VII

SYNOPSIS

Life grows complicated for the two children of plucky Anne Phillips who, by working in a department store, has supported them since her husband's death. Her married daughter Bernice quarrels with her husband Bill. Jim, the son, is infatuated with Helen Saunders, although Anne suspects that Cathy, the young daughter in the apartment across the hall, is in love with him. Cathy is Anne's youngest daughter, a unhappy love affair with one of Frieda's neglect boys, and insist on believing that she is annoyed over Gordon Ray's interest in Priscilla Leigh. Janet is studying interior decorating at normal school summary classes and is constantly amused by Tony Ryan to help her restore the old Phillips estate which he has bought.

"His name is Tony Ryan, and he was born in Shanty Town. He's employed me to help restore the old place. Incidently he's going to marry Priscilla if he can and I think he can."

"He's in love with her"

"Love!" exclaimed Janet with a cynical laugh. "Now where have I heard that word before"

Her mother flinched. "I don't like to hear you poor at the eternal verities, Janet. If it's Gordon who has disillusioned you, he isn't worth it."

"It isn't only Gordon," said Janet blinking her eyes to drive back the tears. "It's a conclusion of everything." She added uncertainly, "Perhaps it's good for me to have my head pulled down out of the clouds."

"No!" her mother protested. "It's a lovely head, and it was made to brush the stars."

That was before Bernice and Bill came in just as the others were sitting down to the table. "Darling," exclaimed Anne, "how did you know I was wishing for you? You haven't eaten, I hope."

"I'm not hungry," said Bill with a dull flush.

Anne noticed that Bernice ignored his remark quite as if he had not spoken. "Are you sure you have enough to go around?" she asked her mother.

Anne laughed. She and Janet were worrying about setting extra places.

"Bill's had another salary cut," said Bernice, "We thought we'd have to give up the apartment and I was simply sick and all my friends said it was a shame. So May Sheldon called up Guy and he said he could use me as a file clerk or something in his office. The salary isn't large, but it's more than Bill's cut and after all, I had nearly finished my business courses when I stopped to get married."

A dark flush crept to the roots of Bill's black hair. "I think a wife ought to be willing to make the best of her husband's earnings. I suppose that's what it meant when we went through all that for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer stuff."

Bernice glared at him. "You've always thought Mother perfect, and Is she works."

Anne winced. "I've been compelled and to," she said.

The telephone rang and Janet jumped up to answer. "It's for you, Jim," she said.

Jim went into the hall and picked up the receiver. "That you, Phillips?" inquired Howard Leigh. "I have a message for you from Miss Saxbee."

Jim's hand tightened on the edge of the telephone stand. "All right," he said. "Fire."

"She has decided to join her father for a cruise on his yacht."

Jim's heart felt like an exposed nerve. "So what?"

"We're leaving at midnight for New Orleans. I'm invited to go along."

"Think of that!" said Jim with a block laugh.

"It seems she owes you for a golf lesson. You can send the bill to me."

"And you can step to hell," said Jim banging up the receiver.

He was scowling when he returned to the table. Something in the set of his lips forbade questions as he jerked out out his chair and sat down again.

July that year ran true to form. Torrid days with pavements sizzly under the glaring sun were followed by sultry nights when the leaves in the trees hung motionless.

Jack McCall removed to his duties at the golf club and Jim went back to his regular position as judge fetcher's office. Apparently Jim was his or so he had ever been — carefree, steady, level-headed. He worked nearly every night, study or no going over hotels. Even during such evening he romped with Daisy, Lester Jim drove Cathy every to the night club. Sometimes he stayed at the office late enough to bring her home. If he had suffered a wound, he did nothing Only his mother's eyes could have detected the faint lines that tightened about Jim's mouth and eyes she could not be certain of his unhappiness.

In the same fashion Anne had no accurate guess for her anxiety in regard to Bernice. She seemed more contented after she began working in Guy Shelton's office. Her mother thought it a good thing for Bernice to have been given the time off from her bills and sophisticated women friends and Anne was positive that was why Bill had yielded the point. To Janet also these days had come a shinier quality, like the dead calm preceding the hurricane. Nevertheless, the work on Tony Ryan's house was progressing apace.

Mr. Busby was a short, stocky, middle-aged man and a fine workman. She was selfconscious the first afternoon she reported to Mr. Busby at the Radcliffe home.

"As near as I can make out, you're the count of lost rouet," he said. "If there's any doubt in my mind about how to go ahead I'm to rust your memory."

He took it for granted that she would be on hand every afternoon from two to five.

Janet was eager to know if their employer was pleased so far as they had gone, but Mr. Busby volunteered no information and, in view of Tony Ryan's attitude toward herself, Janet was determined to betray no interest in the man. He never came near the Radcliffe place while she was there. Janet thought she understood the pointed way in which she was being ignored. Priscilla was a jealous goddess. She demanded undivided attention. Once during a lazy July Janet avoided her old crowd she did from time to time see some one of them on the street. The advertising topic of their conversation was Priscilla Leigh's crush on Tony Ryan.

Ella was startled one afternoon on entering out the great bay window of the master bedroom, to discover a young woman sitting on the broad window seat. She was looking over a bored wire which her prism had replaced the wide gaps between the big house and the cotton fields behind it.

Janet ran down the lush stairway which took in both cotton fields and woods to the east and south.

"Mr. Tony 'how he going to have the finest stock farm in de hull country," announced the small darky with a broad smile, "and I ain't never knowed him to make a mess of nothing he started." I'm Deke, Miss. Maybe, Mr. Tony done told you about me."

She shook her head. "I'm merely an employee here."

"I was a jockey, Miss, before I got jammed at the quarter and cracked my ankle I growed up in Kentucky and I don't know nothing 'cept horses, but you can't ride a horse with a bum foot. I guess I'd have died out on the sidewalk in New York if I hadn't run across Mr. Tony."

He glanced over his shoulder at the rambling farmhouse which stood on the slope of hill where the fields met the woods. Janet frowned. A couple of men were sitting on a scaffolding at the side, leisurely applying whitewash.

"Dat's Rafe and the Earl of Jersey," volunteered Deke.

One afternoon Janet discovered more activity near the rear wing of the estate, and when the mansion down to investigate she found a large concrete mixer in operation. On pointing the new plumb gains while the Radcliffe man in worn towels directed proceedings.

"How do you do, Miss Phillips?" he murmured. He had an impeccable British accent and a monocle and one of the tiniest and most civilized faces she had ever seen.

"Evening, Miss," mumbled the man outside the p.d.

Again Janet st cted.

"Good mind, Earl," said the little Englishman quietly. "I remember when he was a super physical specimen. Now he's a little shak in essential awareness, but quite have a good mind. Rafe Jersey is not scarcely force his way through his shakiness. Tony Ryan came across Rafe few years ago in the breadline, then Rafe has fared very well.

"Mr. Ryan is unreasonably unaggressive to discover that a man in whom he has confidence has no use for good but, it would appear, at the moment serving grass.

"Also I supposed to deduce that Tony Ryan is an incognito Santa Claus, or an heir?" she suggested.

The Englishman shrugged his narrow shoulders. "In spite of Tony's kindest efforts to elude his obligation, wouldn't you say it takes a somewhat altruistic nature to invest in a farm and a farmhouse in order to provide a home and a decent livelihood for several fellow beings who are to a degree human wreckage?"

"Modest in one word I never connected with Mr. Ryan," was Janet's world comment.

The Englishman renewed his nerve shoeblack

The regular meeting of the U.F.W.A. was held in the Community hall on Thursday afternoon, May 16th, with a good crowd attended, and had their meeting adjourned to meet again on June 6th.

It really takes something to detain the members and prevent their gathering, but the same old questions of roads, coupled with wash-outs, bridges, etc., really decided them to cancel the April meeting.

The May meeting was held at the home of Mrs C R Barchard. Owing to the rush of belated Spring work, the attendance was not as large as usual.

Roll call was answered by naming a flower with some initial letter as in a members name.

"People and Customs of Denmark" was the timely and interesting topic of a paper by Mrs A. N. Jones.

Mrs Tree Moen read a commendable bulletin on horticulture.

The annual summer conference is to be held in Lamont this year, on June 4th. It is hoped that a number of members from Tofield will be able to attend.

Please note that the June regular Tea & Sale of Work will be held on the FIRST instead of the SECOND Thursday in June. This will enable us to have Rev. Banner from Central office, and our own director, Miss Lathlean, present with us, while they are in the district for the convention.

Remember, then, next meeting on June 6 at the home of Mrs. Elmer Moen Visitors welcome.

W.C.T.U.

The Burdo Local of the W.C.T.U. held their monthly meeting at the Church Basement on Wednesday May 8th.

The attendance owing to the busy season was not what one would like to have but nevertheless a good meeting was held. We had the pleasure of having Rev. and Mrs. Rude of Armena with us as visitors.

Meeting opened by singing of hymn and Devotion led by Mrs. Arthur Moon. There followed a short period of prayer. The delegates Mrs. I. B. Soon and Mrs. M Finseth gave reports from the District convention of the W.C.T.U. held in Edmonton April 30th and May 1st. Mrs. Hendrickson and Mrs. F. Lorbechan also spoke briefly on the convention. All delegates spoke very highly of the hospitality extended to them by the Edmonton ladies. In a short discussion that followed it was decided that Temperance work should be brought in closer contact with the work of the church. Let all W.C.T.U. members and all Mother's join and do some good, another topic was that the province will not have a net work of taverns and beer parlors through the country. Any one who has been across the Boundary line to the south can vouch as what conditions will be when liquor control becomes a fact. Let us all be busy and do some away with entirely. Can we do anything or will it be true what has been said a writer. "That most of us regard citizenship as a privilege which is peculiarly and inalienably ours by virtue of our doing nothing at all but being born."

Hay Lake School nett ball team took a stinging defeat of 8-14 from Thorsberg'old School team last Tuesday.

The majority of the farmers around here have finished seeding their wheat and they're hoping now for more sun and rain with less wind.

The Hay Lake baseball team is being organized for their entry in the local league. A number of last years juniors have now been promoted to the senior team.

A factory is being constructed in town for the manufacturing of a new type of louver-board. The Owner is C. Holm.

The comparative wetness in the soil this year has been a safeguard against any fire spreading in this district this year.

LINDBROOK

Once again we appear in print, now that the delayed spring rush is over, maybe there will be a little more happening and so more news to report.

The weather here a week or so ago was wet and chilly, but last week it went rain-tropical and the workers on the land went around in a cloud of dust, looking like ghosts, and could only have fancied themselves in Dixieland.

The mosquitoes sure put on a real "blitzkrieg" coming in swarms, thank goodness they don't carry bombs or machine guns!

We hear a lot of talk these days of war and its problems, but it looks as if any effort of the farmer makes here results in a formidable surplus of his product, i.e. bugs, bottles, wheat etc; hence lower prices to him, so that he cannot afford to contribute much to the war effort financially; it looks like that a lot of farmers who possess above qualifications would be better employed in those directions where their work would be of more use, just now producing plenum. tanks etc. instead of piling up food stuffs that swamp the market.

Miss Gladys Lissimore of Wainwright was a guest at the Brandsgiobb home here last week.

Mrs. Stan Smith, (nee Miss Gladys Weatherill) left on Sunday for B.C. to join her husband there. We all wish the young couple the best of luck and happiness in their new home and the start of a long and happy life together.

The Farmer's Lament

Under its spreading hopeless debts
The Farmer's homestead stands;
Its lord a mournful man is he
As he ploughs his mortgaged lands,
For the laws that take his cream and cake
Are strong as iron bands.

His face is thin and long and grim,
And burnt like Pharoah's bricks;
His brow is wet with honest sweat,
His shins are blue with kicks.
His toes are bent and crumpled up
From kicking at the pricks.

Week in, week out, from morn 'til night
He toils to keep food cheap;
He pinches and he hoards and saves his plants
For someone else to reap;
And the only time he owns his soul
Is when he is asleep.

His children stay away from school
To hoe his noxious weeds,
Although they know they cannot earn
Sufficient for their needs;
They thrive to slap the vicious burr
Before the rascal seeds.

He goes on Sunday to the yards
With his little girls and boys,
And they rejoice to hear his voice
And the language he employs
When a cranky heifer plants a kick
On a spot where it annoys.

Toiling and moiling and labouring
Onward through life he goes;
He hopes to work for all he's worth
Till his creditors foreclose;
Then in six feet odd of earth
Enjoy a long repose.

Starring Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, John Carradine and others. Additional entertainment includes cartoon comedy and news reel.

The new series of quiz nights commenced last Tuesday. Stan Grover's name was called but Stan was too busy fixing somebody's car that night. MUNICIPAL NOTES

There is still a quantity of forage Crop seed to be parked up by those who have ordered it. The best time to plant seed is between June 1st and 15th Will those who have seed on order please call for same.

The 1940 tax notices will be mailed this week. There is ten per cent discount given on current taxes if paid on or before July 31st, 1940.

In order to obtain the discount all arrears must be paid up. It is not possible to allow a discount on current taxes where there are arrears outstanding.

By taking advantage of the ten per cent discount, ratepayers not only make the municipality but save money for themselves.

Paying taxes probably never will be made entirely painless. But the least painful method is to pay them quickly and save the ten per cent discount.

In the list of accounts published last month, an error occurred. It stands by making every effort to attend this most important meeting.

HEARTS WALKING

Chapter VIII

SYNOPSIS

Life grows complicated for the children of lucky Anne Phillips who, by working in a department store, has supported them since her husband's death. Her married daughter, Bernice, quarrels with her husband Bill Jim, Anne's son, is infatuated with the rich Helen Sanders, although Anne suspects that Cathy, the widowed little dancer in the apartment across the hall, is in love with him. And Janet, Anne's younger daughter, is unhappy because her well-to-do friends neglect her and insist on believing she is annoyed over her old friend Gordon Kay's attentions to Priscilla Leigh. Janet is studying interior decorating and is commissioned by Tony Ryan to help him restore the old Phillips estate, which he has bought. A negro and Englishman working there tell her of Tony's kindness.

By the last week in July Mr. Bunby was next to finished at the Radcliffe house. There were only the lawns ends to be tended to. Janet began unwisely to wonder what would happen next. She had decided on entirely what furnishings the old mansion required. She had the names of dealers and prices at her tongue's end, as well as nearly put down in a slender red notebook for Tony Ryan's consideration.

Duke had been engaged for several days in carefully weeding out the flower beds at the sides of the Radcliffe mansion. It was work at which he could sit down if his leg troubled him. The business of pruning the vines and cutting the heavy shrubbery was to be left to Rafe under the supervision of the Earl of Jersey, so Duke said.

"Mr. Tony knows that I can't stretched out her hand to talk up the hands as surplus," chortled Duke, but he promised to skin me alive if I missed any weeds in these here flower beds. Mr. Tony can't stand nothing slovenly."

Janet's lips curled. "He expects you to earn your keep, does he?"

"Ya'as."

"There's nothing like being able to eat your cake and have it too," she remarked. "I mean, it isn't everyone who can make a beautiful gesture pay."

"Ya'as," agreed Duke doubtfully.

He had no idea what she was talking about, but the man who had come up behind her knew "I've seen the skids put under too many Good Time Charlies to let that happen to me, said Tony Ryan in a hard voice.

Janet turned with a little gasp. He had come through the rear gate. Under the dark hat of fine linen cheeks was a red glow like the dusky flush on a poppy vase.

"I'd like if possible to have the house ready for occupancy by the twentieth of August," he said. "Please buy what you think the house needs and have them send the bills to me," he said crisply.

She winced, and her old antagonism flared up. "The price is no object, naturally?" she asked.

He gave her a curious glance. "I want the best."

Theoretically, after she had been busy at the office for eight hours, Bernice should have been satisfied to stay quietly at home with Bill at night, only it had not worked out that way. She was generally tired by five and more and more inclined to feel sorry for herself because her friends had been doing nothing all day except play bridge or otherwise amuse themselves. She formed the habit of stopping in at one of their apartments after work. Usually the Bunch was together somewhere having cocktails. They encouraged her to join them.

When she came into the apartment that afternoon Bill was alarming things around in the kitchen. He "Hello," he said without looking up, his face like a thunder-cloud.

"Hullo," said Bernice coldly, going into the dressing room to put her hat and gloves away.

The living room sounded clearing of cigarette butts and scattered newspapers.

"Come and get it," called Bill from the diner.

"Have you thought any more of going to the Fair with the bunch?" she asked after a while.

"For Pete's sake," he protested, "what is there to think about? I can't afford a jaunt like that and you know it!"

She meant to be generous, her heart was full of tenderness when she said, "I have money enough in the bank to pay our expenses to the Fair, Bill, if you'll go."

He started to his feet so violently she dropped her fork. "What are you trying to make out of me—" he cried in a tortured voice. "A gigolo?"

Bernice's cheeks flamed. "It's like you to be that unjust," she said, "How it occurred to you that after I've punctured the typewriter from nine to five I'm not exactly in the mood to be shouted at the end of the night!" she demanded.

Bill's mouth tightened. "Maybe you think I'm crazy about coming home to this sort of thing when I've tramped the streets all day trying to sell advertising!"

"Is that why you're not as hot as it—" she asked stangingly.

He picked his hat up from where he had flung it on the lowest step. He did not glance back as he jerked open the door and banged it behind him. Bernice stood very still, listening to his retreating steps. Suppose Bill did not come back!

She had a longing to run to her mother, to hide her head in Anne's lap as she had done as a child if she had had a nightmare or had been frightened of something. For had Bernice's round childish chin hardened. "All right," she said, "I'll cover you down stairs as soon as I can climb into my best silk."

When Bernice bit herself back into the apartment a little later after two Bill was there asleep in his side of the bed.

She closed the dressing room door cautiously before she started to undress. Her hands were not quite steady and her eyes were not seeing correctly. That was how she happened to put Bill's dinner jacket over one of her own in the chiffonier. That was why she did not at once recognize the color of nearly out part of three which lay on Bill's pile of handkerchiefs. The bottom one had been running a contest for eight weeks. Each day they published a picture puzzle. There was a grand prize of five thousand dollars and a second of a thousand and a third of five hundred and forty of five dollars each. Bernice had never dreamed of winning, but Bill was working on them the pictures painstakingly pursuled out and entered in Bill's small cramped printing. Bernice's heart sank.

He had secured duplicates of each puzzle so that the set he finally sent in should be his own. Bernice knew the once he had worked from. They were almost cluttered where he had written in and then rubbed out and rewritten his answers. In spots the cheap rag paper had been worn through in holes from his patient erasure.

"Oh, poor Bill!" Bernice whispered to herself.

For all the pictures were torn in half and in the waste paper basket beside the chiffonier lay the rest of the newspaper. Bernice picked it up with shaking hands. There were the names of the winning contestants.

The winner of the grand prize headed them all in large block letters, the second in smaller type, the third in still smaller print, and at the bottom the inconspicuous column of forty who received five dollars each.

Bernice's trembling finger ran down the list. Bill had not received a prize, not any at all. His name did not appear anywhere on the page. Bernice felt an anguish of pity. She knew why Bill had entered five thousand dollars, why he had sketched at this feature logo to save his self-respect, but he had failed.

"Oh, Bill!" whispered Bernice crawling into bed beside him and putting her arm across him.

But even in his sleep he flinched away from her.

Gradually the stately old house began to take on a gracious and gleaming aspect. Workmen came and went, scouting developed a satin sheen, in the dining room a Sheraton table and white leather chairs, chairs rested on a hand-woven blue rug. Upstairs, in the bedrooms of bedrooms in which there were mahogany four poster beds and chaise lounges and down covered chaise lounges.

"Almost finished," breathed Janet one sultry afternoon toward the middle of August. The summer I get away from here the better. The first thing I know I'll be breaking down and crying like a baby. I'm so tired."

A man stood at the foot of the stairs. "I'm sorry," he said. "I didn't mean to startle you."

Janet's right arm, thin for his height. He looked to be about forty-five and his expensively tailored suit was a little sharp at the seams.

"You are Miss Phillips, of course," he went on. "I'm Steve Hill, a neighbor of Tony's. He's done me a great service by being alive."

The next afternoon he was in the library when she arrived, sitting on the window seat and looking across the leaves of an exceptionally fine copy of Tristan and Isolde.

"Allah be praised, you don't buy books for the color of their binding's!" he said.

Janet stared at him critically as he looked on. He did not sound like a man who was cultured and well-educated, but he had the Earl of Jersey, Steve Hill had a sensitive mobile face, and he seemed to have read everything worth reading and to have seen everything worth seeing and to know everything worth knowing.

"Why, Mr. Hill, glancing at the title at its watch, "I'm afraid I've bored you."

She discovered with an unprofessional start that they had been sitting there for an hour while Steve Hill charmed her with the gently antiseptic flow of his conversation. "No," she said, "you haven't bored me. I doubt if you ever bored anyone in your life."

The dismay in his mouth twisted with pain. "I failed lamentably with the one audience in the world which matters to me." he said and walked quickly away as if a horde of tormenting memories had risen to assail him.

But he was back again the next afternoon. Janet was hanging pictures.

"Wedding's lacking," she told Steve Hill, "except the portrait of my grandmother which is in our living room at home. It belongs here, commanding the whole house", she insisted he was not entirely sure of the staircase and the entrance to the library. Her sliding could persuade us to part with it."

He laughed unctiously. "There are quite a few pictures at the end of the auction block unless it's a matter of the right hand. At least we've managed to cut without pawning grandmother." His regarded him demandingly. "A lot of masculine interest, eh, what? as the Earl of Jersey would say."

Steve Hill smiled. "There was a time when I thought I'd outgrown the old gods, but that's entirely a phase, you know. In the end you realize that life without sentiment is a thin with, wet bouquet."

She caught her breath. "I'd like you to know my mother," she said, and blushed because until then she had not known she approved of him to that extent. "Would you like to go home with me tonight to dinner? It'll be informal. We live in a flat and we can't entertain on an elaborate scale, but Mother's the only person I know of in this town who could talk to you about books and philosophy and poetry and hold her own. You see, she grew up in a library like this."

"I'd be delighted," he said.

OIL AND THE WAR—

THE INVASION of Poland, the submarine campaign, the invasion of Denmark and Norway, the blitzkreig on the western front, and the capitulation of the King of Belgium, are all phases of the war. Other phases include the mastery of the submarine campaign, the battle of the River Platte, the rescue of the Altmark prisoners, the capture of Narvik. All of these, important enough in themselves, if we exclude the mastery of the submarine campaign, are not deciding factors. What they amount to at the best are points scored for or against the belligerents. Warring nations do not cease fighting and give in because of temporary setbacks. On the contrary, these tend to strengthen resolve and increase effort. The factors which do bring about victory are superiority of men and supplies, plus strategic advantages and good generalship. Of the three, in modern warfare, superiority of supplies, which includes everything, is probably the most important. No matter how valiant an army may be, if it has not everything at the time it needs it, it is at a terrible disadvantage when pitted against one which has. This has been made quite plain in the last two weeks. Despite heroic resistance of land forces on the part of the Allies, Germany, by numerical superiority in the air, particularly as regards the "Stuka" bomber, has been able to make astounding progress. While the Allied air forces have done marvellous work, have machine for machine and man for man proved themselves superior, they were opposed to a numerical strength that was formidable. Observers of the blitzkreig of the past two weeks lay special stress on the damaging effect of the advance bombers of the German push. In many respects it took the form of an artillery barrage. Those who observed the "push" while admitting the force of flame throwing and other kinds of tanks, claim the bombing plane was the chief instrument responsible for the advance of the German hordes.

However, this type of warfare has its disadvantages. It is terribly costly in men and materials, particularly oil. Its chief value lies in a quick decision—a knock out blow. This kind of blow was, with all the foul trimmings administered in Poland, southern Norway, Denmark, Holland and apparently Belgium. It is not to be expected that the blitzkreig will last indefinitely, the very meaning of the word forbids this, but one thing is sure every day it does last, Germany expends much valuable motor fuel and lubricating oil. During a blitzkreig, quite likely during ordinary war days, Germany uses more gasolene and lubricating oil than she can obtain, hence her stocks gradually become smaller and smaller until her vast mechanized army is rendered futile through lack of fuel and lubricating oil. How soon this will be the people, if any, know. Germany's sources of supply are fairly well known, even the consumption is subject to an intelligent guess. But it should be remembered Germany has been deliberately preparing for this war for a number of years and in consequence has in storage large quantities of almost everything necessary. We read, long before the war, reports of a visitor being shown "miles" of cheeses in storage. Therefore what is not definitely known is the amount of lubricating oil and gasolene stored in Germany before the war. Expert opinion seem to favor figures like these. Present expenditure of oil by Germany, 12,000,000 tons a year. Source of supply from within Germany, 2,800,000 tons; from Rumania & Russia 1,650,000 tons, a total of 4,500,000 tons. This makes quite a gap to be filled by stocks in storage. These figures are not expected to be accurate to the last thousand tons, but they do show conclusively that Germany is using more motor fuel and lubrication than she is obtaining and it is only a question of time before the highly mechanized forces will be slowed up, if not entirely stopped by lack of fuel and lubrication.

In contrast, the sea lanes to the Allies are still open, and each week goes by, the Allies become closer and closer to parity with Germany as regards planes of all kinds, ammunition, guns, tanks, etc. And as more time passes, due to their access to world markets, the Allies will gradually take the lead.

Tables Are Turned

A young lady schoolteacher was recently stopped in Detroit for driving through a red light and given a ticket calling for her appearance in traffic court the following Monday. She went at once to the judge, told him that she had to be at her classes then, and asked for the immediate disposal of her case.

"So," said the judge sternly, "you're a school teacher. That's fine. Now," he thundered, "you sit right down at that table over there and write 'I went through a stop sign five hundred times."—Maclean's Magazine.

The Week in Edmonton

May 27.—Fifth columnists will receive short shrift in Alberta, according to an announcement made by Premier Aberhart this week. Commenting on recent illegal decision that communists are an illegal body and on recent developments in the growing feeling against subversive activities, Mr. Aberhart said "we have no place for them here." He promised full aid to the National Defence body in rooting out and suppression of enemy agents.

******

Meanwhile, popular feeling jelled with the British Legion bodies whose expressed opinions have awakened Canada to the danger as her added. There is no doubt that before any possible danger could strike at Canada, the nation will be prepared to deal with Trojan horsemen, if any are still at liberty. As one indignant citizen expressed himself this week, "if Canada is attacked, the prayer files for the fifth column is the obituary column."

******

Resignation of George Weydzik, recently elected social credit M.L.A. for Vegreville, is announced by Premier Aberhart. A bi-election has been called for June 17. Returning officer is E. Low, provincial Treasurer, will run for the seat. Defeated in the last election, Mr. Low has been carrying on his duties in the Legislative Building since that time. Political observers believe that Mr. Low will receive an acclamation, in view of local opinion that previous opposition to his candidature is preferable to its opposite number.

******

Fires which broke out at Swift's packing plant and the Edmonton stockyards are being investigated here by the Edmonton fire department, officially fought by Edmonton firefighters. Citizens were apprehensive of subversive activities, but police believed otherwise.

******

Disclosure that the boys of the Edmonton regiment now in England will soon be home to attend the Northwestern Canadian when the order to return was received has created widespread interest in the capital city. Added to this a certain pride in the announcement that the fighting 49th has been described as Canada's crack regiment. Reports are that the Canadian fighting men overseas are bursting with energy and keen to have a smack at the invading hordes across the North Sea.

Alberta's Agricultural extension has a new branch under the supervision of Mrs. Hazel Pes. Known as the Alberta Modern Farm Home Association, the branch has as its objects the bringing of modern home appliances to farms throughout the Province. Branches will be formed as fast as they are requested, says Mrs. Pes, and by means of mass buying through the Alberta Marketing Board great reductions in the cost of home appliances are anticipated.

******

Fears of an influx of subversive elements during the coming tourist year have been set aside by the announcement that Ottawa authorities intend to supervise all border traffic a function which is at present carried out by individual provinces. With the Dominion government conducting a survey for tourists arriving in Canada from foreign exchange—so necessary for war purposes—it is apparent that adequate measures for control of the tourist will also be carried out by the Dominion.

NOTEWORTHY NOTES

This year, for the first time, the Provincial Department of Agriculture has stationed Home Demonstrators at certain points in the province to provide instruction and demonstrations in Home Economics during the summer months for the women in the district. These services of Miss Lilla M. L. Miles will be available in the territory between Clairvia, Tofield, Vegreville, Lloydminster and Chauvin. Any women's organizations desiring the service should write to her at the School of Agriculture, Vermilion, as soon as possible to arrange a visit when time and circumstances permit.

******

The past winter was evidently severe for raspberry bushes which have left accordingly. In many gardens all the canes which would have borne fruit this year have died. Any new growth is coming from the roots and will not bear fruit until next year. But where the bushes were best cover and covered with just enough earth to hold them down during the winter months is little sign of winter-killing and prospects for an abundant crop of fruit are very good. Experts of the School of Agriculture have shown that the best time to start the work of covering the canes in the fall pays good dividends in fruit the following season.

******

Before very long various insects may be expected to launch an attack on berry bushes and shrubs as well as other plants of the gardens. For control of insects which eat the foliage, a spray of Paris Green, Hellebore or Arsenate of Lead in a soapy water solution may be used. Bordeaux mixture sprays are used to control the anthracnose fungus which causes blotches on the leaves and canes. Spraying should be done in the early morning or late evening when the bees are not working on the flowers. Dusting with sulphur, obtainable with directions at drug stores, is most effective.

******

The control of weeds is one of the principal purposes of a summer fallow and can only be achieved where a proper tillage program is put into effect. Many annual weeds are already growing while large numbers of weed seeds lying on the surface of stubble land must be cultivated before they can be destroyed. A light surface cultivation immediately is most important. This would destroy the present weed growth and at the same time cover weed seeds on the surface enough to start them growing. Then, a month later, deeper tillage with a plow or one-way would be most effective.

A novel infection commonly known as "june-oil" annually causes a heavy loss in young fowls. As a precaution against the disease on the Demonstration Farm at Vermilion the novel cord of each newly born fowl is painted dark with ordinary Tincture of Iodine. When the fowl is one day old and again three days later it is inoculated with a serum known as "Bo Bill". This treatment, obtainable at druggists at cost approximately fifty cents per fowl and is good insurance.

STILL ORTHODOX—

Ottawa.—Canada's war effort will be limited "only by our strength and capacity," Hon J. L. Ralston, Minister of Finance told the House of Commons recently. "Every true Canadian will approve the principle of not buy little but how much." The minister was seeking authority to expend $700,000,000 on war operations during the current fiscal year. He explained the policy was still pay as we go. "Taxation will be our first method," said the minister, "then we will borrow whatever amounts we must raise in that way." Expanding credit by the Bank of Canada was not mentioned.

IN THE QUAINT BOOK OF THE 16th CENTURY

In 300 years the art of brewing became an important industry in England. First in the 13th century brewing became known through waters of Burton on the Trent. Of the many books on the subject of Beer, one in particular deserves special mention. In 1573, H. Knarst published a work in five volumes at Eerfurt which he entitle: "On the Divine Noble Gift, the Philosophical High dear and Wonderous Art to Brewing Beer."

Mr. John Wesley wife left for Norway last fall had secured a position as a teacher in a school near Riverton.

Since the Nazi attack on Norway no word has been received from him. Saturday May 18th a cablegram came to Mrs. Westby saying he was well and was in Sweden. The town of Riverton along with a number of other villages and towns in Norway has been destroyed. Many homes here are anxiously awaiting news from relatives.

Mr. Johnson & Son of Viking are contractors for the new school in Grand Forks B. D. Work has started and Ezra Yeder, Fred Hostetler and Eddy Steen have also been helping at times.

The new building at being built on the corner of the S. Kaufman farm on the site where the Lewis family home used to stand. It is to be of lumber and local Brick Veneer. Plans call for classroom, library and teacher's room, activity room and kitchen on main floor. A full basement underneath to contain furnace and fuel rooms, cloak rooms, toilets and laundry. The old school which is located on Mr. Rode's land was built in 1902 and has served the district 37 years.

Wheat seeding is finished and the majority has their oats in. A good shower of rain would be welcome although fields are coming along nicely.

Among those who attended L. D. R. and W. M. P. convention in Viking were Mrs. Geo. Hendrickson, Mrs. Hazlehehl, Mrs. Ingvald Vos, Mabel Asamor and several others.

BUTTER UP—

Canadian Red Cross ALBERTA DIVISION

The Alberta Division has received an urgent wire from National Headquarters of the Canadian Red Cross Society stating that Surgical Dressings, bandages, bedgowns, towels, pyjamas, sheets, pillow cases, and refugee clothing are urgently needed

All groups are asked to send to Divisional Headquarters, every completed garment they have at once, as at present we are shipping daily.

National Headquarters advise that as there are a great number of refugees flocking into France, the French Red Cross Society has tremendous need for blankets. They inform us that there are only a comparatively small number of blankets purchasable in Canada. They propose making a National Appeal for the receiving by each Branch throughout Canada, of good blankets for Overseas use.

Donations of new blankets will be very acceptable, but if Branches receive second hand blankets, they must be washed clean before shipping to Divisional Headquarters.

Will Branches make every effort to collect as many blankets as possible in their respective districts and forward same to Divisional Headquarters immediately for shipment Overseas.

CARD OF THANKS

RED CROSS NOTES

The dolorous activity in Belgium during the past few weeks have plunged hundreds upon the British, Canadian and Alberta Red Cross units.

Within a few days of each other we had communications one saying the supplies in Britain were ample and the other an urgent appeal for supplies.

The demand on Red Cross Headquarters after words such as these which took place in Belgium is tremendous, and right now supplies of all kinds are urgently needed.

A very urgent request goes out for blankets and those desiring to contribute either as wool or used blankets may leave same with Mrs. M. C. Hammond.

One lady, learning of the need for blankets purchased a pair and took them over to Mrs. Hammond. Used or new.

Any knitting of the need for Red Cross work, is still in demand.

The lack of major military engagements during the winter months, to some extent lulled the senses as regards the need for Red Cross work.

But even so, numerous indications throughout the district have continued to ply their service or knitting needles. And due to their faithful endeavours, the local branch have shipped many articles.

Different organizations too, have kept up the good work. The Wilsons Club at Hastings Lake have been active as have other units.

Home Economics and Shop Classes Exhibit Some Work

The new school classes, home economics for the girls and shop for the boys, placed some of their work on exhibition on Monday last.

The home economics class which has been under instruction from Miss Isobel Robinson, displayed a really excellent array of articles. There were articles ranging all the way from simple sewing to the completion of exceptionally well made garments. In addition to sewing, baking etc., the girls have been taught elementary cooking and the correct method of serving meals. They had arranged a very attractive looking kitchen.

Not enough instruction for the boys has been given by Mr. H. S. Cannon, and judging from the exhibits the boys have shown remarkable aptitude for the work. Medicine cabinets, tables, book cases, Chinese checker boards and other articles of wood work all of it well done and some of it really excellent, were on display.

LAKESHORE

Mrs. M. Latham of Edmonton is visiting friends and relatives this week.

A number of the ladies attended a bridal shower held last Thursday at Mrs. Alvin Steen's in honour of Mrs. Trueman Jackson. A very pleasant time was enjoyed by all the guests. Mrs. Jacobson received many useful gifts—and of course, much advice, useful and not so useful.

On Sunday a family gathering was held at Mrs. Kaine's when Mrs. Lotan of Edmonton, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Phillips, Mr. R. C. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Phillips and Mrs. H. Phillip's mother from Calgary met together for dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Graham attended graduation exercises at Edmonton Normal School on Wednesday. Mildred Graham was one of the graduating class.

A week ago last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Graham drove to Camrose to see Mr. Barrel. Mrs. Graham's brother. Mr. Barrel has not been very well for some time past.

MUNICIPAL NOTES

This is really the last call to those who have ordered forage crop seed and have not called for it.

It is time the seed was in the ground and if the seed on hand that has been ordered is not called for by Wednesday of next week, June 12th, it will, as long as the supply lasts, be sold to the first ratepayers asking for it.

The secretary is desirous of protesting the man who has ordered, but the seed should have been picked up before this time.

There is no lack of customers, as any seed not picked up by next Wednesday will be sold to the first ratepayers asking for it.

The patrol has been kept pretty busy this past week or so. This machine works best just after a rain, and rains have just been frequent enough to make the patrol mainly known.

The No. 12, which is better known as the big grader is being put in shape for the summer's work.

At time of writing it has not left the municipal yard, but is likely to any day now.

It will probably commence work in the Division of Ryley-Strome-Kinsella Division, but of this we are not certain. We will tell you more of this later.

ROSE CREEK

The seeding operations in the Rose Creek district are just about finished and with this last week end rain, the prospects look good for a fine crop this year.

On Sunday last a farewell sandsot was held for Mrs. Prosch at her home. Many ladies of Rose Creek district assisted and presented her with a lovely purse. Her many friends will miss her in the Rose Creek District a lot as large a number immediately. the first classes will be selected on the basis of their previous school experience as it is felt that such work would be better able to serve if needed. A waiting list will be established and additional classes given instruction as soon as possible.

Each class will have one period of instruction a day until the course is completed. The classes are held in the evenings with a competent instructor on hand to teach the women

"We supply uniforms and berets for the use of class members during the instruction period so that they can really go to work as mechanics.

The course includes actual mechanical instruction in caring for cars and trucks and concludes with an official test. If the women pass the test they will each receive a distinctive pin which shows that they are qualified to do their bit in Ottawa's defence.

The first class will start its course on Monday evening with Mr. F. Dann as instructor.

"Golden Boy" Coming Next Tuesday

Love—defying every heartbreak! Hate—inflaming every instinct! Greed—destroying every dream! Jealousy—poisoning every thought! Humanity—glorifying every scene! A story, wrung from life itself, to touch deeply the hearts and souls of all who see it. During its its realism! Deep in its understanding! Electrifying in its thrills! Here, indeed, is the triumphant realization of true greatness on the modern screen. Starring Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou, William Holden and others "Golden Boy" is a picture pulsating with every human emotion.

Last Tuesday at the Quiz contest Miss Kallal's name was called. The prize was $15.00 but Miss Kallal failed to answer the question correctly. The question was quite fair but many failed. The question asked was: "Canada's most westerly city." And the correct answer is Prince Rupert. Next week the prize will be $20.00. Will Gordon received $20 for last week's contest. Note change of starting time of the show which will be 8:00 p.m. Daylight Saving time summer months. This change is made in response to requests.

Women's Motor Class Commencing Here

Women's Auxiliary Service classes, for the training of women to act as instruction in the operation and care of motor cars and trucks, are being organized by W. C. Swift, Ford dealer here.

"The idea behind the Women's Auxiliary Motor Service, which is sponsored by Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, through their dealers across Canada, is to give women the opportunity to learn how to drive and maintain ambulances or trucks in case their services might be needed," said Mr. Swift.

There will be ten members in each class. All applicants for enrollment must be eighteen years of age or over and must have a driver's license past twelve and a half years, was replaced this week by a reconditioned 1938 Chrysler engine supplied and installed by Premier Motors, Tofield.

HAY LAKES

Hay Lake defeated Brandland 6-2 at Hay Lake on Thursday night. The battery was Nordin and Thompson for Hay Lake and Erickson and Pearson for Brandland.

The field day was postponed due to the weather conditions.

Field work is practically finished around here and we are getting rain down pouring on the west gale soon, so the crop prospects are good.

The Wilhelmina Y.P.S. held their monthly meeting on the second of June.

The St. Joseph congregation have organized a Ladies' League. The officers elected are: President, Arthur Olafson; vice president, Velma Gruse; secretary, Mercedes Bakken; treasurer, Florrie Arntzen. Programme committee, Chester Gruse, Mrs. Jas. Swaye and Stanley Swaye. The programs will be held every fourth Sunday in each month, beginning June 23. Everybody welcome!

TENNIS NOTES

The activity around the Tennis Club is increasing every day. But there are still a number of games to be played off in the round robin singles. So work out your opponents and have a tussle. Don't forget to mark up the results on the board here and we are getting rain down pouring on the west gale soon, so the crop prospects are good.

A number of the Junior members are taking advantage of the lessons sponsored every Monday and Wednesday at 6.15. Any other members are welcome to attend these classes. The odd little correction sometimes makes champions out of the modest-ers.

The Club have decided to hold the annual tournament this year to be a two day affair, Sunday, June 30th and Monday, July 1st. The local club has the advantage over any club along the line in having three courts, and with weather permitting, this should be an outstanding tennis tournament in northern Alberta.

Last year was the first year Tofield has ever sponsored an open tournament and it was a real success for a new club. All club members, let's get out and do a little boosting and try and keep some of the prizes at home

Chapter IX

SYNOPSIS

Life grows complicated for the children of plucky Anne Phillips who has supported them since her husband's death. Her married daughter, Berenice, quarrels with her husband, Jim. Anne's son is infatuated with the rich Helen Sanders. Anne suspects that Cathy widowed little Audrey, is in love with Jim. Janet, Anne's younger daughter, is unhappy because her work is criticized by Tony Ryan. Anne helps restore the old Phillips estate which he has bought. She meets Stephen Hill there and invites him to dinner.

"I'll make yourself comfortable," Janet said, smiling, as she took his hat. "I shall have to do something about food. We have no meat."

Steve Hill was staring around the living room, at the couch which Anne had covered with flowered chintz, at the ivory book shelves which Jim had built in between the windows, at the glass basket of zinnias on the drop-leaf table by the easy-chair, at the colorful braided rugs which Janet had made for the painted floors.

"Anybody home?" called Anne from the front door.

"Mother, this is Mr. Ryan's friend, Stephen Hill," stammered Janet.

Anne smiled.

"How do you do?" she said, putting out her hand.

It was not the words, it was her warm, gracious tone which removed all strain from the situation.

"How's for eating?" demanded Jim, banging the front door behind him.

"My brother, Mr. Hill," said Janet.

Jim started forward with outstretched hand and tripped over a lamp cord. "Sorry," he said with a grin. "I'm the blunderbuss of the family."

Janet's remaining qualms were dissipated by the unobtrusive manner in which her guest fitted in at their table. They sat for two hours after they finished eating. Janet's eyes glowing, Jim looking more relaxed than he had in weeks, Anne leaning forward, her cheeks bright, all of them warmed out of themselves on the Magic Carpet of Stephen Hill's fascinating travel to far and strange places of the earth, to the Peacock Throne and the lazy minaret of the Taj Mahal, to crocodile-infested tropic jungles, to Piccadilly on a balmy May afternoon, to the boulevards of Paris on a fantastic moonlit night.

"Isn't he wonderful?" cried Janet when he had gone. "I don't dare ask him to just another one of what the Earl of Jersey calls a bit of fricassee on the bosom of Eden. Slowly poisonous."

Jim began to laugh. He laughed immoderately. "I can't help it," he panted, "it's just that when I think of you two determined to feed the crumbs of your divine charity to Stephen Hill, I get the giggles." He put an arm about each of them. "Dear sweet innocents," he explained, "don't you ever read the hymns in the newspapers, haven't you ever listened to the radio, did you ever see a travel book?"

"Oh, my untried aunt!" cried Janet wearily. "He isn't the Stephen Decatur Hill!"

Jim nodded and Anne clutched his arm. "The famous war correspondent!"

"The guy," said Jim, "who knows more celebrities intimately than any man in the world, the guy who's covered every important news event for twenty years."

"And we sat him down at a potted tablecloth," mourned Janet.

"I don't believe he minded," said Anne with that odd breathless note in her voice.

• • •

The sixteenth day of August began unpleasantly for Anne Phillips. She had not slept well the night before. It was very hot and she felt sad and tensed.

"If only I knew exactly what I am afraid of," she told herself. "You can fight anything after it comes out into the open."

She was nervous the next morning. She let the toast scorch, something she had not done in years, and burned her hand on the oven door.

"The ingenuity with which you can do everything wrong on some days really should be utilized," snapped Anne, snatching at a box of baking soda.

Janet who was preparing the grapefruit for breakfast gave her mother a startled glance. It was unlike Anne to be irritable.

"You've worn out with the heat. You ought to take a month off and rest."

"With the August for sale just beginning? Be your age, darling!"

"At least," muttered Janet, "you won't have to worry about dinner tonight."

"No?" murmured Anne uncertainly.

"You must wear your new navy linen," Janet was saying. "It's perfectly luscious on you."

Anne made a grimace. "If I can get my mind off how many cakes we moved today and the minimum number of sales we have to make by the end of the week, and remember that a lady at a dinner party is expected to be a feast of inconsequential conversation, I'll be lucky."

There were sixteen around the Poole dinner table—a table that glittered with thin crystal and fine silver and gleaming damask. The centerpiece of exquisite pink asters completely screened Jim from Janet's view, but she did not need to see her brother's face. She knew exactly how he was, curled in his chair between the opulent and extremely delicate figure of Mrs. Henry Leigh on one side and the surging Myra West on the other.

"Where have you been keeping yourself lately, Janet?" murmured Gordon Kip.

Anne was having a marvelous time. She did not believe anyone could fail to be plied with food and goldcream if Stephen Hill took a notion to dispel them.

Down the table Priscilla was leaning a little forward in order to touch Dr. Janet with a flash of her dark smile. "Darling," she said in a high carrying voice, "I am going to bring right by our house."

Janet's head tightened on her plan. So they are engaged, Priscilla and Tony, she really is going to marry him and love him, and it is not as thinking. All around the table there was one of those ghastly silences that happen even in the best society.

"I wouldn't know of course," said Janet at last in a slow painful voice, "exactly what you'd expect of your drama house, Priscilla."

Priscilla looked up into Tony Ryan's marvelous blue eyes. "I suspect it's all right," she said. "I mean I could go for anything that included Tony."

"Sure," he murmured with an ironical grin.

Janet turned a little blandly to Gordon. "You said you'd like to see you every other dance," she said quite loudly, "I'd love to."

"Thanks," murmured Gordon in a startled voice. They danced to the radio. Janet wondered wickedly why she had promised Gordon so many dances. He had asked her for them and she had refused. That was why he looked startled when she changed her mind, but she was certain that everyone present believed she had invented the request in order to clamp Gordon to her side.

Janet went on dancing with Gordon, mechanically and unconscious, because her friends boasted every time they looked at her in his embrace. And one of them would have cut in for the world, but Tony Ryan did without even a by-your-leave. He merely tapped Gordon on the shoulder and waltzed away with Janet.

"I'm breaking the unwritten law taking you away from that bird, or so I've been given to understand," he said with a grin.

"I can stand it if you can make your pesos with your fiancee," she stammered.

Tony glanced at Priscilla who was clowning at them. "Do you believe everything you hear?" he asked lightly. "I've never got around yet to asking any woman to be my wife."

Janet had an infuriated conviction that he was among himself at her expense. "I don't believe Priscilla would take everything for granted unless she had something pretty definite to go on," she said hotly.

"Don't you?" drawled Tony Ryan as if he did not care at all what she believed.

The bridge game of the elder guests broke up at eleven when Mr. Henry Leigh announced with a bleak smile that it was time for old people to be in bed. Norma protested that it was barely the climax of the evening and Priscilla, preparing to dance again with Tony, agreed with her.

Naturally the young folks aren't ready to go," murmured Mrs. Leigh and smiled poisonously at Anne. "That's one penalty for getting on."

Anne smiled. "I must admit we're not so skittish as we were."

She rose and Myra clutched Jim's arm. "You can't run off and leave me odd man."

"You got to take my mother home," said Jim firmly and added under his breath, "thank the Lord!"

"I'm taking Mrs. Phillips home," observed Steve Hill pleasantly.

His eyes. "Steve's no emptiness so ghastly," he said, "as having nobody to go on for. I had a son, Anne."

"Yes?"

"His mother died soon after he was born. I hauled everything on the bog. I was a struggling young reporter in those days, having the devil of a time to get by. I had a dream of being able to retire some day. In its meanwhile I boarded him with a family, good people, only he wanted to be with me.

"When the war broke out and the papers sent me to the front I couldn't see him at all, of course. After the war I had my passage engaged to return to New York when the office cabled me to cover a flare-up in the Far East. Then before I knew it I was in Australia interviewing the Premier. It was four years before I saw the boy again, and I had lost him.

REDUCTION IN RELIEF—

Edmonton.—Unemployed registered in Alberta on April 15 totalled 7,982, according to figures released by the provincial Employment service. This is an increase of 383 over the registration at the end of March of 1940 but a decrease of 856 over the same date last year. Number of persons in Canada on relief during January 1940 is given in the same report as 706,630. This is a reduction of 307,000 from January 1939.

Bon-Voo!

"Now, my lad," said the head of the house, "you must get rid of that dog you brought home a fortnight ago. He's a nuisance and barks too much."

"Oh, Dad!" began the youngster dolefully.

"I'm, get rid of him, and I'll give you half a crown."

The next day Billy asked for the half-crown.

"He's gone, Dad," he explained. "Good!" said his father handing over the money. "How did you manage to get rid of him?"

"I swapped him for three puppies."

BRITAIN GOES "ALL OUT"

(Christian Science Monitor

WITH "BLITZLIKE" speed the British Parliament has given the Churchill Government absolute authority over all the resources of Great Britain. The Emergency Defense Bill vests totalitarian powers in the Cabinet for the prosecution of the war. Wealth and labor can be conscripted, dictatorial control can be exercised over persons and property.

But we shall miss the essence of this tremendous step if we think of it as an imitation of totalitarianism. The temporary grant of absolute authority is much less important than the reason for it. That the British people, whose traditional opposition to militarism was such that only a little over a year ago Prime Minister Chamberlain felt forced to promise that there would be no conscription, have freely and quickly given the Cabinet powers to conscript every resource, human and material, only emphasizes their recognition that self-preservation is now the issue. The British people are going "all out" to win the war.

Britain has established a dictatorship in the Hitlerian sense. Parliament has delegated authority as Congress delegated authority to the International Commerce Commission. It can revoke that grant at any time, and no one familiar with the history of the English people will doubt that it will take back the power when war is over.

It is true that the Churchill Government used this authority as the Hitler Government used similar decree power in 1933 Parliament itself might be destroyed. The essence of the difference is in the spirit of the people. That is always the basic safe-guard of democracy. More than one dictatorship has operated on the American continent under constitutions copied from that of the United States.

Moreover it is misleading to compare Mr. Churchill to Herr Hitler. The power is granted not to the Prime Minister but to the Cabinet, which includes representatives of every party in Britain except the communists. The fact that the conscription of labor will be in the hands of a genuine labor leader makes a vast difference. It brings in an element of consent and of trust which is foreign to rule by force.

Even for a vital purpose, even with all the good motives in the world the system now set up in Britain can only be tolerated temporarily. It is jealously watched. But for the winning of the war it has not only the consent of the governed but their wholehearted eagerness to sacrifice all that is necessary. The British have chosen a temporary dictatorship to combat the threat of permanent dictatorship.

BRITAIN'S "IMPERIALISM"

THE CONFUSIONS and distortions of thought resulting from misuse of the term "imperialism" become still more mischievous when we associate with that word, as we usually do, other such misleading terms as "British possessions overseas," carrying the implication that Empire is an "estate" owned by the inhabitants of these islands for their profit and enrichment. . . .

If the United States were to annex the whole of the British Empire (it would solve many problems if they would) not an Englishman, broadly speaking, would have a penny's worth of property, nor an American gain it. When in the Senate of the United States it was suggested that "Britain might transfer Canada to the United States in settlement of the British debt," no one considered what individual Americans would receive property as the result of transfer, and what individual Canadians lose. (In the actual circumstances, by reason of the redistribution of the tax burden, the British would gain enormously by America's annexation of their country.)—Sir Norman Angell in The Times, London.

ENVISIONING A BETTER WORLD

FIFTY YEARS AGO when this was a hard, cruel soulless world to undeserved poverty—poverty which was due to old age, sickness, and unemployment. . . . There were many wrongs and many miseries which could, and ought to be, wiped away.

Had it not been for wars and the squandering of the substance of the nations upon destruction, it could have been done, and I honestly believe would have been done long ago.

. . . And I hope, when all these great conflicts and struggles are over, we shall resume the task which was initiated with great persistence and resolve in the Parliament of 1906.—David Lloyd George, at Caernarvon, Wales.

IMPOSSIBLE

"I suppose you are going to raise potatoes in your garden?"

"I was but when I read the directions for planting I found it would be impossible. They should be planted in hills and my yard is perfectly level."

WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATES

A direct obligation of the Dominion of Canada

"Share the commercial duty of last September, hundreds of thousands of Canadians have been making themselves. What can I do to help win the war?"

"One answer is, 'By saving.' Every man, woman and child in the Dominion can n e make a direct and continuing contribution to t anada's war effort by saving not only his dollars, but also his nickels, dimes and quarters to buy Canada's

MINISTER OF FINANCE.

WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATES: are repayable in seven and one-half years. If you hold them to maturity, you will receive 3% on your money — your investment will increase by 25%. They are sold as follows—

For a $5 certificate you pay $4
For a $10 certificate you pay $8
For a $50 certificate you pay $40
For a $100 certificate you pay $80
For a $400 certificate you pay $320

TO FIT ANY BUDGET: You can take advantage of this patriotic and profitable savings plan, whether your savings are measured in dollars or on occasional nickels, dimes and quarters. Canada's War Savings Certificates are expressly designed to appeal to the man or woman of modest means who cannot afford to subscribe to war bonds of larger denominations, but who deserve to do something tangible to assist the Country's war effort.

CHILDREN TOO: Even children can purchase War Savings Certificates, using their coppers, nickels and dimes to buy War Savings Stamps at 25c each. Sixteen of these stamps will buy one $5 Certificate.

DEVELOP THE SAVING HABIT! You can purchase as many War Savings Certificates as you like, up to $500 maturity value in any calendar year. Buy them when you wish — buy them often. Remember, systematic saving is successful saving — and your Country needs your money.

REGISTRATION: Each War Savings Certificate is registered in one name only, and is non-transferable.

REDEMPTION: War Savings Certificates cannot be called for redemption by the Government prior to their date of maturity. The owner, however, has the option, after six months, of redeeming his certificates for cash at fixed redemption values. In urgent cases, advance notice will be waived.

L. C. C. NEWS

The May meeting of the L.C.C. was held at the home of Mrs. Hooper on Wednesday 29th. Fourteen members and four visitors were present.

Roll call was answered by Mothers' Day verses. Material for quilt blocks was distributed to members to piece together for another quilt.

The play ground equipment purchased by the club has been delivered to the school grounds and is being much enjoyed by the children.

It was decided that we pack boxes at our next meeting for six of our soldiers overseas, each member to bring their contribution of cake and treats for same.

June meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. A. G. Smith. Roll Call to be answered by a verse or short poem. Mrs. L. Olli and Mrs. F. Hartman to conduct the social session.

After the meeting closed by all repeating a prayer for peace and goodwill among men and nations, Miss Thalma Kortzanen and Mrs. Lancaster took charge of the social period and entertained with contests which created much merriment.

A delicious lunch was served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Lamesdorf, Visitors welcome at all meetings.

Annon Vie'ts Customer, Outwits Milk Pickets

Chicago, May 23:—When Raymond G. Alderman, dairy manager, couldn't deliver milk to one of his customers during last week's milk strike, he delivered a cow instead.

Pickets quickly spread the word. Alderman's Dairy when Mrs. Charles Howard, socialite resident of suburban Wilmette, appeared.

"We're being picketed," Mr. Alderman told her. "If we don't start the trucks out safely."

"Well, then send me a cow," said Mrs. Howard.

Mr. Alderman did—Anne, a registered Holstein, was delivered in the New Howard Estate early Saturday. The cow tethered near the dog kennel and a dairyman sniffed her. Milk beyond the Howard needs went to neighbors.

The strike ended last night and Anne is back home.

NOTEWORTHY NOTES

Rainfall recorded at the School of Agriculture during the week amounted to .74 inches which was entirely welcome, but a good deal more will be needed before very long. Most of the early seeded grains germinated very quickly and their roots were able to keep content with sub-soil moisture. The weather of the past month has encouraged deep rooting which is good insurance against dry spells to come. We need more sunshine, Mr. Weatherman, if you please!

Junior Farmers in the Jarrow district have formed a Swine Club and are now well on their way for an active season. The object of the club is three-fold—to obtain good breeding stock, to study principles of feeding and management and to help farm boys and girls with a common interest to get acquainted with each other. The club was organized by N. N. Bentley, district agricultural representative, Vermilion, and has ten pure-bred Yorkshire gilts purchased by the club members last week.

Regular after-school meetings of Junior Grain Clubs will be held during the next week or so at Ryley Tofield, Viking, Lamont, Bruce and Mannville. At these meetings the annual Junior Grain Clubs' Field Farmers' Clubs all across Canada will be outlined together with local plans for competitions for the season. Two boys from the Ryley Club represented the district in the Provincial Irish Jod-ing competition last year and several members won standings in the Provincial and International Grain Shows last fall.

At the Lacombe Boll Sale last week the champion Aberdeen Angus, which brought a top price of $1,000 was one which was bred and raised on the Experimental Substation Farm, Vermilion. This bull was sired by the noted bull, Sunshiny's Best Deal 2nd, and was out of a cow donated to the Provincial Government by Tom Henderson of Lacombe. A particularly promising calf last season, it was sold just as Mr. Henderson on the 25th of September and shown by him at the Lacombe Sale.

Hoppers are reported to be hatching in large numbers at Chauvin and other points to the south. The police halt campaign is being organized to many municipalities and a period of cold damp weather such as was experienced last spring would be of welcome assistance in combatting the pest.

oooo

Caterpillars are already doing considerable damage to the foliage of Ornamental trees and Mountain Ash are particularly susceptible to the caterpillars and should be protected if at all possible. Prof. Strickland recommends bandages of sticky material placed similar to that used on fly papers which can be purchased in bulk. However, if the caterpillars are already among the leaves a poison spray would have to be used. This could be made up by using Paris Green or lead Arsenate in soapy water.

Canadian Red Cross Society Need Blankets

There are 25,000 hospital beds being used for war service in France. In addition there are 5,000,000 refugees from devastated countries already in, or somewhere on the way to the French capital, cooking smoke and misery.

The immediate problem of the French Red Cross is the supplying of blankets for this host of suffering humanity. The Canadian Red Cross is urged to come to its rescue.

Blankets of wool only, and either new, or as good as new, are required. If you have any extra spare got in touch with your nearest Red Cross Branch or Auxiliary.

With intensification of the war in France, Red Cross calls are insistent for more and more surgical supplies. Workers are urged to increase their effort and to send every completed article or garment immediately to Divisional Headquarters, where daily shipments are being made.

Auxiliaries supplying regimental comforts for Canadian soldiers overseas may ship them through the Red Cross, provided they are plainly marked with the name of the military unit to receive them and its location, also a record of the contents of the parcel and the name and address of the sender.

Such parcels must not contain foodstuffs, tobacco, cigarettes, or lighter fluid. These cannot be delivered outside of Great Britain.

Supplies received from our Branch in the Province already shipped by the Alberta Division of the Red Cross to British Headquarters total 30,238. Surgical Dressings number 73,264 articles.

LINDBROOK

Oldtimers need to say that the June rains made the corp. If you're the corp. we should have a good one this year.

The Jinx seems to be working on the horses around here lately. Mr. Henry Hubert who lived on Ken's place ¼ mile north of Lindbrook, moved and recently moved onto a farm a few miles south, but 2 horses on the E.R. track, hit by train and killed. It seems that they must have been making for their former home. Then another day C.N.R. train crew left word with Mr. R. Holdson that a horse was trapped in a slough near the track and was in with only its head out. Whose this horse was we don't know, but Mr. Holdson was driving around in an attempt to find the owner, also he didn't know just where the slough was either, that it was in.

A few centerpieces have made their appearance here, let's hope it is not another plague of them.

The rain that came on Friday evening spoilt the attendance at the dance given at the school here, anyway there were enough present for a nice time but the proceeds were not so hot, in fact that the orchestra donated their services and the hall were donated as well otherwise the proceeds would have been in the red, not cheerio better luck next time.

D—— Italia!

The Waslada School ground was the scene of a lively soft ball game on Wednesday afternoon June 5, when the Lindbrook and Waslada teams met for the first official game of the season.

The game started shortly after 3 p.m. and in the first inning Lindbrook chalked up six runs to Waslada's one. The Waslada team then reorganized their forces and were able to hold Lindbrook to check quite well. Coman and Reilly brought in three more runs for Lindbrook bringing Lindbrook's total to 10. Roy Tucker, Raymond and Lloyd Herbert scoring for Waslada. The final score Lindbrook 10, Waslada 3.

The Waslada team took their defeat smilingly, which is one trait of a good sportsman, while Lindbrook carried off the proverbial beam.

Bean Geste' Coming Tues.

On Tuesday Sharp's Shows will present a Paramount sportsmine feature "Beau Geste." This picture, based on the novel by Percival Christopher Wren is one of stirring adventure, romance and drama. A story of the French Foreign Legion with all the thrills of that famous force. Other features include comedy cartoon, news reel, etc.

The quiz night will be continued. W. Worton was the lucky prize winner Tuesday night, his number being drawn out of the box. He gave the correct answer to five simple questions and was the fortunate recipient of $20.00. Miss Esther Johnson sent in the question and received the $5.00 prize connected with it. The happening was that Mr. Hedgepeth was unable to find the owner, also he didn't know just where the slough was either that it was in.

A few centerpieces have made their appearance here, let's hope it is not another plague of them.

WHAT MAKES ALBERTA—

Toronto.—Greater use of Alberta coal was urged by E. A. McBain before the recent convention of the Canadian Retail Coal Association. "If property controlled," said the speaker, "highgrade Alberta domestic coals will give a heat equal best value for your dollar, at present prices, so say authorities." Mr. McBain told the retailers that if Ontario bought all of its domestic coal from Alberta, it would help employ 10,000 miners now idle half the year. "Ontario needs Alberta coal," he said, "for its own comfort and to conserve Canadian money."

Our for a later model.

The annual Sports Day will be held in Hay Lakes on July 1st this year.

Chapter X

SYNOPSIS

Life grows complicated for the children of plucky Anne Phillips who has supported them since her husband's death. Her married daughter, Bernice, quarrels with her husband Jim, Anne's son, a attendant with the rich Helen Sanders. Anne suspects that Cathy, widowed little sister, is in love with Jim Jarrett, Anne's younger daughter, a unhappy because her well-to-do friends neglect her. She is commissioned by Tony Ryan to help him review the case of detectives I was hunting for. Jarrett believes Tony is getting ready for Priscilla Leigh and himself.

"He was mostly grown and he must have missed me terribly at first, but he ended by tearing me right out of his heart. He didn't mean to let me hurt him any more by not being there when he needed me. He ran away three days later. I employed detectives. I was frantic. They found him at last. He'd been killed riding the rods on a freight train out West. He died, Anne, putting as much space between us as possible. A bit of me died that day."

"I'm so sorry," she whispered, putting her hand over his.

"That's what I am doing down here," he said. "When I got to where I can't stand the blackness any longer I look up Tony Ryan. He is a lot like the boy I lost. Hard-boiled on the surface and proud as Lucifer, but with a big ache inside him. You and he are the only persons I ever told."

Tears were sliding down Anne's cheeks "Thank you for telling me," she said.

He put her hand to his lips. "I knew the minute I saw you that I'd be able to tell you."

"I'd as soon be hailed in oil," said Jim formerly, "as get stuck on a party like that one last night."

Cathy smiled. It was the next evening and Jim was taking her for a little drive into the country where she had to go to work. Danny lay sound asleep bundled up on the seat between them. His curly head on his mother's lap, his chubby legs across Jim's knees.

"I like people," went on Jim, "but I can't get the asinine round of empty flourishes that's called society. It's so infernally futile."

Cathy's slim fingers caressed Danny's stout brow. It's so much waste effort."

"I'll say!" cried Jim. "Principally it's keeping up with Lizzie and throwing on people you dislike, and I'm not clever at dissembling."

Cathy nodded. "That's why people depend on you. You are sincere."

Jim grunted "The Judge says, contrary to general opinion, honesty is the best policy even for a lawyer."

"He's getting on to depends on you a lot, too."

Jim frowned. "The Judge's not as young as he was. Naturally it's a relief if I can shoulder the routine jobs. I owe him as much."

"I thought you had about finished paying him back."

"I have," said Jim and laughed. "Another week and I'll own my own mansion, only you can't pay back the intangible like the Judge's faith in me."

"No," said Cathy. She hesitated and when she went on her voice quivered. "Just the way I can never pay back how kind you've been to me."

Jim stared at her in astonishment. "Kind to you?" Bitch, Cathy, it isn't charity to have you around, you and the kid. I like you, see? I don't know anyone I like more."

"Do you, Jim whispered Cathy.

They took Danny home Jim carried him sparkling without waking him. Jim drove Cathy around to the rear of the night club where they'd use an employee's entrance and he waved reassuringly as he started off. It struck him that she looked as if she were about to cry.

"Poor kid!" muttered Jim Life's never given her a chance. "I'll hang around the office and pick her up afterwards."

However, Jim did not see Cathy again that night. When he came into the building which housed Judge Hebbets, office Jim found a telegram pushed under the door. The signature leaped out at him like a blow from a hammer.

Am passing through Bay City tonight at nine five on the way to New York, the telegram read. Meet me you. Come down to the station and ask for Father's private car. (Signed) Helen.

The old clock on the discolored wall behind the Judge's desk pointed to six minutes to nine. It was eleven blocks to the station and the explosion was crowded with machines, waiting for exports from New Orleans. Jim did not have time to look for a parking space. He left his battered old flivver leaning against a Don't Stop Here sign and raced into the depot. The train is New York was boarding in. Jim galloped down the track beside it.

"Jim!" raked a clear imperious voice from the observation platform of the rear car.

There she stood, leaning out in broken to him.

Somebody he was beside her on the platform and she was in his arms clinging to him, her lovely red mouth lifted to his. He kissed her, and it was ecstasy and it was heaven. Just as it had been in all the dreams he had dreamed about her.

"I've missed you so!" she cried "I ran away from you and every day I've wanted to come back to you!"

Jim was certain he would not live by. "It's all right! Everything's all right! This is Jim. We're going to be married."

Then they had another quarrel and all Bernice's antagonism was aroused. It was about Guy Shelton. Bill had never liked Guy and Bill liked him still less as his wife's companion. Bill said Guy Shelton was a disgusting old fool who had never had a decent thought about a woman in his life.

"I know his kind," said Bill, "and it burns me up to think of my wife being associated with that breed of skunk! He can't walk by a pretty girl without touching her."

Bernice had to admit that there was some justice in the charge. Guy was a big opera-faced man with a jovial laugh and the bluff hearty tactics of an overgrown boy. If he took a few drinks he was inclined to fondle any woman in sight. It was a joke in The Bunch. His wife laughed about it.

Bernice felt very virtuous because she had no idea of going rid of Bill. She thought she was a martyr to go on and on being miserable, but refusing to free herself because poor Bill could not live without her. And then he left her. She was left getting home from the office that afternoon. She stopped downstairs for a cocktail. She expected Bill would have started dinner, but he was not there when she came in. She did not discover the note at once. She kept listening for his step. Even after she read the note she did not believe it.

"He'll be back," she said, "and the time I won't be back I tried to keep you out of the gutter because I used to love you and I saw your mother a great deal. But you've killed my love for you and you will find yourself be cursed, so there's no point in carrying on. If I had made a lot of money it might have been different. But I failed in that just as I failed with you. Probably it's more my fault than yours. Maybe you might have had some respect for my opinions if I had been a success.

"As it is, you've butchered my pride and shattered my self-confidence. For weeks I've been living in hell, ashamed to look you or any one else in the eye. A man can't hold up his head when his own wife feels nothing for him but contempt. Just, the same, I might have gone on with you. His a selfishness about my men if I hadn't stood in a vacant office across from Guy Shelton's today and watched him kiss you.

A DROP IN TIME SAVES NINE

(By Betty Barsby)

Milady's hose have developed more runners in the past decade than all the athletic coaches and trainers in the country — and these particular "runners" have been the bane of her existence.

One minute she displays a shapely limb of glistening silk. Another, and that provoking runner has spoiled her hose, her disposition and her evening.

But time marches on. The inventive genius of man solves one problem after another. One of the latest has to do with milady's provoking runners. The Proto-Elastic Corporation of Akron, Ohio has developed a liquid thread that is sweeping the country like news of a Hollywood scandal. A little dab with a cockatoo's on the end of the run stops the run immediately—and the liquid thread dries invisible.

Incidently, this new product is a bonanza for the men male whose favorite hobby is to "help" mother. A tiny patch of the material or two of the liquid thread—and friend wife's grief knows no disaster.

Moth holes in clothing; binding "Prepare for a shock." he cried gayly. "I'm going to be married!"

"To Cathy? Not Jim, I'm so glad!" cried Anne joyously.

Jim stared at her as if he had walked off into an atmosphere. "To Helen Sanders" he corrected her roughly.

"If only she makes you happy," said Anne in a broken voice.

"What more could any man ask?" demanded Jim.

It was the next day at noon, Jarnot on her way home from school had encountered her sister on the campus outside her office. "Jim's going to marry the daughter of a multi-millionaire! I can't believe it!" exclaimed Bernice.

"It's the worse luck." Janet glanced at Bernice curiously. "What have you been doing to yourself? You look so white, as if you'd been to the wars or something."

Bernice flushed. "I'm doing nicely, thank you."

"But why can you don't look it," persisted Janet.

"Are you and Bill fighting again?"

"No," said Bernice, and added dramatically laugh, "Bill and I don't fight. We've grown so far above a ragged breath." he's left me."

"Divorce!"

Janet and Bernice laughing shrilly, "he packed up and moved a week ago while I was at work."

"Oh, Bernice, I'm sorry." "This will break Mother's heart!"

"You needn't tell her," cried Bernice, gripping her arm. I won't have her fussing about me and I'm not sorry. You've got to promise. I'll keep you here until you do."

"All right," said Janet wearily,"I promise."

Bernice had felt sorry for Bill after he failed to win in the contest. She had been refused several invitations and stayed at home evenings with him for a night or two. They had had a quarrel and had a pleasant time. It had almost been the same as it used to be when they were first married and so in love with each other, except that Bernice was no longer in love with Bill. She merely felt sorry for him, she thought. Poor Bill!

Helen interrupted. "We simply haven't time for the customary ceremonial speeches," she said hurriedly. "We've got to go on to New York tonight, but we'll be back in about four days."

About the engine gave a warning blast. "Oh!" wailed Helen. "We'll be pulling out in a minute. Oh, Jim, darling!"

She began to draw him back to the platform. Jim's hand was whirled to his lips. Bernice felt a sudden respectful to his future father-in-law but he was prevented by the sweet defersom of Helen's line again pressed to his lips.

"Your days is forever!" she cried tragically. "How can we bear it!"

The station was slowly sliding past. Jim nervously disengaged himself from her embrace. He stooped to kiss Cathy.

"Do you love me?" she cried.

"Yes, yes, for heaven's sake, do!" he stammered. "But I—I've got to go! I can't afford to be carried along. Good-by, good-by, darling!" He tossed a little frantically and dropped off the end of the observation platform.

He was wheeling when he came to the flat, visiting seemed to be over because his hand was still whirling.

"Heaven," Anne cried, "I don't hear you sound so cheerful in ages."

Jim swooped low off her feet, held her up suspended in mid-air, kissed her soundly.

A FINE GESTURE—

AT THE TOFIELD Sports Day Committee meeting held on Friday night last, a splendid gesture was made toward and practical assistance accorded worthwhile war effort. We believe that even the committee itself was surprised at its generosity but nevertheless genuinely and sincerely pleased. Out of a reserve fund of $342.00 the committee by unanimous resolution voted $100.00 to the Red Cross ambulance fund, $50.00 to the Salvation Army and $50.00 to the I.O.D.E. war effort. In addition the total profits of the 1940 July 1st sports day will be given to the local branch of the Red Cross.

It is eight or nine years since the sports day committee in its present form was organized. It has been a rather "free and easy" organization in one sense, though the attendance at its meetings was never large. The one "light" spot in its make-up was the financing. To express it briefly, the committee without being niggardly, was careful with its money. The first year surplus left, wrapped in Boy Scouts, but after that, as each year rolled around, with the exception of one, a little was placed in the bank for any emergency which might arise. As the fund grew it was felt that some use should be made of it. It was recognized that basically the fund consisted of the nickels, dimes and quarters of the men, women and children in this district. And by some people at least it was felt that the people who originally made the fund possible should receive the ultimate benefit. The original idea was a community ball but this gradually lost favor due to its cost. Another idea, one which actually was commenced, was the gradual improvement of the sports ground. Last year a representative of the committee approached the Tofield town council and requested that they share half of the cost of erecting a section of new bleacher seats. The council kindly did so and the bleachers were erected. There were other ideas and hopes for the future also. Perhaps a rest room for ladies with children; perhaps a permanent stand for refreshments. In fact any good thing through the means of which the men, women and children, who by their nickels, dimes and quarters, made the fund possible, received the ultimate benefit. The unanimous vote of $300.00 for war effort will probably slow up these ideas somewhat, but the committee to the last man is genuinely happy that the money was there to be used for such noble purposes. The committee also recognizes that while they were instrumental in passing the resolution, the thanks of the recipients are really due to the hundreds of Tofield district people who by their loyal patronage at former sports days made it possible.

On July 1st, 1940, another sports Day will be held. Total profits will be turned over to the Red Cross. In these distressing days there is probably no greater service one can render humanity than by contributing something towards the alleviation of suffering. Last year the attendance was the largest since the present committee was formed. Let us have the pleasure of recording that the 1940 attendance was greater still. Every five cent piece above actual expenses will be turned over to the Red Cross, so let all within the district help swell the crowd at Tofield on July 1st.

HITLER EASILY FORGETS

Hitler himself has said that the outcome of this conflict "decides the fate of Germany for the next 1,000 years." He talks of 300 years of Anglo-French efforts to keep the German nation down. He overlooks the fact that just over 100 years ago the Germans came to England with their allies against the French when Napoleon attempted to unify Europe by the sword as Hitler is attempting to do today.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

NOT A QUITTER

The two tramps sat with their backs to an old oak tree. Before them was a rippling stream. The day was delightful, yet one of them looked rather disconsolate.

"You know, Jim," he mused, "this business of tramping your way through life is not what it's cracked up to be. Think it over.—

"Nights on park benches or in a cold barn. Traveling on dusty freight trains and always dodging the railroad police. Being kicked from one town to another. Wondering where your next meal is coming from. Wandering, unwanted everywhere, sneered at by your fellow man—"

His voice trailed off as he sighed heavily. His companion shifted slightly.

"Well," said the second tramp, "if that's the way you feel—why don't you go and find yourself a job?"

The first sat up with a jerk.

"What!" he scowled. "And admit that I'm a failure?"—New York Journal.

Edmonton women have begun preparations for aid to war refugees. The week the Women's Conservative Association opened offices where clothing will be received, mended and made available for homeless war sufferers. This will augment the work already done by older and well known bodies. The government has a Child Welfare representative in Ottawa conferring with the authorities there and the necessary care of allied children to Canada is home.

Outlawing of 18 organizations by Parliament under Defence of Canada regulations will affect certain branches of the now illegal bodies in Edmonton. The communist league, Canadian Labor Defence League, the young communist league, Canadian labor defence league, league for peace and democracy, Ukranian Labor Farm Temple association and among others it has been pointed out that some of the outlawed organizations is to be founded on any ground or philosophy which had its genesis in British lands.

While records line up for the pessimistic estimate of 1940 as forecast that 41 Edmonton high school students are already in uniform with the forces. They represent every high school class room. As for the graduating classes many more will enlist before the honors defence forces than were permitted to enlist. The 64 accepted are now in Calgary for equipment and training in their revised wray duties.

Rain is above normal in most districts, an average of 2.25 per cent being recorded. But for the week ending May 24 Alberta grain sales were down a million bushels to 2,000,000 for a 43 week period. Total sales were 439,084 bushels.

Alberta has received only $776,547 in war orders out of $3,625,000 guaranteed to date, it was revealed this week. The information was handed to the house of commons in reply to a question by E. C. Hansell, (M.D.) Macleod. It is understood that the major part of these orders in Alberta have been for food supplies. Some blankets have been bought.

Registration of 600 trainees for aircraft building is now proceeding in Edmonton and Calgary. Operating under the Youth Training Scheme, this effort, to supply ground men and mechanics is part of Canada's air war effort. Students will receive 600 hours of instruction, with frts and free tuition. Age limit is 18 to 30—a limited number of older men being admitted.

Air mechanics are already in great demand, and a special call for immediate registration has been sent out from the Employment Offices here for those with the necessary experience. On registration, they will hold themselves ready for instant availability. The demand shortly will be acute, according to Dominion authorities and all employment offices have been asked to obtain registration immediately.

Edmontonians are building 100 new homes at this time—but the housing shortage will not be relieved until several more hundreds are completed. A total of 222 building permits were issued during May at a $907,206 value. Land sales were worth $23,100 during the month. Meanwhile the capital still lands Alberta cities in the number of H.I.P. Loans. To April 30, the total was $1,265,748.66. Calgary is second place.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

The season for summerfallowing is here.

Because the most important factor which limits the yield of all crops is moisture, summerfallowing is usually performed in order to conserve extra moisture in the soil for next year's crop.

Now the records show that the best rains fall during the month of June, and often early in June. It is important, therefore, that summerfallowing should be done as early as possible in June, for the simple reason that much of the rain which falls on a field before it is summerfallowed is lost by evaporation into the hot air when the soil is turned up during the operation of ploughing or cultivating.

Keeping in mind the importance of conserving moisture in the soil, it is obvious that the less the summerfallow is disturbed after the first ploughing or cultivating, the more moisture is likely to be conserved, and so the higher the crop yield will be the next year.

Naturally, of course, sufficient cultivation must be done during the season to keep down any heavy growth of weeds, for the weeds will certainly steal a great deal if not all the moisture that the summerfallow has conserved.

U.F.W.A. NOTES

An unusually large and interesting meeting of the U.F.W.A. took place at the home of Mrs. Einar Moen, when over 40 members and visitors gathered to hear their very special speakers.

After a brief business meeting, the president introduced Mrs. Fee from the provincial Dept. of Agriculture, in the "Modern Farm Home" division. Mrs. Fee is a forceful and clear speaker, and made a simple and practical scheme, within the reach of the average farmer, whereby re-paper, tive buying in mass amounts, the contributions of electricity and other modern helps, would lighten the burden of the farm women and place her home more nearly on a level with the average city home. Isn't that so, of this!

Miss Lothian, our own director, spoke to us on topics including a report on the conference last fall at Lacombe, the School of Adult Education held at Olds last winter month. The Rest Week and Short Course held at Vermillion School of Agriculture and the problem of the refugee children from Europe. Miss Lothian also read a letter handed in from the Institute for the Blind inflection ton and several sales were made.

Mrs. Moen announced that the local on its 14 years of progress and the challenge of which was given by first president Mrs. J. Ferguson. We might have further pointed out that several of the 14 charter members present presidents were in attendance at the meeting.

The July meeting is to take the form of a picnic, place to be announced later.

The question of holding a field day for the benefit of farmers who have taken forage crop seed was discussed and while it was considered unlikely such a meeting would be largely attended, the Secretary was instructed to get the information to the District Agriculturist if it is desired to hold such a meeting.

Complaints having been received that seed supplied under the Forage Crop Seed Distribution Act was of poor type of weed seeds such as Sinah Weed, the Secretary was asked to refer the matter to the Field Crops Commissioner.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST, BOSTON, MASS. JUNE 3, 1940

Boston, Mass., June 3.—An appeal for calm and more faith in the omnipotence of God in the face of perverted world turmoil, featured the gathering here today of thousands of Christian Scientists from all over the world for the annual meeting of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts.

"Trusting in the omnipotence of God," said Harry C. Browne, First Reader of The Mother Church in reading a message from The Christian Science Board of Directors, "enables one, through divine dominion, to enjoy the freedom of thought resulting from the unfolding of the characteristics of divine Mind as expressed by Christ Jesus.

"Remember emphasis of the true idea about anything, expects the supernatural appearance as in Sa. Texas' form, when the true idea of men's relationship to God is outwardly expressed, unmistakable harmony between men and nations will vanish.

"The divine Mind is in reality the only power; therefore nothing can resist the manifestation of righteousness. With due regard for the necessary human footsteps, which our Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, says are indispensable in meeting problems, it is also imperative to look to the divine Mind for guidance and wisdom to supply the impetus to do all things in a right way and at the right time."

THESE MEAN MORE THAN THRIFT

War Saving Certificates!

The Government could have called them "National Safety Certificates."

For that, in stark truth, is what they are. War Savings Certificates are what, in peace days, we might call a "line investment." They make for thrift, by a foundation of prosperity, appeal to the spirit of self-respect and self reliance. On these grounds, as well as upon the grounds of democratic responsibility, of a broader duration to the democratic creed of voluntary citizenship, they merit a new call.

But, for more than these things, and more terribly vital, War Savings Certificates are a challenge to patriotism. They are a call to all of us, and provide the means for all of us, to answer the challenge of war service; a dictate of our duty which no one can ever expect to be forgiven for ignoring.

War Saving Certificates are OUR share in this war. They ask us whether, in this terrible conflict, with all that we have ever hope to let at stake, we are content with lip-loyalty to our country and with shares of Hitler; unwilling to make even moderate sacrifice for the sake of our future.

In war-racked France today the the soldiers of democracy are dying for its defence. Are we willing to back them up? To deny ourselves the luxury of the easy life that we take? Are we willing to contribute something to food and clothing, to sustain their strength, to tell them that back home their people are supporting them?

This, this, above all else, is the challenge of War Savings Certificates.

Over in Old England across the seas men and women and little children, workers and farmers, old and young, rich and poor, humble and obscure, are yielding their all for victory. Giving up in taxes, subscribing to bonds, buying war savings certificates, they are giving a testimony of devotion to democracy and liberty as noble as anything that history has seen. This is for you, in Canada, to show whether such devotion is ours, whether democracy and freedom mean as much to us as

Corahill Council To Continue With Wooden Culverts

At a regular meeting of the Municipal District Council held at the Municipal building on Friday June 14th, the council decided to continue with wooden culverts. The discussion arose and the decision was made when Mr. Gray, salesman and part owner of a cement culvert making plant endeavored to sell council some cement culverts. Mr. Gray used every method in his collection but the minds of the council were evidently made up, and it was wooden culverts the council favored. The reason was age of cost. Wooden culverts while not lasting so long as cement culverts, did last quite a few years and the money thus saved could be better devoted to a little more grade construction.

The meeting was the regular June meeting of M. D. Corahill 497 and there were present: Reeve Walker, Councillors Anderson, Brown, Coombes, Kortaman and Swabey.

The minutes of the last meeting, together with a list of accounts passed for payment at the meeting were read and adopted.

The regular monthly financial statement was received.

A municipal rumor known as a Refresher Course is held at the University buildings, Edmonton, each year. The object is for secretary-treasurers, councillors or anyone at all interested in municipal matters to attend and hear the lectures and discussions. Last year about 150 municipal matters give addresses which are followed by general discussions. Delegates and visitors live within the University building and the cost per person for three days is approximately $16.80.

Moved by Councillor Anderson that Council send secretary to the refresher course Carried.

Letter from Dept. of Agriculture re a special way of killing weeds that was advertised considerably. The Department did not consider the method proved and reminded council that it was its duty to employ weed inspectors and the weed inspector's duties must not be delegated to individual farmers. The Department also advised that Mr. J. L. Calver has been appointed weed supervisor with head-quarters at St. Paul.

Letter from Geo. Weadick. He suggested changes in the assessment of his land as he has sold a portion of it. Matter to be investigated and dealt with at next meeting.

Letter from Mr. Green, He wanted permission to have his land registered in his name. He has paid the consolidation payments. Council saw no reason to oppose and on motion of Councillor Swabey it was decided to allow this, providing caveat remained on.

Mr. T. Jacobson interviewed council and submitted samples of grasses. He solicited a share of their patronage this season.

A petition handed to the secretary was then read.

PETITION

We, the undersigned ratepayers demand that the Council take action in extending the high grade south section 3 and 4, range 18 as above mentioned road is travelled regularly by a mail courier and at times is impassable. As there is a high grade on the west line and one on the east line of the above section, the undersigned feel they have the right to demand that there be a high grade through the centre of the division.

The petition was signed by 20 ratepayers.

As the petition dealt with Councillor Anderson's division, it was left to him to attend to.

Communication from Dept. re Minister wage act.

Adjournment for lunch.

After lunch, manager of the Bank of Montreal Camrose interviewed Council in regard to the nuisance created at Kingman. The bank is interested in the land upon which the nuisance ground is located. He stated that the object of his visit was to explain that the placing of the nuisance ground there had cost the bank $300.00. They had an offer for the farm which was withdrawn and then remade at $300.00 less. He suggested that council bear that in mind when arriving at compensation. Mr. Halstead was told of the difficulty in procuring a site and that in the end a government official made the choice.

Letter from Mr. McLean re definition of the term "indigent". He said the Hospital Act defined the term indigent as "one who is not able out of his immediate resources to pro-

HEARTS WALKING

Mrs. Harry Pugh Smith

Chapter XI.

BY HOPKINS

Life grows complicated for the children of plucky Anne Phillips who has supported them since her husband's death. Her married daughter, Barbara, quarrels with her husband Jim. Anne's son, a infatuated with the rich Cathy, shows Anne suspects that Cathy is devoid little decency in love with Jim. Janet, Anne's younger daughter is unhappy because her self-to-do friends neglect her. She is communicated by Tony Ryan to help him restore the old Phillips estate which he has bought. Janet believes Tony is getting it ready for Priscilla Leigh and himself. Janet's older sister Berenice is miserable because her young husband, Bill Carter, has left her. She hopes going over the note Bill left behind when he saw Guy Shelton kiss her.

"I didn't want to tell him. I didn't care. That's how I know I'm free of loving you. You have wanted a long time to lend your own life. You can from now on. I'm through. Permanently washed up. I never want to see you again. I don't even want to hear about you. Bill."

On the twentieth of August Tony Ryan planned to give a housewarming at the old Radcliffe mansion. He sent out elaborately engraved invitations. "At home from four to six," they read. Janet turned over her copy to him the afternoon before. Her job was finished, She had even filled every available vase with flowers.

"I hope everything is satisfactory," she stammered.

Her heart soothed with rebellion. It meant nothing to him, the gracious old home into which had gone so many of her dreams. It was merely something for whom he had paid cost cha.ks. He was handing her a check at that moment, a very generous one. She yearned to tear it up and fling the pieces in his face.

"I included your services for tomorrow," he said carelessly.

"Tomorrow?"

He grinned. "I've done a lot of weird things in my time, but I've never yet been host to an afternoon tea party."

"Tea—"

"Please be on hand early," he said "to help me receive or whatever they call it, and for Pete's sake keep an eye on the refreshments. I've engaged the best caterer in town but he's already asked me a dozen questions I don't know how to answer."

Janet was thinking about Tony the next afternoon while she dressed for the party and her cheeks burned. He infuriated her to the point of tears. He had all along. Her grey eyes were mutinous when she faced them in the mirror. She was wearing flowered pink and white chiffon. She had bought it with the money she enjoyed renovating the old Radcliffe house. With Tony Ryan's money, she reminded herself, making a face at the glass. Her mother had selected to the frock and it was adorable.

The rentvad a small square flet but from Tony Ryan shortly before she was ready to start that afternoon. There was a card enclosed. nerous which he had scrawled. Will send a car for you, Tony. Janet made out another face. She did not want him to do the gracious thing in her behalf. She never had wanted to be compelled to think better of him. She was frowning when the chauffeur downstairs to wait for the car. To her astonishment she found old Mr. Jacoby posed on the front steps in an ancient frock coat and striped gray trousers, wearing a white daisy ear in his buttonhole.

"Ready?" he inquired in an eager voice. "Maybe you'd better look me over. It's many a year since I've been to a party."

Janet could not believe her ears. "You're going to the tea?"

"The boy wouldn't take no for an answer," said Mr. Jacoby proudly, as the car backed. "We've grown to be pretty good pals, you know, I and Tony. He comes by every now and then to talk to me. Says he has to hear from my trick knee before he makes any plans for the day. Reckon he knows I got tolerable lonesome with no one to yarn to. Reckon he's got a heart as big as all outdoors, that Tony."

At that moment a new and very glittering closed car drove up to the gate. Duke in a resplendent chauffeur's uniform was at the wheel. He got out and with a flourish ushered Janet and Mr. Jacoby into the car.

It was a crisp blue and gold August afternoon. The lawns at the old house flashed like emeralds as they drew in.

Tony Ryan in immaculate white flannels was standing in the doorway with Stephen Hill. "Hi Mr. Jacoby, here's the boy!" cried Tony

He came forward and wrung Mr. Jacoby's hand.

Shortly after more guests began to arrive. Janet stood between Tony and Steve Hill just inside the front parlor. Priscilla and her crowd were late in arriving.

It was then Janet began to realize that the guests presented a curious assortment. Duke had driven up not once, but twice, with the closed car. He brought first a little, middle-aged lady with a bright inquisitive face.

"How are you, Mrs. Delancey?" cried Tony Ryan. "Sure it's cool today, one yes?"

Mrs. Delancey patted his arm.

"One of my oldest and best friends Mrs. Katie Delancey," said Tony to Janet.

"Pleased to meetcha, love," murmured the old Irishwoman.

Janet could not account for the guest whom Horace was admitting, but she recognized Priscilla's triumphant voice. "Tony," she was saying, "your house is gorgeous! Darling, I can't think of a lovelier time to announce our engagement."

Something inside Janet seemed to be tearing itself loose from the roots. It was no news that Priscilla and Tony were going to be married. Janet had understood as much from the first. Yet to hear their engagement put into words in a formal announcement was something she felt incapable of finding.

Janet and Stephen Hill without consciousness assumed an attitude to notice but various cliques. Janet went over and chatted with the Hart of Jordan, for whom she was endowed with affection. Tony was talking to Rafe when Janet with Mrs. Delancey clinging to her arm approached Mrs. Henry Leigh.

"This is one of Tony's oldest friends," said Janet. "I thought you'd like the privilege of taking her in to tea."

Mrs. Leigh coldly surveyed the awful spectacle of the old Irishwoman's hat. "Sorry," murmured Priscilla's mother. "I'm not going to tea till later."

Katie Delancey's Celtic temper rose to the bait. "Faith," quoth she, "I can remember, Jennie, when you'd have fainted all over your father's butcher shop if some one had offered you tea in the middle of the afternoon."

Mrs. Leigh turned purple and Janet, suppressing a grin, led Mrs. Delancey in to tea herself. Tony joined them in the dining room.

Like a majestic ship Mrs. Henry Leigh approached the tea table with the carving of her friends. Apparently she did not see anyone outside her immediate group.

Katie Delancey smiling broadly, departed with Mr. Jacoby in the closed car.

"She had a lovely time," said Janet.

"And you?" asked Tony.

"Sure," said Tony Ryan.

Mrs. Leigh sniffed.

Others were leaving and Janet began to realize what a strain it had been. She drew a sighs of relief when Tony Ryan bade a shrill, furious voice at the back parlor.

"He is in a hurry, I can't for sure what you say, Tony Ryan. The man's a pouch-drunk lunatic," Priscilla was saying. "And that Englishman's as phony as his clean eye. The nerve of you having people like that at a party which you invited me and my friends!"

"They happen to be my friends," remarked Tony.

"I thought I could marry you!" blazed Priscilla. "I thought I could overlook that you came from Stanley Town. I didn't know you intended to drag Stanley Town around after you. Maybe you'd subject your wife to have Mrs. Delancey to dinner along with Lee Jones and such."

"My wife will never snub my friends," observed Tony Ryan.

"Oh, through with you!" cried Priscilla.

"Yes!" murmured Tony.

"Come on," said Priscilla crossly to her mother. "Don't stand there gaping like a nitwit."

They departed and Tony smiled at Janet almost more than she had from a quizzical light in his blue eyes. "That's that," he said. "Now we've time for tea."

"In spite of what you may have heard," she said coolly, "I am not a nitwit. I am not wearing my heart away for Gordon Coy or any other man."

Tony grinned. He had drawn something out of his pocket. He kept fingering it back and forth in his hand.

"Love isn't that important," continued Janet more than she felt. "I'm not a little fool."

He rose up the shining object in one hand and caught it in the other. "You think life's a matter of dollars and cents?" he inquired.

"No," said Janet. "All that glitters may not be gold, but it's the only glitter that doesn't rust out."

"Is that case," murmured Tony Ryan, "you'll want me to marry me for my money."

She did not speak. She could not even get her breath."

He smiled at her. "Catch," he said. He tossed the glittering object at her. Her hand closed on it involuntarily. It was a square white metal magnificently set in a platinum band with emeralds.

"I've got a house," said Tony. "It's a nice house, but it needs a mistress. Is a way it's many years house been anyone's."

She was staring at the ring, the ring for whom she was engaged. Priscilla before she walked out on him.

"I've got a old house," he said.

"I've heard of trial marriages," said Tony Ryan. "Would you have a trial being engaged?" He grinned. "It might come out even."

"You—you!" she stammered, and slipped the diamond onto her finger.

Miss Helen Sanders and her father arrived the next morning at eleven o'clock. Mr. Sanders arrived in a large, limousine, lowlier than ever in a sheer black crepe dress with pearls-colored accessories, flung herself into his arms while her father stood about on one foot and then the other waiting for her raptures to subside.

"I've got the old fiver here," said Mr.

She squeezed his arm. "We brought the car. We have all the cars and Duke," a trim chauffeur in lemon colored livery bobbed up hastily from somewhere and touched his cap to Mr. Sanders.

"The limousine's waiting, sir," he said.

Jim gulped again and followed meekly to where a huge pale yellow machine, having just been rolled out of the garage, was being lovingly caressed with chromium at the side of the visitors. By the time Jim managed to get a pyramid of traveling bags, a wood-faced Frenchwoman in a maid's uniform and the solemn bespectacled young man who was Clive Sanders' secretary.

Jim was beginning to perspire. He felt more than ever all arms and legs as he addressed his self to Her City's most expensive hotel. Mr. Sanders on the car and Priscilla and Helen practically the entire fourth floor for himself and his party. Helen and her father each had a sitting room, bedroom and bath. Their sitting rooms opened into each other and it was there they had lunch. He had planned to take his daughter and her father out to lunch. He had painstakingly audited his bank account and decided he could afford for once to tackle the Bel Air Restaurant at a dollar a plate, but Helen vetoed the suggestion.

"We'll be so much more private up here," she said, "and anyway, darling, Father's footing the bills."

It was five minutes to two when they arose from the table. "Get me get back to the office," said Jim and smiled.

Helen wound her arms about him and cuddled her cheeks deliciously against his. "You can't go," she said. (TO BE CONTINUED)

"THIS SHINING THING . . . ."

The following editorial appeared in the New York Times of June 1st and was entitled simply "Dunkerque." Since we were not inspired to write it, we feel it our duty to reprint it herewith as a brilliant literary effort which expresses in words far more descriptive than ours could ever be, the glory of the cause for which our nation and our allies are fighting today.

"So long as the English tongue survives, the word Dunkerque will be spoken with reverence. For in that harbor, in such a hell as never blazed on earth before, at the end of a lost battle, the rags and blemishes that have hidden the soul of Democracy fell away. There, at last, because of its shining splendor, she faced the enemy.

"They sent away the wounded first. Men died so that others could escape. It was not so simple a thing as courage, which the Nazis had in plenty. It was not so simple a thing as discipline, which can be hammered into men by a drill sergeant. It was not the result of careful planning, for there could have been little.

"It was the common man of the free countries, rising in all his glory out of mill, office, mine, factory and ship, applying to war the lessons learned when he went down the shaft to bring out trapped comrades, when he hurled the lifeboat through the surf when he endured poverty and hard work for his children's sake.

"This shining thing in the souls of free men, Hitler cannot command, attract, or conquer. He has crushed it, where he could, from German hearts.

"It is the very tradition of Democracy. It is the future. It is victory."

TREACHERY—

There is one disconcerting element in the present war which is not readily accounted for—the element of treachery. The word indicates something more than "fifth column" activity, for among the "fifth columns" are many Germans who, whatever their crimes and however deeply they have abused the hospitality of the invaded country, are at least not betraying their own country.

Hardest to understand is the state of mind of considerable numbers of people in Norway, Holland and possibly other countries, who have plotted their own treachery. They are so numerous that every threatened country is forced to take drastic measures to deal with the enemy within. In the last war this danger was remote. In no great struggle has treachery been so conspicuous or sinister a part since the religious wars of the seventeenth century when the divisions were not between nations but between sects.

How to explain this peculiarly ugly feature of the present war with its Kusuinens and its Quislings and its less famous traitors who have been handing over the keys of the citadel to a foreign enemy? Bribery alone is insufficient to account for it. So many people are made to act contrary to their natural loyalties and to face ignominy and peril that other explanations are needed. Some day the roles of terrorism and mesmerism will be more fully explained.

But already it is clear that the minds of traitors have been tampered with in a more obvious way. The mental infection of totalitarianism has assailed their understanding and made them blind to the the normal conception of patriotism and honor.

A poison has spread from its breeding places in the dictatorships to other countries and people of other races. We are back at the ideological war which began as Fascist or Nazi versus Communist, though the more real distinction was between despotism and democracy.

Nevertheless, with all the characteristics it has acquired, has become a way of life or habit of mind which the democrat cannot but think of as a mental corruption. The democrat has no recourse to it, may think that he is transcending the limits of nationalism; in which case, when he becomes a traitor, he is doubly deceived, first, by the nature of the creed he adopts, and second by his German associates, who are intensely nationalist and respecters of no nationality but their own.

But there it is. This formidable corruption of the spirit, assisted by the social unease of recent years, has bred betrayers of country, kith and kin. It is against such an influence as well as against mechanized might that the war is waged.

CANADIAN LEGION WAR SERVICE

Most critical jobless of the Canadian Legion War Services are the 179,000 members of the Legion itself. It was significant, therefore, that during the recent Dominion convention of the Legion, held in Montreal, all of the 800-odd delegates representing the 1,500 branches throughout Canada and the United States passed a unanimous resolution endorsing in total the work at home and overseas of this special Legion organization.

Major John Roper, of Halifax, past Dominion president and chairman of the committee appointed by the convention to review the activities of the C.L.W.S., told the delegates that the services being rendered to Canada's fighting forces cannot be calculated in dollars and cents and that no estimate could be made of their importance in helping to maintain the morale and fighting spirit of the men now under arms. He expressed confidence, on behalf of the committee, that the Legion War Services at home and abroad is capably discharging the duties it has voluntarily undertaken.

"It is the considered opinion of my committee," declared Major Roper, "that comprehensive reports dealing with education, personal services, entertainment and so forth, that all branches of the C.L.W.S. are functioning in a most satisfactory manner. We are convinced that, in addition work alone, vital assistance is being rendered to the enlisted men and we strongly urge the organization to carry on wherever and to whatever extent it is needed."

Harsher to understand is the state of mind of considerable numbers of people in Norway, Holland and possibly other countries, who have plotted their own treachery. They are so numerous that every threatened country is forced to take drastic measures to deal with the enemy within. In the last war this danger was remote. In no great struggle has treachery been so conspicuous or sinister a part since the religious wars of the seventeenth century when the divisions were not between nations but between sects.

A poison has spread from its breeding places in the dictatorships to other countries and people of other races. We are back at the ideological war which began as Fascist or Nazi versus Communist, though the more real distinction was between despotism and democracy.

Nevertheless, with all the characteristics it has acquired, has become a way of life or habit of mind which the democrat cannot but think of as a mental corruption. The democrat has no recourse to it, may think that he is transcending the limits of nationalism; in which case, when he becomes a traitor, he is doubly deceived, first, by the nature of the creed he adopts, and second by his German associates, who are intensely nationalist and respecters of no nationality but their own.

But there it is. This formidable corruption of the spirit, assisted by the social unease of recent years, has bred betrayers of country, kith and kin. It is against such an influence as well as against mechanized might that the war is waged.

vide the necessities of life for himself and his family." He went on to say that, in effect, the term was subject to variable interpretation.

Letter from Mr. McLean re C.P.R. claim for a road diversion regarding S-31-18, A. C.P.R. official had met Mr. McLean and stated he was sure no payment had ever been made, Mr. McLean had informed him that council would hardly accept responsibility now, in view of the age of the claim and Statute of Limitations Act.

Letter from Mr. McLean re agreement with hospitals. This was in connection with private, semi-private and public ward classification. It appeared boiled down to this. If a patient, in the opinion of the hospital people, requires a semi-private or private ward, it is provided and contract prices per day. If the patient requests a private or semi-private ward and extra charges may be made. In other words hospital authorities reserve the right to determine whether a private or semi-private ward is necessary.

Letter following a study of the comprehensive reports dealing with education, personal services, entertainment and so forth, that all branches of the C.L.W.S. are functioning in a most satisfactory manner. We are convinced that, in addition work alone, vital assistance is being rendered to the enlisted men and we strongly urge the organization to carry on wherever and to whatever extent it is needed."

Harsher to understand is the state of mind of considerable numbers of people in Norway, Holland and possibly other countries, who have plotted their own treachery. They are so numerous that every threatened country is forced to take drastic measures to deal with the enemy within. In the last war this danger was remote. In no great struggle has treachery been so conspicuous or sinister a part since the religious wars of the seventeenth century when the divisions were not between nations but between sects.

How to explain this peculiarly ugly feature of the present war with its Kusuinens and its Quislings and its less famous traitors who have been handing over the keys of the citadel to a foreign enemy? Bribery alone is insufficient to account for it. So many people are made to act contrary to their natural loyalties and to face ignominy and peril that other explanations are needed. Some day the roles of terrorism and mesmerism will be more fully explained.

But already it is clear that the minds of traitors have been tampered with in a more obvious way. The mental infection of totalitarianism has assailed their understanding and made them blind to the the normal conception of patriotism and honor.

A poison has spread from its breeding places in the dictatorships to other countries and people of other races. We are back at the ideological war which began as Fascist or Nazi versus Communist, though the more real distinction was between despotism and democracy.

In order to decide farmers in determining which variety of wheat, oats and barley is the best for their district, the Searle Grain Company has set up, wherever it has an elevator, a Demonstration Plot where the important varieties of wheat, oats and barley will be found growing.

BRINGS RESULTS

TOFIELD BOY SCOUT

A meeting of parents and leaders of youth activities met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Hinkley recently on the invitation of Mr. Burmeister. The purpose of this meeting was to reorganize the Tofield Boy Scout Groups. The meeting was brought to order by Mr. Burgemeister who acted as temporary chairman. He suggested that a committee be chosen to have charge of the Boy Scouts affairs. Such a committee is essential in a successful organization. It was decided to put all persons present on the committee and to add to it if necessary. The officers of this committee are: President, Mr. J. B. Thomas; Secretary, Mr. L. A. Broughton; Treasurer, Mr. A. Shishkin.

The question of camp was discussed and it was decided to go to Lakeview beginning July 22 and to last ten days. It was decided not to add to the present enrollment till after camp. Other matters which confronted the committee were the securing of a flag, obtaining of uniforms and financing the camp. The Northwestern Utilities solved the flag problem by donating the Scout troop a flag for which we are heartily thankful. It was decided to try and secure uniforms and that all uniforms be the same. The matter of financing the camp was partly solved by appointing a tent and a food committee. The next meeting was held at Mr. Kinsmith on June 12. The chief question was how to prepare for the camp. The treasurer's ation of food and tents will be done by Mr. Holmes while the boys will be taken out by carts. The tent committee reported that they had several tents in mind and the food committee is busy arranging a menu for the meals and cubs. Thus plans for the coming camp are quickly taking form and it was decided to have another meeting at the home of Mr. Law on July 11 to put the finishing touches on the plans.

A WANT AD BRINGS RESULTS

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Soule, Mrs. T. E. Soule and Misses were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Anderson.

A number of people from Lakessore enjoyed Sunday at the park, among them Mr. and Mrs. Graham, Mildred and Jean on the front, Eileen Phillips, Inga Syvrud, Fred Jacobson, Wilfred Jones and Walter Tiedeaman.

The bridge foreman met at Mildred Soule's on Tuesday and Mrs. Johnston and Mrs. Wood took sweet revenge on Mrs. Graham and Mildred Soule for what the latter couple did to them a week ago.

WEDDING

WIDEMAN—YOUER

At 5 o'clock last Thursday afternoon a very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Mennonite Church when Leonards Green, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Yoder was united in marriage to Mr. Floyd Wideman of Kingman. Rev. Marvin of Waterloo, Ontario gave the address and Bishop J. B. Stauffer performed the ceremony. The bride was attended by her sister Edith, Ref. Grunsed in a floor length gown of pink sheer, and by the groom's sister Alice, who was dressed in a floor length gown of silver lace. The groom was attended by Messrs Marvin Boerigter and Pearl Vongilin. The bride was dressed in a floor length gown of white chiffon, fashioned with a shirred bodice and a bolero and a purse to match. All wore a corsage of flowers. After the ceremony a reception was held for 200 guests at the bride's home. The dining room was beautifully decorated in white pink and blue streamers and white bells. On the bride's table was a large basket of gladioles, peonies, evening scented stocks and irises with two bridal candles burning. It was centred with a 3 tier wedding cake, with the bridegroom's cake decorated in pink and blue on each side.

The young couple left later in the evening for a honeymoon trip to Banff and Jasper. For travelling the bride wore a teal blue suit with accessories. The young couple were receipients of many lovely and useful wedding gifts. The best wishes of the community are extended.

URGE CHECK-UPS ON SECOND HAND CARS

Securing of greater safety on the highways of this province again is being taken up by the Alberta Motor Association.

Decision to reinvoke the need of service on the part of provincial authorities was made at a recent meeting of the provincial board of the A.M.A. held in Edmonton.

The A.M.A. will draw to the attention of the province the need for compulsory inspection of many cars operating on the roads, particularly those of ancient vintage. Time and again it has been shown that brakes on these old or second hand cars are not in proper condition and are the cause of many accidents.

During the discussion it was brought out that in some parts of the United States a straight fee of 50 cents is collected by the state authorities for car inspections. The effect is to keep many old cars off the roads.

While Safety Lane weeks are held in some parts of this province, there was a feeling that compulsory car inspections would prove the solution for the present problem.

JUNIOR WHEAT CLUBS

Junior Wheat Clubs in the Province of Alberta are under the direction of the Provincial Department of Agriculture, certain assistance being given by the Dominion Government, and with the Alberta Wheat Pool sponsoring the work. This season 80 Junior Wheat Clubs are in operation with a membership in excess of 1800 boys as compared with 900 boys in 15 clubs 11 years ago. Each club has a plot of from 3 to 4 acres, registered seed being furnished him at a nominal cost. The District Agriculturists of the provincial Department of Agriculture supervise the work, instructing Club members as to the proper procedure to follow in caring for their plots from seed time to harvest. In addition to general instruction given Club members in connection with the growing of pure seed, a number of meetings are carried on by the boys themselves throughout the season, with various competitions being held within the individual clubs and between all clubs in the Province.

As a means of improving the quality of seed in general one throughout the Province, the work of these Junior Wheat Clubs has been proven to be of immeasurable value. It is not uncommon for 50,000 bushels of grain seed to be made available in a District as a result of a couple of years operation of a Junior Wheat Club.

LINDBROOK

A dance was held last Friday evening by Mr. F. Lauritzen's barn, in aid of the Red Cross. We hear that it was well attended and a very pleasant affair enjoyed by all present, and we hope that the financial returns were worthy of the dance and the efforts of its sponsors and will sure come in handy those days of world turmoil.

The big grader has been at work on the roads around here this last week, mostly repair work.

The Mennonite Church members here have cleared, plowed, and seeded to grass a plot on the farm owned lately by Mr. F. Wild. Have they or intend to hold their church, up to now they have been using the school.

Now if the hall committee will ever now build the Hall, and maybe a few other buildings spring up we may be on the map yet.

Sympathy is expressed by the people of Lindbrook to the Donald family of Hastings Lake, on the death of Mr. O. Donald, one of the district's oldest of old timers, last Friday.

HEARTS WALKING

Mrs. Harry Push Smith

CHAPTER XII

SYNOPSIS

Since her husband's death, Anne Phillips has worked to support her children. She is disturbed now because Jim, her son, has become engaged to rich Helen Sanders. Anne suspects Cathy, widowed little daughter in love with Jim. Berenice, Anne's elder daughter, is miserable because her husband, Bill Carter, has left her. Janet, the younger daughter, has just become engaged on trial to Tony Ryan—rich young man who was born in Shanty Town and who has always been poor. Anne's old friend, Judge Pettigrew, retired. Helen Sanders and Jim are having lunch with Helen's father. Helen has just told Jim that he can't go back to his office.

Jim caught Mr. Sanders' eyes. "Might as well give in, young fellow," he remarked dryly.

"But—" began Jim.

"You don't really want to leave me, do you, darling?" cooed Helen, nuzzling at his ear.

"Most of course not," stammered Jim wishing she would restrain her affectionate gestures to a private audience.

In the end Jim telephoned the office and in a not very happy voice informed Judge Hutchens that he would not be back that afternoon.

Helen had been talking the back off Jim's neck with tiny meat kisses while he was telephoning. When he hung up the receiver she pulled him down upon a love seat by the window and cuddled into his arms.

Jim cast an anguished glance at the open door into the other sitting room where her father was striding up and down chewing savagely on an unlighted cigar while he dictated to his secretary.

Bell boys ran in and out with more telegrams. The telephone rang constantly. Mr. Sanders called his New York office, an oil field in Texas, and once he talked to his London agency as casually as Jim would have telephoned to the nearest town.

Mr. Sanders sent downstairs to the bar for Manhattans. Helen insisted on being fed her cocktail by spoonfuls. The waiter acted as if he were blind, deaf and dumb, but Jim felt as if his face were a three alarm fire.

"Darling," murmured Helen, "you must get used to having no privacy. The rich don't."

"I'm not rich," said Jim.

She snuggled against him. "You're marrying me. Father's going to make you vice president of something," she cried in a bonnie voice.

"But—" he began again, only Helen interrupted.

She was gently wanting his Adam's apple which made it difficult for him to speak. "I've got a job," protested Jim.

"Darling, I could never live in this dull town," said Miss Helen Sanders. "I can't wait to take you to Father's office," she went on dreamily. "You'll need gangs of clothes, evening and sport togs, and a valet to keep them straight."

It was a relief when h. fiancee jumped up at five and gave him an affectionate little shove toward the door. "I must dress and it takes me hours," she said.

Mr. Sanders appeared in the doorway. "Bring your mother and sister to dinner tonight, Phillips," he said genially. "And any one else you like. Dinner at eight, you know."

Jim's mother and Janet were at home when he came in, sitting rather forlornly, it seemed to Jim, in the kitchen. "Aren't you early, darling?" faltered Anne.

Her eyes looked red. Jim felt conscience-stricken. We've all invited in dinner with Mr Sanders. At eight," he added, "and I'm starved, darn it!"

"We're going to be married right away," he explained stiffly. "I'm to be vice president of something. You know, with a handsome salary and no work to do. It's going to be gay-orgeous." He made a grimace.

Anne was very white. "But, Jim, your job with Judge Hetchcote!"

"She can't live in this poky town."

There was a painful silence. "I can't go to the dinner party," said Janet shortly. "I've a date with Tony Ryan."

"I'll call right about Tony," said Jim gruffly. "I was told to bring along any one I liked."

"He's all in the family anyway," remarked Janet with a flippant smile. "I mean we're engaged."

Anne uttered a startled exclamation. "Engaged!"

"He needs a hostess, I need the money, we've each been turned down by the other before, ankh!" said Janet struggling her shoulders.

Anne's cheeks were fiery red. "You aren't in love with each other!"

"Love!" cried Janet in a jeering voice. "It hasn't been mentioned. I don't believe it's ever going to be."

Anne was on her feet the skin over her knuckles white where she was holding onto the back of a straight thirteen chair.

"So I've failed," she said in a voice neither of them had heard from her before.

Jim wriggled in his feet. "Gee, Mums, I'm sorry."

Anne looked him up and down disdainfully. "My son is going to be a rich woman's kept husband! He loathes society. He runs it to Judge Hetchcote to make good. But now he's turning his back on everything! Le ever stood for to be a lap dog."

"Mother!" cried Janet, shocked at the look on Jim's face.

Anne turned and this time it was Janet who was slowly and deadly. fully looked up and down. "My daughter hasn't the courage to live life as a gay and gallant adventure as it's meant to be lived," said Anne. "She prefers to take the easy way out and become a wise-cracking little gold-digger."

"Oh, Mother," whispered Janet.

"Heavens knows where, except for Bill, my other daughter could have learned," said Anne.

Janet felt confusion, but she was glad she had not told about Bill.

Mr. Clive Sanders elected to entertain his party for the evening in the main dining room of the hotel which were elaborate but hence flowers for a centerpiece and every variety of costly delicacy. Jim's mother was to look at the check, but every one saw the ten dollar bill with which multimillionaire left beside his plate.

There was only one awkward moment, precipitated by Helen. "It's so funny to think of my mother-in-law cherishing in a street," she observed.

Anne saw Jim stiffen as if he had been shot in the back. "I see," she said, Helen explained, "one knows sales women must have private lives like everyone else, only one never realizes it, does one?"

It was Tony Ryan who loosed a little furnace and lastly put a period to Helen's remark. "One would-be, dear," he drawled, looking pointedly at the rose and condescending tone of her honeyed voice, "here age pays sausages to breathe the common air when one's so la-di-da."

Helen hunted her brows and stared at him. "Are you by any chance taking a crack at me, Mr. Ex-Prize-fighter?"

"What do you think?" murmured Tony.

Mr. Sanders, aware of the signs of a tempest brewing to form about his daughter's exquisite brow, interposed with humor. "What shall we do with the rest of the evening?" he asked awkwardly.

"I want to go somewhere and dance," said Helen in a fretful manner. "I think mixed parties are frightful here." She reached over and pulled Jim closer. "Darling, take me where we can waltz and hold each other's arms and forget other people. They seem so unnecessary."

They went in the end to the Golden Pheasant because it was the only reputable night club in town. There were cheap roadhouses, but nothing to compare to the rococo blue and gilt of the Golden Pheasant.

Jim's arms felt peculiarly leaden when he took Helen into them. He could never remember a day which had left him so exhausted both physically and mentally. He was as tired as if he had been dragged forcibly through one knot hole after another when they danced off.

"Sorry," he said miserably. "I'm afraid I stepped on your toe."

"You did," snapped Miss Helen Sanders.

"I'm getting a headache," she said crossly, "and it's all your fault, you and your poor relations."

Jim was very white. "Let me give you a warning. You can call me names, but don't make the error of sneering at my mother."

Something in Jim's face brought her up. "Darling," she cried, catching her breath, "we are actually quarreling, and we mustn't." She leaned nearer and put up her enchanting mouth. "Let's kiss and make up."

"Till the next time," said Jim sharply.

He did not kiss her. Somewhere during the preceding ten hours all the setsny had gone out of Miss Helen Sanders' kisses as far as Jim was concerned, leaving only the torment.

"Here comes Cathy!" cried Janet excitedly. "Doesn't she look lovely?"

Jim twisted about in his chair. Cathy was doing her coin specialty. It was a millinery routine. She had on brief blue satin trunks and a full white silk blouse with long graceful sleeves gathered in at her shoulder wrists. She was wearing a tiny gilded trunk hat jauntily perched on the side of her chingled blond head, and small gilded leather boots that twinkled down around her ankles.

"Isn't it queer how common stage women always are?" Helen drawled. "So trashy don't you know?"

"You can't call Cathy trash," said Jim. "Not in my presence."

"Cathy?" echoed his fiancee. "My word, do you know her?"

"I'll say I do," said Jim, "and she's wonderful."

Miss Sanders elevated one angelic white shoulder, made another dramatic inspection of Cathy and then murmured in her most haunting manner, "I'll wager you know nothing good of her."

Jim's eyes narrowed, but his tone was pleasant, almost conversational. "You couldn't earn a decent dime if your life depended on it," he observed. "Cathy supports herself and a baby. She and my mother work for their living, or you'd never live to be as much a lady as either of them."

"Oh, so much," remarked Miss Helen Sanders trying to hey feet

"Sh 'em, Jim," said Tony Ryan quickly.

Jim had also risen. "If you mean you've brought me an engagement," he said, "it's all right with me. In fact it's fine."

"Father," said Miss Helen Sanders, "will you take me away from these common people? At once! I want to shake the dust of this hateful town off my feet. Tonight!"

"Sure Helen," murmured Mr. Clive Sanders wearily.

It was after midnight when Cathy came slowly out of the employees' entrance of the Golden Pheasant. The wind was chasing ragged clouds across a large pale moon. Cathy moved as if she were very tired, or deeply dejected.

"Cathy!" whispered Jim.

She started violently. He took her arm and guided her down the street. He had good hunting sight forever. Gently he helped her in.

"I thought—I thought you were with—they said you were going to marry the Sanders girl," stammered Cathy.

"I'm not going to marry any one except you, Cathy, if you'll have me," said Jim. "I love you."

"Jim!"

"I've been blind, Cathy!" he groaned. "I almost lost you."

He drew her to him. She was shaking like a shy, frightened child. He stopped and kissed her. Her lips were as sweet and fresh as Danny's. There was no torment in Cathy's kisses, only ecstasy.

It was the next night. Berenice was pacing her living room floor She had had almost no rest for two weeks.

"If I could go to sleep and forget for a while," she sighed.

She was going to take only two veronals, she told herself. It was not as if she meant to do anything dangerous. She had to have some rest. She had sheets turned the bathroom. She kept looking over her shoulder and shivering.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT
By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

Members of farmers have this spring sown small plots of some new varieties of wheat. Some farmers are wondering, however, how to make the best use of these plots.

The most important thing of all to guard against is the presence in the plots of plants of other kind and variation.

Professional seed growers take extraordinary precautions to prevent such nuisances taking place, knowing that once grain is mixed, there is very little that can be done to purify it.

One good method is to surround each plot with a clear space, several feet wide, of bare land, and keep free from grain or tall weeds. Then no seed on the new variety leaves one, the plots should be gone over carefully, and undesirable plants such as bad weeds and other varieties of grain should be pulled by the roots, carried to the end of the field, dried and burned.

Special precautions, too, will have to be taken in harvesting and in threshing these plots, and in later articles this column will tell of the practices usually adopted by the best seed growers to ensure a crop of seed as free as possible from harmful admixtures.

THE TOFIELD MERCURY
A Weekly Newspaper Published at Tofield, Alberta
W. Worton, Publisher

MOTHER SHIPTON—

WE HAVE this week received from a valued subscriber a copy of "Mother Shipton's Poem." This poem, reputedly written over three hundred years ago has at different periods received a very wide circulation. There are few papers of importance in Britain which at one time or another have not published the poem. In fact we can hardly imagine anyone being raised in Britain without hearing of it. In addition to Great Britain, the poem has had wide circulation in the United States and other English speaking countries. The editor of this paper, as a boy, came across it frequently. It was then considered very old and quite wonderful, but was accepted in a rather commonplace manner. European wars were then considered remote, by many they were believed to be out-moded. We remember quite well during 1904-5-6 passing and repassing on the way to and from work an antique store which had an old copy of Mother Shipton's Prophecy hung in the window. It was there for years. It wouldn't surprise us in the least to hear it is still hanging there.

Naturally, the age and genuineness of the prophecy and author was always more or less open to question, and at least one book was written concerning it. We have never read this book and have no knowledge of the impressions gained by the author. Speaking of Mother Shipton, Everyman's Encyclopedia says:

"a reputed prophetess, was probably a mythical character. She is first mentioned in 1641 as foretelling the death of Wolsey; and she is also said to have predicted the fire of London in 1666, and the civil wars. According to Baker, who edited her 'prophecies' (1797), she was born in 1488 at Knaresborough, and lived for over seventy years, having married Tony Shipton, a builder, in 1512. See Harrison, Mother Shipton Investigated. 1881.

But whether Mother Shipton was mythical or real, there is no question but that the poem is quite old and contains startling insight in regard to inventions and world events which have happened during the lifetime of all middle-aged people.

MOTHER SHIPTON'S POEM:

A carriage without a horse shall go,
Disaster fill the world with woe
In London Primrose Hill shall be;
Its centre hold a Bishop's See.
Around the world men's thoughts shall fly
Quick as the twinkling of an eye.
And waters shall great wonders do—
How strange, and yet it shall come true;
Thro' Tow'ring hills proud men shall ride
No horse or ass move by his side.
Beneath the water men shall walk;
Shall ride, shall sleep, shall even talk;
And in the air men shall be seen,
In white, in black, as well as green.
A great man then shall counsel give and go
For prophecy declares it so.
In water iron then shall float
As easy as a wooden boat;
Gold shall be found in stream or stone,
In land that is as yet unknown.
Water and fire shall wonders do,
And England shall admit a Jew,
The Jew that once was held in scorn
Shall of a Christian then be born.
A home of glass shall come to pass
In England's isle, as I say,
A war shall follow with the work
Where dwells the pagan and the Turk
The States will lock in fiercest strife,
And seek to take each other's life:
When north shall thus divide the south
The eagle build in lion's mouth.
Then lies shall flood and cruel war
Shall come to every humble door.
Three times shall lovely, sunny France,
Be led to pay a bloody dance,
Before the people shall be free.
Three tyrant rulers shall she see;
Three rulers in succession, be—
Each spurge from a different dynasty.
Then, when the fiercest fight is done,
England and France shall be one.
The British olive then shall twine
In marriage with the German vine.
Men walk beneath and over streams—
Fulfilled shall be our strangest dreams.
All England's sons shall plow the land
Shall oft be seen with book in hand.
The poor shall now most wisdom know,
And water, wind, where corn doth grow,
Great houses stand with farthing vale,
All covered o'er with snow and hail.
And now a word in uncouth rhyme
Of what shall be in future time;
For, in those wondrous far off days,
The women shall adopt a craze
To dress like men and trousers wear,
And cut off all their locks of hair.
They'll ride astride with brazen brow,
As witches do on broomsticks now.

Then love shall die and marriage cease.
And nations wane as babes decrease.
And wives shall fondle cats and dogs
And men live much the same as hogs.
In nineteen hundred thirty six,
Build houses light with straw and sticks.
For then shall mighty wars be planned,
And fire and sword shall sweep the land.
But those who live the century through
In fear and trembling this shall do.
Flee to the mountains and the dens,
To bog and forest and wild fens—
For storms shall rage and oceans roar
When Gabriel stands on sea and shore;
And as he blows his wondrous horn,
Old worlds shall die and new be born.

Europe Faces Famine

(Henry Albert Phillips in Wheat Pool Budgets)

Having covered most of the continent these past months, I am convinced that Europe faces famine. In the fertile heart of Pennsylvania, that Rumanian-held part of Hungary, I was the seven-day guest on a small peasant estate. "A year ago, I would have sent a car for you," my host apologized, "but all modernness have been commandeered. They have taken my farm truck and tractor. They hinted that we could use wheat-burros, 'We?' All the able-bodied men are in the army. A few older men are left to carry on, with the help of women, cripples and children. This time next year there will be nothing to eat."

Northward a Russian army was on watch. Trenches had been dug sighting for miles through the vast wheat fields. Later I traversed the broad valleys of Bukovina, a part of Rumania's granary scheduled for famine at least 18 per cent of Germany's livestock, wheat and barley. The single-track railway was so congested with oil on its way to the Reich that practically no foodstuffs were being moved.

Further, there still remain in Rumania 100,000 Polish refugees, the most deserving tens of rationed food. In the meantime, Rumania has lots of feeding on three sides, Rumania has mobilized an army of nearly two million. Here are one of the most critical "food bowls" of Central Europe, rendered agriculturally impotent through Yugoslavia, Turkey, Greece and Bulgaria. I observed a similar predicament in Switzerland in the midst of richness with surrounding fields bare and deserted.

I found Italy taking the problem seriously. Only 82 per cent of Italy's land is cultivable, and forests contribute little. Her scanty food supplies from the Balkan wars are being carried off wholesale by the Soviets. Food rationing increased 15 per cent in a single week. Frightened hoarders began to create havoc with reserves; by February 25,000 of them had been arrested.

Spain was the starkest spectacle of all. The opposing armies of a year ago had scavenged the country like locusts, leveling cities and orange groves and killing every living thing they could not eat. Refugees-starving on which lands could not be had at any price. Whole villages were without either milk of bread for days at a time.

Hungary, under the stringency of the bad 1939 corn crop and the influx of 100,000 Polish refugees in February, began regulating the corps of bread and fixing two meatless days a week. Bulgaria an agrarian country of nearly a million men, barely farmers, is pressed under arrest.

Holland and Belgium, with a million and a half in armies, were looking about hopelessly for every bushel they could get from neutral want.

In the main, fighting nations relied on nonconsultant neighbors. What impressed me most deeply as I went through Europe was that this time the neutrals are not only unable to sustain these engaged in killing but uncertain of sustaining themselves. Threatened by war on every side they must abandon normal life and make ruinous outlays for armaments. The able-bodied men called to the neutrals has become the uniformed "unemployed", just loafing and eating their heads off.

Germany got the jump on all Europe in the organization of a breakneck forced front seven years ago. The best the dirty could do, however, was to maintain the 70 per cent self-sufficient in foodstuffs, and every day of the gigantic war effort reduces this percentage. Three days before the Polish campaign, a German official announced that Germany had 8,000,000 tons of grain reserves. But the normal annual consumption exceeds 25,000,000 tons.

Nature dealt the Reich a terrific blow with the worst winter in a decade, which destroyed great enormous reserves of vegetables. Canned goods reserved for an emergency have already been allotted to the army. The great food-yielding areas of Poland, ravaged by armies, hold only millions of starving Poles. The war has closed the important fishing-grounds. Argentina used to be the Reich's major source of wheat. Now Germany must rely on the Balkans, the belt of whose fields remain unplowed. Only a miracle can reverse the Third Reich from a repetition of the starvation of 1918.

What about Russia? The greatest wheat country in the world. Russia faces a close third to India and China in its records of famines. The winter of 1939 began with a shortage of machines and milk, at the beginning of the year news began to seep out about the worst food shortage since the famine of 1932-33. Peasants were declining to the cities, always a sinister symptom. Police were searching passengers on trains to stop drain of food from the cities.

Like Germany, France and England have become increasingly increasingly industrial nations. Of the three, the French are by far the most frugal, getting most of their food supply on thousands of tiny farms. But they cannot endure their limited diet without at once endangering public health. France did not proclaim meatless days until January. Food cards did not appear until March. Meanwhile, 200,000 Spanish and 100,000 German refugees had been swarming away at her food supplies. On the eve of spring planting, when it was found that few women had been left by the unanimous factories for work in the fields, it was decided to call 70,000 Paris workers from the colonies. But will the, in their comparative inefficiency, be worth even more than enough to feed themselves?

In March, after six months of government dawdling with food supplies, David Lloyd George warned, "The nation expected to be told what is the horizon." He added: "We are dependent for 60 percent of our food supplies on outside sources! There are five million more mouths to fill than in 1918 and one million less tons of shipping capacity! The enemy is sinking twice as much shipping tonnage in the first six months of 1914. Every man and woman and every acre of soil in England is needed for victory!" His harangue led to 3,000,000 acres of scrimmed's grassland being dewed uuler.

In the first four months of the war, commodities in Britain rose 26 per cent in price—70 per cent above 1914 levels. By February prices every is were rationed only a pound of meat a week, and four ounces of butter and twelve of sugar. In 1938, Britain imported 12 per cent of her of 100,000 Polish refugees in Rumania, began regulating the corps of bread and fixing two meatless days a week. Bulgaria an agrarian country of nearly a million men, barely farmers, is pressed under arrest.

Holland and Belgium, with a million and a half in armies, were looking about hopelessly for every bushel they could get from neutral want.

LINE ELEVATORS ESTABLISH NEW WEED SERVICE
Weeds May Be Left At Elevator For Identification

In order to assist farmers in identifying weeds, the Line Elevators have established a special weed service, Farmers who find any type of weed in their fields with which they are not familiar are invited to take it to their nearest Line elevator agent. The weed will then be sent to the Agricultural Department of the North-West Line Elevators' Association for identification. In its herbarium a collection is made of every type of weed and weed seed which grows in Western Canada. If the farmer so desires he may obtain from the Line elevator Agricultural Department the latest approved method for control and eradication of the weed. This is just one of the many services provided by the Agricultural Department set up by the Line Elevator companies under the direction of Dr. E. N. Nowlin, one of the outstanding agriculturists of Western Canada.

OVERSEAS PERSONEL OF THE C.W.S

In selecting personnel to carry on the educational, personal assistance, entertainment, recreation and other activities of the Canadian Legion War Services overseas, a policy has been laid down that only ex-service men of the highest character, and preferably not more than 45 years of age, will be employed. It is highly important, the C.L.W.S. feels that in addition to having outstanding qualifications as to leadership and ability to render practical and understanding service to the Dominion's fighting forces, the Legion's overseas supervisors must be absolutely fit.

This is necessary, first, in order to be able to carry out their work under active service conditions in any theatre of war in which Canadian forces may be employed, should become all supervisors, before proceeding overseas, must pass the medical examinations required by the Department of National Defence; and third, to be able to qualify for the honorary policy with which they are being provided by the C.L.W.S.

Vol. XX., No. 16 Thursday, July 4th, 1940 $2.00 Per Year. To U.S.A. $2.50

Bright Sunshine And Jolly Crowds Mark Tofield's July 1st

Amid glorious summer weather Tofield's Annual Sports Day was held on Monday and judging from all appearances was a complete success. The attendance, while not quite as large as last year, was up to the average of the past eight or nine years. With fine weather to cheer it, the crowd was jovial, and took keen interest in the different sports as individuals fluxy prompted.

The day opened with a baseball game between Tofield and Round Hill. The local team had an edge on the boys from the south and the game ended with the score at 4-0 for Tofield.

As in previous years, ladies' softball created much interest and each game claimed its fair share of spectators. In the first game Tofield defeated Holden 18-7. In the second game between Ryley and Dodds, Ryley emerged victors by a narrow margin, in the final game between Ryley and Tofield, the latter team at last proved too good for the locals and won by a score of 7—3.

The second baseball game between Dodds and Ryley brought out good ball, both teams putting all they had into the game in order to win. Dodds finally won out by a score of 8 to 7 and met Tofield in the finals at 6.30.

Mrs. Mats Johnson of Corpus Christi Texas, U.S.A., and Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Henry Funk, of Herbert, Saskatchewan, were visitors with Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Holmes on Sunday.

Crowd Keen On Horse Races

This is without question the motor age, but just the same people are still interested in horses and horseflesh—when on the race track. While there was not an elaborate race card, there was genuine interest and excitement in the different heats of the five races that were run. In the free-for-all P. Weinlake came in first, A. Gladue, second; C. Blanchard and C. Anderson, tied for third. In the pony race A. Trout came in first, P. Weinlake second and Mitchell, third.

Bicycle Race

The boys wanted a bicycle race so a bicycle race was arranged. There were five entries, once round the track. Geo. Takayesh came in first and Arnold Swift second.

At usual the foot races were popular with the youngsters. The secretary was at hand with a plentiful of money and the winners had him busy handing it out. The married women's race was the only race not run, there were no entries.

The horseshoe tournament worked like a charm. Quoits were in progress for most of the day and all games in the tournament were keenly contested and there was a splendid exhibition of horseshoe pitching. The winners in the open competition were: 1st, Bob Phillips and S. Magilton; 2nd Roger Ray and W. J. Kallal. In the Tofield District Competition, the results were 1st Roger Ray and W. J. Kallal; 2nd, J. A. Jamieson and Jim Mean.

Final Ball Game

The final ball game between Dodds and Tofield turned out to be a fairly easy win for the locals. It was one of those games in which Dodds could not "get going", only in flashes did they show real form. Tofield on the other hand were on their toes all the way and batted shrewdly to a decisive victory. Tofield started bringing in runs early in the game and consistently brought their total up to ten, the final score being 10-3. Dodds made a rally in the beginning of the seventh and again in the eight when they made a smart double play. It was also in the eighth that Lawrence Stauffer made a home run, sending the ball to the bushes.

The show followed by the Sports Night Dance proved to be a very successful day. Dancing was continued until the early hours of the morning thus ending another July First at Tofield.

SHARP'S SHOWS PRESENT 'STAGECOACH' NEXT TUESDAY

On Tuesday next at the Variety Theatre, Sharp's Shows will present "Stagecoach." This is a story of a strange frontier incident of 1885 and deals primarily with life and travel in the Western United States in those days. It is the story of nine travelers trapped in a stagecoach, two women on a desperate journey and seven strange men. The suspense built up in the unfolding of this story is tremendous. Hard riding, quick thinking, straight shooting early American hold you enthralled and see "Stagecoach," a picture of the days of Buffalo Bill, Jesse James and other early Western American notables.

Another quiz night will be held and the prize this week will be $15.00. If you are there and your name is called you should be able to win it.

Show starts at 9:00 p.m. sharp.

Tennis Tournament Goes Over Big

The second annual Tennis Tournament of the Tofield Tennis club took place at the courts of the club on June 30 and July 1st. There was a record entry list of over fifty players from Lloydminster, Camrose, Viking, Holden, Bashaw, Ryley and Edmonton, and the winners of the events were as follows:

Men's singles, Walt. McIntosh, Edmonton; Ladies Singles, Mrs. Setter, Lloydminster. Mens doubles, Purcell & Edmonds; Ladies doubles, Mrs. Coutts and Mrs. Cameron, Tofield; Mixed doubles, Mrs. Coutts and C. McFadzean, Tofield; Junior Singles R. Mitchell, Lloydminster.

The result of the men's singles was more or less an upset. Although McIntosh has been a topnotcher in the game for some time, he has never won a provincial single title although he has been in the contest finals, he also won the city doubles title with Harrison a member of those. Harrison was Western Canada single and doubles champion a few years back.

The ladies' singles was also a surprise of the seventh and again in the eight when they made a smart double play. It was also in the eighth that Lawrence Stauffer made a home run, sending the ball to the bushes.

The show followed by the Sports Night Dance proved to be a very successful day. Dancing was continued until the early hours of the morning thus ending another July First at Tofield.

WEDDING

DALZEL—WHITE

A very lovely wedding took place in the Tofield United Church on Saturday evening at 8 p.m. when Marjorie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Whyte was united in marriage to Thomas Dalzel son of Mrs. Dalzel of Edmonton. Rev. D.E. Allan officiated. The bride, entering the church on the arm of her father, looked very charming wearing a floor length of satin while she wore a shoulder length veil and carrying a bouquet of yellow roses. The bridesmaid, Miss M. Turner of Edmonton, made a pretty picture in a yellow net dress with tiny bows of matching colour in shades of sweet peas and lily of the valley. Mr. Mack, brother of the groom, acted as best man. Mr. A. J. H. McCauley played the wedding music. And during the signing of the register Mrs. Terrie sang very sweetly "I Found Paradise When I Found You." Messrs. Robert and Jack Whyte were ushers. After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home. Dr. Law proposed the toast to the bride which was responded to by the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Dalzel left that evening for a honeymoon trip to Banff at LakeNonas and will make their future home in Edmonton.

A wedding of local interest was solemnized at the Baptist church, Edmonton on Thursday, June 27th, when Miss Marjorie Whyte was united in marriage to Mr. Bertram Evertit. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. John Stewart, father of the bride.

Only the contracting parties are well known here, Miss Stewart having taught school here for the past few years and Mr. Evertit is employed here several years ago. Mr. R. Mitchell is Tofield's well known manufacturer. The happy couple will take up housekeeping in Tofield.

CHAPTER XIII

SYNOPSIS

Since her husband's death, Anne Phillips has worked to support her children. Janet, the younger daughter, has become engaged on trial to Tony Ryan, rich young man who has worked his way up from Shanty Town. Jim, the son has just progressed to the widowed little dancer, Cathy, after breaking his chosen engagement to the novelette, Helen Sanders. Brewster, the elder daughter, is miserable because her husband, Bill Carter has left her. She has been unable to sleep for a long time and now searches for sleeping tablets.

She opened the medicine cabinet. Her hands rattled on the glass shelves. She picked up the first tube and the contents into her palm. There were only four tablets.

She filled a glass with water. She put the tablets in her mouth and drank the water. She kept watching her drawn face in its mirror. She felt no different. Her brain was still creeping with thoughts.

"I have to have some rest," she whispered.

She picked up the other tube. It was over half full. She emptied it quickly into her mouth and drank more water. It had a terrible time swallowing. She kept drinking water till all the tablets were gone.

Never, went back to the living room and lay down on the couch. She closed her eyes. She thought, in a few moments I'll go off to sleep. Only she did not find sleepy. Her head began to swell. It felt giddy as if it were floating away from her body.

Somehow she was going down the street she did not remember how she got there. After a while she was standing at the bottom of the back stairs at the flat. She sat down on the lowest landing. She could scarcely get up. She was drowsy at last, terribly drowsy. She had reached the point where she could sleep anywhere and she had forgotten why she had ever thought it necessary to climb the stairs, but her sick brain clung to its fixed idea.

"Get to get Mother," she whispered and pulled herself step by step up the stairs.

The screen door at the back was locked. Brewster's body was numb from feet to waist. She glanced incongruity at a porch chair. Nobody would disturb her there before morning. No one ever came out on the back porch late at night.

"I'm—so—tired," she whispered and slumped to her knees and then forward on her face.

"What's that?" exclaimed Tony Ryan.

He and Janet and her mother and Stephen Hill were playing Monopoly on the living room. The others stared at Tony. I heard a noise out back," he explained. "Thank I'll have a look."

Anne followed him. Janet and Steve after a moment's hesitation trailed along. Tony opened the screen door at the back. He stooped swiftly and gathered up what Anne had taken to be a shadow on the porch.

"Brewster!" she cried.

Tony stood Brewster on her feet. "It's—all—right, Mother," she said in a slow thick voice. "I haven't been peeping lately. I'm—so—tired. I want to sleep in my old bed."

"Dearest!" cried Anne "You're ill."

"Bill's left her, mother," faltered Janet. "Two weeks ago. She made me promise not to tell you."

Anne flinched as if she had been struck and Brewster shook her head. "Didn't want to worry you. No—body's fault but mine. Can I go to bed now, Mother? I'm—so—sleepy."

"Tears were running down Anne's cheeks. "Of course, dearest Mother will tuck you in."

"Wait," said Tony Ryan.

Anne glanced at him. Her face bleached at the look in his eyes. "What is it?" she gasped. "Why do you look like that?"

"I'm sorry," he said. He turned to Steve. "Call a doctor. Call Dr Reynolds."

"She—" Tony drew a long breath and shook his head. He took Brewster's arm. He began to walk her up and down the kitchen. He slapped her wrists, her hands.

"Make some strong black coffee," he said to Anne. "Hurry. Take for other arm Janet. Help me keep her moving. We mustn't let her sleep. She's taken something, some kind of poison."

They jerked Brewster's rigid form apart. Anne's hands did not flinch. She refilled the coffee cup. But of this," she muttered, choking on the forced somber cupid between her cloud of red dust she had kicked up clinched lips.

"Let—me—rest," panted Brewster, "Me," said Anne.

Brewster moaned pitifully. Tony and Janet took up their dreadful march again, half carrying, half dragging Brewster's slack body between them Steve came back into the kitchen.

"The doctor will be here in ten minutes," he said.

"She can't coming out of it," said Tony "Get ice and towels, something Whip her face and neck with them."

"I'll do it," said Anne.

"Bill," whispered Brewster.

Tony glanced at Steve "Have the keys to my car Take it and go after him. The name's Carter, He's the one I told you about, sells radio advertising."

Any idea where he is," asked Steve hurriedly.

"He came to see me last week. Said he was staying down in a cheap rooming house across the branch. He's very dark, big chap, looks as if he'd been ill."

"I'll find him," said Steve.

He turned and ran. He was gone before he could stand it if he had to go on helplessly watching the agony in Anne's face.

"There's the doctor," said Tony.

Anne ran to open the door. She brought the doctor back to the kitchen. She took one glance at Brewster and opened his medicine case.

"What did she take?" he asked Tony.

"Some kind of narcotic, not an opiate, thank God!"

The doctor nodded. "Take her into a bedroom, get her on her feet."

Tony picked Brewster up and carried her down the hall. Janet ran ahead to open the door. Tony threw down they undressed Brewster. He one open. The doctor found one Brewster's inbowed moaning.

After a long while the doctor stood up. Still no one spoke, but Anne's eyes were fixed on his in anguished entreaty.

"It depends on the patient's resistance," said the doctor gravely. "on whether she wants to live."

"Bill, Bill," moaned Brewster.

Anne held her close. "We've sent for Bill, dearest," she said tenderly. "Given us the wrong name," said Tony.

Steve did bring him, a Bill whose clothes hung on him, whose face was grant Brewster's eyes were closed. She did not open them when he came in Bill dropped on his knees beside her His lips worked, but he could not speak

Brewster stirred feverishly. "Bill," she whispered.

He took her thin, limp hand and held it against his cheek. "I'm here, Brewster."

With a tired sigh Brewster rested her head on his shoulder. "You'll be here when I wake up?"

"I'll always be with you, sweet." Like an exhausted child she fell asleep in his arms.

Brewster had not been back to her apartment since her illness. She said she never wanted to see it again. Anyone connected with her life there, anyone except Bill. It was pathetic how Brewster clung to Bill, how she could scarcely bear to let him out of her sight at all.

Tony first intervened Steve Hill in the affairs of Brewster's weight in the radio world. He had Bill presented to the script department on the strength of Steve's glowing recommendations. However, everything was finished by four o'clock, Janet decided while she had Jan's flavour to run an errand for Anne, Old Mrs. Givens who lived on a back road behind the Country Club earned her living by making her writer, her hands.

Janet stopped the flat for the bundle and took the car. It was after five, the last time in the afternoon, when she started back to town and until it joined the highway the road was unfrequented.

"Thank heavens, there's only a mile to go," she muttered, choking on the cloud of red dust she had kicked up. She felt apprehensive about the car. They were badly worn. But was disturbing for new Anne. "I know it," she exclaimed when with a slap, bang, whoosh, the left front rear tyre went flat.

"As I live and breathe," cried Janet. "A rascal!"

When the rendezvous slowed down beside her, Jer exultation took wings "No," she muttered morosely, "there are days when you can't get a break.

"Having trouble?" inquired Gordon Key nervously.

"Oh, no," replied Janet with elaborate sarcasm. "I rip tires to pieces for the sheer pirtuh fun of it."

"We can telephone Jim after we get to town and have him send out for the car It's surprised timidly "That is, if you don't mind riding with me."

"There doesn't seem to be any help for it," snapped Janet.

She left Gordon Key and climbed in beside Gordon, outstanding ly illfavoured by his offer of assistance.

He starte, and turned very pleased. "You were, they'll think we—re planned it."

It was not Gordon's fault that just as they came to the end of the dusty Prinella. Leigh should drive out of Brewster's driveway, bearing the white and scarlet roadster. But it was Gordon's fault when he became conscious that the car behind them was turning, that it in the form of small riding cirt; what are automatically put at the middle of the card as quickly as the operator can type. When this process the same function as the dots and dashes on an old fashioned music roll.

When the operation is completed, the cards are fed into a sorting machine. This machine can tell from the location of the slit on the card whether the purchaser has bought a $5 certificate, a $10 certificate or any other one of the five available denominations. The cards are then segregated, all $5 cards falling into one compartment, $10 cards into another, and so on. It is almost like a pea sorter in a canning factory.

The cards pass through this machine at a rate of 500 a minute. To do the job by hand would require a staff of several hundred people working with their cards only for many hours at a stretch and even then speed would be sacrifices for accuracy. The machine, on the other hand, never makes a mistake.

The sorted cards are then passed to another more complicated machine which book-like an automatic teller machine, but which is actually a small electrically operated printing press. Just how complicated this machine actually is can be considered from the fact that it is made to print over 60,000 separate jobs.

Into one end of this machine is set a roll of War Savings Certificates of a certain denomination. At the other end are fed these specially coded cards. The operator presses down a button, whereb start to turn, and out of the contraption comes the certificates, each bearing the name of some registered holder, his address and other information. Certificates can be printed by this machine at the rate of 1800 an hour with infallible accuracy.

When the certificates have then been prepared for mailing, they proceed to still another machine which folds, inserts and finally seals them in a special window envelope. There will be no fingers involved in the mailing department handling War Savings Certificates; the machines have even licks the gummed flaps. Because of these modern mechanical contrivances, the War Savings Certificates will reach purchasers quickly in sanitary package, untouched by human hands.

SPECIAL MACHINES FOR WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATES

On the second floor of the Bank of Canada building in Ottawa ha been set up a series of mechanical robots which do everything but speak and think.

Installed for the purpose of handling all applications for War Savings Certificates with speed and accuracy these machines are operated by a specially trained staff of some forty people and can handle up to 10,000 applications, and issue as many certificates, in a single day.

When an application for a War Savings Certificate is received at the Bank of Canada, the envelope is not slit open in the usual way by an office boy armed with a blunt knife Certainly not. The job is done in the modern manner—with a machine. This envelope opener looks something like a brown silver and slits through scores of envelopes in the twinkling of an eye.

From this "opening machine" the application, with its accompanying cheque passed to a staff of checkers who see that the name of your post office, remittance agrees with the sum stated on your application form. The money is then carried over to the teller and the application form to a staff of girls who operate a battery of "punching machines".

These machines look like typewriters except they are far more complex that. Into them are fed special cards. On these cards the girls type the name and addresses of the registered owner of the application form, as well as the number and type of certificate applied for.

Then while the operator is typing this information along the top of the card, the machine at the same time is transcribing it in the form of small punching slits; when are automatically put at the middle of the card as quickly as the operator can type. When this process the same function as the dots and dashes on an old fashioned music roll.

When the operation is completed, the cards are fed into a sorting machine. This machine can tell from the location of the slit on the card

CFRN INSTALL PUBLIC ADDRESS SPEAKER

CFRN has installed a public address speaker over the main entrance to the C.P.R. Building as a further service to the public. This speaker is turned on during newscasts and important speeches by Government leaders and officials from Ottawa and from London. This service by CFRN is greatly appreciated by those people whose business takes them away from home during the day and are consequently unable to be near a radio.

British children. The original proposal of the committee was to bring a number of refugee children to Canada, and it is felt that this work has been accomplished. The transfer of British children now is now the most pressing. Full co-operation with provincial and dominion governments is being extended.

* * * * * *

Meantime, the minister and his commissioner have gone to Ottawa to confer with authorities there, and part of the business transacted will be in connection with the British child refugee problem. The first of the trains scheduled for July, it is nevertheless anticipated that there will be sufficient Alberta homes will be available, or encouraging has been the response to the call for foster homes. Many applications forms have been distributed, it is stated.

Several U.S. aviation companies are expected to make another effort to have the Sunshine air route connection between Great Falls, Mont., and Lethbridge inaugurated. Work on the Edmonton-Jasper highway was virtually completed today for the great tourist traffic over the holiday weekend. For the past few days work crews concentrated on the last mile between Carvell Corner and Solo Beach, and in spite of rain the job was done in record time. As fast as graders had completed gravelling was consumed, and vehicles passing through during the past week were astonished at the wide variety of powerful road machinery assembled. It looked like the beginning of an armored column attack, said one visitor. The machinery is all publicly owned.

Opening of the Jasper-Banff highway, while not an official one as at first planned, will nevertheless attract many prominent newsmen and publicists from across the line. Saturday Bert W. D. King, deputy minister of Trade and Industry, greeted a group of 20 from Washington, D.C., Detroit, Chicago, Spokane and other points.

Death from diphtheria can be prevented in almost 100 per cent of cases, said Dr. W. R. Row, deputy minister of Health, when he addressed the Alberta Union of Municipalities convention in Edmonton. Present day medical science can prevent and control this former great killer, he asserted.

Recruiting for the composite South Alberta Regiment continues at a brisk pace throughout the province, and a recent batch of men sent down from the Peace river town mostly spoke on their arrival here. Including farmers, trappers and rivermen, the Peace boys have proved welcome additions to the ranks. Recruiting for another crack Alberta fighting force Herman Trelle, world's wheat king, is also a soldier again—but in line with the engineers in Calgary. He has taken up the profession he knew in his youth, when he was graduated as an engineer from the U. of A., then obtained a commission in the Air force before going to the farm where he made Canada in the days of greatest wheat growing country.

URGE LOOKING TOWARD THE FUTURE

Time is a vital element in gearing mans production to the needs of the national United States national defense program.

The fact was strongly emphasized by Alfred P. Sloan Jr., chairman of the General Motors Corporation, and Charles F. Kettering, vice-president in charge of research, when addressing some 300 editors and publishers at the New York World's Fair.

Both men, who are recognized as outstanding leaders of American industry, declared, however, that the United States is ready to cope with problems of the moment and retained undiminished confidence in the future progress of the nation.

"I have felt for a good many years," stated Mr. Sloan that democracy was in jeopardy. It has seemed to me that the implications of our economic system upon which the happiness of our people depends, and upon which the solidity of our institutions depends, were getting more complicated than the intelligence of our people could measure up to and consequently discharge their responsibilities.

"It has seemed to me," he continued, "that we have got a real problem, those of us who truly believe in democracy, to find a simple price, to do our part individually and collectively in spreading a better understanding of the principles upon which democracy and free enterprise are based, in the first of trivials scheduled for July, it is nevertheless anticipated that there will be sufficient Alberta homes will be available, or encouraging has been the response to the call for foster homes. Many applications forms have been distributed, it is stated.

Air activity in the capital is not confined to war purposes. Several U.S. aviation companies are expected to make another effort to have the Sunshine air route connection between Great Falls, Mont., and Lethbridge inaugurated. Edmonton commercial air firms are sold on the idea that the new airlines would give Edmonton direct access to the U.S. by air. R.E. Gaiser, of Washington, D.C., chief of the international division of the U.S. civil aeronautics authority be early news of the revived effort to Edmonton this week. He spoke highly of Trans-Canada air lines, over which he flew to Alberta.

Work on the Edmonton-Jasper highway was virtually completed today for the great tourist traffic over the holiday weekend. For the past few days work crews concentrated on the last mile between Carvell Corner and Solo Beach, and in spite of rain the job was done in record time. As fast as gradings was completed gravelling was consumed, and vehicles passing through during the past week were astonished at the wide variety of powerful road machinery assembled. It looked like the beginning of an armored column attack, said one visitor. The machinery is all publicly owned.

WAR SAVINGS COMMITTEE ADOPT SLOGAN

The War Savings Committee for Alberta has adopted a slogan "Efficiency or Despotism — Which?"

The seventy-third birthday of our country is with us and we begin to realize that after so brief a national life we are faced with the alternative of such a thought.

Democracy or despotism! Even put they sound to be mere like words than realities. Only in recent days have they been faced with the question. Which is to be our destiny?

Democracy is a system of life which we are trying to build up. Man has not yet made his home perfect and democracy is a succession of experiments in liberty of thought and action. It is for this somewhat faulty but noble conception that we have to fight.

Despotism is that which has cost its black shadow over Europe, and has brought our people to the brink. Opposed to it today stands the British Empire. The heart of that Empire is Britain. The principles of democracy and fortitude. We in the outer reaches have the high privilege of being the front line of the defence.

Each one of you in war can do something that will count more than lending our small and intimate savings to our country. We can do nothing that will register more deeply in days of ultimate success.

WAR CONTRIBUTION—

Ottawa:—"It is a good host to a good neighbor" is the advice on finance Minister Ilsley to those visiting the tourist business. In the budget speech the minister warned against the "false economy" of cutting down on advertising and other expenditures to attract tourists. "Canada has been generous with her visitors from the United States citizens visiting Canada.

BUDGET SPEECH—

Ottawa:—Canada's war effort is to be financed only by our maximum ability said Hon. J. L. Ralston, defence minister in the national income. "Financial provisions can be made and will be made for whatever is physically possible for us to produce in the way of war services, supplies and materials," said the minister.

GOVERNOR GENERAL—

Ottawa:—The Earl of Athlone has been formally installed as Canada's governor general, in replying to Prime Minister King's address of welcome, the new vice regal representative declared that "Canada has shown to the world that the possession of the greatest assets of an independent nation—vision and a sense of reality." His Excellency's first official act was to send a message of sent to Dominion including the Act empowering the administration to mobilize all person and property for war.

FARMER WITH MORE THAN 5,000 BUSHELS TAKEN CARE OF BY LINE ELEVATORS

In an effort to maintain a market for any wheat the farmer may wish to sell, representations were recently made at Ottawa by Line Elevator Companies, to have the Dominion Government provide for the hedging of country purchases and remove the 5,000 bushel limitation on deliveries to the Wheat Board, used a statement issued today by the The North-West Line Elevators Association.

For some time past the Line Elevator Companies have been concerned over the market outlook", said the statement. "The rapid and drastic change in the international situation due to the invasion of Norway, Belgium and Holland, followed by destruction of War by Italy and collapse of Europeans France, coupled with the prospect of a large carry-over of wheat in Canada, made it obvious that the Government would have to take temporary measures to protect the price structure until they could find a policy to take care of the present situation and the long marketing of the crop in the approaching season."

"Whits the Federal Government recognized the minimum price at which wheat could be traded, following the break in prices, the situation was greatly relieved. A delegation from the The North-West Line Elevators Association visited the principals and impressed the need for the provision being made for hedging cash purchases made in the country in the event of price dropping down to the minimum price and to buyers being prepared to take grain at that level.

"The farmer with under 5,000 bushels of wheat is taken care of through being able to deliver his wheat to the Wheat Board at the guaranteed price of 70 cent per bushel. In order to take care of the farmer with more than 5,000 bushels to market all Line elevator companies are operating selling agencies under the Wheat Co-operative Marketing Act 1939. Farmers who have delivered their full quota to the Wheat Board may deliver the balance of their grain at home these sales agencies and obtain the Government guaranteed initial advance of 56 cents per bushel.

DRAWING THE LINE

Brown had been invited to dine at a big hotel, and as his financial position was not very great he looked long and well, while he departure, a string of servants waylaid him.

"Well," he thought, "I suppose I must submit to the inevitable, and pay."

"Sir," said one, "your overcoat." Brown put on his overcoat and greet the man cheerfully.

"Your umbrella and hat, sir," said another, and he surrendered a silk and sixpence.

"Sir, your glovesr."

This was too much for Brown, and, exasperated, he exclaimed: "You are a pack of robbers; they're not worth it!"—Tit-Bits.

ONE TOUCH OF NATURE——?

Ivan is a miner, he came from Yugoslavia, his English is not perfect, but his heart is in the right place and he knows what to do on occasion, pay day for instance, and in doing so, inevitably sets a fashion.

An idle observer saw Ivan go into the store to pay his monthly account. First to cash the cheque, then to pay last month's account, then to give an order for groceries, and, and then to look around for some little extra treat, for you know, pay day at the mine only comes once a month. There were some really nice plump Bing cherries on display and Ivan's eyes came to rest on them.

"Some of three pieces," said Ivan, "For the wife?" said the idle observer.

"Yes, yes," said Ivan, grinning.

No 2 miner cashed cheque, paid last month's account, gave an order for groceries, looked around and bought some cherries.

No 3 miner cashed cheque, paid last months account, gave an order for groceries, looked around and bought some cherries. All carefully stuffing them in their pockets.

Thought the idle observer, there will be some happy ladies at the mine tonight and enthusiastic reception, this Yugoslavian miner, the R.C.M.P. The following definition has been made regarding racial origin, "If an alien father or father's father is or was a German or an Italian, he is now concerned is required to register as being of German or Italian racial origin. Registration should be made immediately and applies to all aliens not naturalized prior to September 1st, 1939.

RACIAL ORIGIN DEFINED

Readers will remember we recently published a news report to the effect that all persons who were of alien enemy origin who were not naturalized prior to September 1st, 1939, were prohibited from residing in the R.C.M.P. The following definition has been made regarding racial origin, "If an alien father or father's father is or was a German or an Italian, he is now concerned is required to register as being of German or Italian racial origin. Registration should be made immediately and applies to all aliens not naturalized prior to September 1st, 1939.

SEEING IS BELIEVING!

Carrying his evidence with him, Mr. Piper sailed on the Bitter on the morning of July 1st to prove that in spite of a two weeks delay in planting due to a backward season, new potatoes should be ready to use by July 1. Mr. Piper was the argument before it was started as only a blind man could fail to see the really fine, yet generous sample of new potatoes. They were of remarkable size for so early in the season and tasted quite as nice as they looked, which is saying quite a bit.

Wednesday morning more visible and edible evidence of this district's ability to produce new potatoes by July 1st was left at the Mercury office, Mrs. O. I. Cookson being the gardener. They too were of generous size and must have grown very rapidly as it is only a few short weeks since potato planting time.

RED CROSS NOTES

Ladies are informed that gatherings for the purpose of sewing for the Red Cross are held at the Institute Rooms, Tofield every Saturday night.

******

This is an opportunity to "lend a hand" in an exceptionally worthy cause and at the same time meet other ladies similarly occupied.

******

The provincial office have sent out the following suggestion:—

******

On their vacation trips this summer Alberta women can profitably spare time knitting shoulder shawls for convalescing Canadian soldiers in hospital. About 36 inches square, plain knitting, in bright colors and of any weight soft wool, they are easy to make.

******

Red Cross hospital visitors in England discovered the need for these shawls and notified Canadian Red Cross authorities. Knitting them is a pleasant odd-time job and fits in well as a vacation pastime. Send your finished work to your nearest Red Cross Branch for shipment to England.

******

Members of the visitor committee in England are in contact with all hospitals to look after the comfort of every Canadian soldier admitted. If the patient is unable to do so himself the visitor writes to his relatives in Canada, keeping them informed of his progress.

LLC. NEWS

The June meeting of the L.C.C., due to rain was postponed until July 1st and was held at the home of Mrs. A. C. Smith with nine members present. The meeting opened by the singing of the usual chorus. The roll call was answered with memory verses. A letter from Mr. Richardson, thanking the club for the playground equipment, was read.

The members are planning a quilt which they plan to raffle, the proceeds for the Red Cross.

A picnic in August was suggested but it was left over for discussion at the July meeting.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Cline. The roll call being answered by the members showing the oldest scrap of clothes. The meeting closed by repeating the Penny Prayer.

The article brought to send to soldiers, formerly of the Lindbrook district, was enjoyed ready for packing on the 11th. This is the first time any of the children from here had attended the camp but as the boys were so thoroughly over with enthusiasm about it when they got home I am quite confident that the camp will be eagerly looked forward to each year from now on.

Later on, if to can complete arrangements, Mr. Layton plans to hold vacation school in the schoolhouse. I know all you who did not get to camp won't want to miss this week. It will be full of all sorts of new ideas and fun, with perhaps a concert the last night to show off your skill, so put be planning on it, kids, and just as soon as I find out the dates and things I'll pass it on to you.

Members of the Winona Club meet at Mrs. Hoover's next Thursday July 18th.

HASTINGS LAKE

Last Tuesday night for the first time in several years hail struck the hills causing considerable damage to crops and gardens. Because of the continued heavy showers we have been unable to get an estimate on the extent of the damages done other that the remark that the crops look "pretty sick". I know the gardens which I have the scrapheaping up remarkably between showers. The old saying that things that look good usually have been worse happening, so here's hoping.

Mr. Coward is spending his summer vacation with his parent at Gleourville.

Mr. Anderson is home from Athabasca, although they are scrapheaping

HEARTS WALKING

CHAPTER XIV

SYNOPSIS

Since her husband's death, Anne Phillips has worked to support her children. She finds confidante in the happiness of two—for her elder daughter, Berenice, and her husband have been reunited. Jim, her son, has just become engaged to Cathy, whom Anne loves. But Janet, the younger daughter, is unhappy and Anne worries about her. Janet has become engaged on trial to Tony Ryan who had been expected to marry the rich Priscilla Leigh.

Janet murmured something unintelligible and fled. Her cheeks were the scarlet and it did not improve her state of mind when she walked into the lounge and confronted Priscilla in the act of caressing a small rose in the lapel of Tony Ryan's coat.

"No sorry," said Janet. "Didn't mean to intrude.

She fled for the second time, walked blindly out upon the screened verandah which ran across the side of the clubhouse. The sun had set in a rout of violent colors. Janet advanced to the end of the porch. Not until she bumped into him did she realize that she had cornered Gordon.

"You," she said coolly. " It would be you. Life's like that."

"You aren't in love with Tony Ryan, are you, Janet?"

Janet could feel her heart flinch. "Certainly I'm not in love with Tony Ryan!" she cried. "Love's something we've never discussed."

Gordon made a disinterested little gesture, and Janet turned abruptly. Tony stood at her elbow, his lips parted on a hazy grin.

"So sorry," he murmured, intimating the tone which Janet had employed upon him a short while before. "Don't mean to intrude, but everybody's gowng to dinner and," he gave Gordon a glance that made him squirm, "I've a yen to be with my fiancee. I'm fancy that way."

Priscilla had managed to coax her-self beside him. She completely ignored Gordon who was her escort and monopolized Tony.

The orchestra had not arrived, somebody turned on the radio. Priscilla wriggled her shoulders and snapped her fingers. "That music's too smooth to waste," she announced. "How's for dancing Tony?"

She held out her arms. Tony did not appear to notice. "Want to dance, Janet," he asked.

He did dance beautifully. Janet had never danced him that compliment. You felt safe in his arms, she thought. She sighed and allowed up into his face to find him smiling down at her.

A thrill began at Janet's hand and went to her toes as if she were a harp on which a band was playing an intoxicating refrain. It was like being catched back from some strange delightful new country when the music ended.

Priscilla skated across the floor, "Tony, show me how to do the rhumba. You promised."

She stood it for two dances and then Priscilla's determined person of Tony ing Priscilla Leigh all summer?" Ryan another minute. Biting her lips Janet made for the wide spaces.

There was no moon. The swimming pool was edged with a concrete walk, not very wide. Janet set her teeth and marched around and around it, trying to bring some order out of the chaos of her thoughts.

Her eyes were strung with tears. She neither then nor later saw the net bathing suit which had been left on the edge of the pool. Something wet and clammy wrapped itself about her ankle. The thought of snakes, been able to be flapped about her. already unstrung, missed her footing and plunged straight toward the water.

A hand closed about her wrist and jerked her back to the concrete wall. Still off balance Janet clutched frantically at her rescuer. His arms went about her and clung.

"Janet, darling!" cried Gordon. He felt her.

"Don't you think I have any was trembling. "You can't have got over loving me, Janet! Please say pride?" she blazed.

you haven't." Gordon, swept out of himself at last, was kissing her with an abandon which Janet found peculiarly revolting.

"If you have no objections, Key," murmured a cool self-contained voice behind them. "I'd do all the kissing my fiancee requires."

Gordon with violent start dropped her like a hot coal. Janet was mute before an ever hand of you, you big stiff!" she stammered.

Tony Ryan turned and looked at him. "Janet," he remarked pleasantly, "you're unconsciously scatted. Tony looked at Janet. There was a glaze in his eyes which terrified her.

"As you reminded me, I haven't made love to you," he said. "This is another matter altogether."

He swept her into his arms. He held her as if she were a small lapdog in fetters. He kissed her at once, and for three times, so thoroughly as to set everything else, and Janet realized that Cat she knew nothing he would about being kissed.

"I trust that's satisfactory," he murmured.

"I hate him, thought Janet, and I hate him. She had just enough strength to run away. In the dressing rooms she cried furiously for ten minutes, then she washed her face, reproduced her nose, painted a fresh smile on her lips and came back to the stairs, the light of battle in her eyes.

Then for a moment she could not move or speak, she could only stand staring at Tony Ryan's back. Over her she could hear Priscilla's and Janet's. Priscilla's arm was tightly wound about Tony's neck.

Janet could no more have helped what she did next than she could have stopped breathing. Picking up the glittering diamond off her finger she flung it in Tony's face.

"Catch!" she said. "You bought it for her anyway."

And then she turned and walked out the front door. She was past exhausted thinking, but she had the intention of remaining anywhere in the vicinity of Priscilla Leigh and Tony Ryan. It was six blocks from the Country Club entrance to the nearest trolley line and a taxi-drivable which had been developed.

Janet realized vaguely that she was running with tears streaming down her cheeks.

It seemed to her she had been stumbling along for years, choking down her sobs, when she heard a car running down the graveled road behind her. The glaring headlights of Tony Ryan's powerful black and silver roadster impaled her like a bedraggled butterfly on a pin.

"Nice night for a walk," Tony remarked, bringing the machine to an abrupt halt six feet away.

He rummaged in his pocket, found a cigarette, lit it and lowered himself lazily to the ground.

"You know," he observed idly, "I believed your explanation about this afternoon and I didn't hold you responsible for throwing caught in the boy friend's arms tonight."

"No?"

"It would take somebody more brave than I to imagine a crush girl like you is the least afraid of a little rabbit. All the evidence of your friends to the contrary, you never were in love with him, were you?"

"No—no."

"You called me a realist once, I believe, in a way. I've had to be. But I have my dreams." He paused. "If you'd bother to pry under the surfaces you'd probably discover that I am a realist with idealistic yearnings. In any case you're the only woman I ever asked to be my wife."

"How can you expect me to believe that when you've been pursuing Priscilla Leigh all summer?"

cried Janet, burning with indignation.

"At the risk of appearing inoffensively egotistic I shall have to tell you that I've never pursued Priscilla. I simply allowed her to pursue me, as long as it suited my purpose." He lowered his voice, became an effective conspirator. "Now, Janet, be sensible, you'll admit. I made up my mind to marry you the first time I saw you."

"Oh," gasped Janet.

"You were defending your mother remember? You said you never had been able to be flippant about her. My mother worked into an early grave taking care of me. I've never been able to feel flippant about that either. When I first looked at the doorway and looked at you, something in my heart clutched. I knew then you were what I'd been looking for."

"Don't you think I have any

"I was then the owl screamed in a burst about a foot from Janet's ear. She did not know it was the screech owl calling its mate but heard something ghastly, shrieked and tumbled into Tony's arms.

"Precious!" whispered Tony, holding her very close, so close she could not struggle free.

"Oh, Tony!" whispered Janet.

He kissed her, so tenderly she trembled, and then so fiercely she could not get her breath.

"I adore you!" she cried.

"Sure," said Tony Ryan in a husky voice and kissed her again.

Anne and Stephen Hill had returned from the swim. They were on her front porch. The light from within the living room faintly illumined Anne's sensitive face.

"You worry about your babies," she said slowly. "From the day they are born you're never free from responsibility for them. You waken in the dead of night and you can't go back to sleep. The dark's peopled with all the dire things which might happen to your offspring. Even in broad daylight sometimes you can't forget the bogeyboo. After all, other women's children go wrong."

"Yours won't, Anne," said Steve Hill. "You put your own stout intelligence at the disposal of their spirits. While the tempired blade may bend under pressure, it will not break to form."

"And I fool," sighed Anne, "for the first time in twenty-five years I almost totally unconcerned. As if as if I'd completely outlived my usefulness."

He put his hand over hers. "Not to me."

She colored. "—I—I—"

At that moment Janet burst into the hall, closely followed by Tony. "Mother!" she cried, her voice rising, "Tony and I—we—we just—"

She blushed furiously. Her tongue failed her. She could not put her happiness into words, but Tony proclaimed it as Tony's arm tightened about her.

"I take it," said Steve Hill with a chuckle, "you have discovered that you are madly in love with Tony, Janet, and he with you."

"Are you supposed to be surprised?" murmured Anne, laughing softly.

Janet stared at them in indicrous amazement. "You suspected?" she stammered.

Anne smiled. "Dearest, you peobably can't imagine, but I was once in love myself. The symptoms are universal."

They caught Janet's hand and hurried her out. "I'll pick you up when I come back, Steve," he called over his shoulder.

Tony put his arm about Janet's shoulders and raced her down the stairs. "Give the guy a break," he said, laughing. "He's plastered."

"Tony, you can't mean!" she cried.

"Sure," said Tony Ryan with a grin.

Back on Anne's den front porch her feet had found and came to rest. "Of course you know I've been adding my time," he said softly.

"Yes," she said with a start. "You are a very understanding person."

"Life isn't over for you Anne," he said, "or for me."

Her eyes fell before the blaze in his. "Why, Steve—?"

"I love you."

The realist of whom she had spoken these words, the mate of her youth.

"I think," said Steve, "if you'd let yourself, you could love me, too."

"Now I loved him."

"We love no two people alike, Anne. The spring is not the autumn, though both is a beautiful season."

"Yes."

"You will let me teach that for you and me life can begin all over again, my dear dear dear?"

Her smile was a little tremulous, but very lovely. "Yes, Steve—dear," she answered. "Now I understand."

Only as he stooped and kissed her.

C.A.S.F. UPKEEP IS FULLY ASSURED

Ottawa, June:—The Department of Munitions and Supply has placed orders for 70,000 pairs of boots for the C.A.S.F. The resolution from the Department of National Defence covering the order specifically stated the bonus were required "for general upkeep purposes".

OVER 5,000 CHILDREN WILL SEEK REFUGE IN CANADA BEFORE JULY 25

Ottawa.—From 5,000 to 8,000 British children, between the ages of 5 and 15 years, will be given refuge here from war-troubled Europe, during the course of the month of July, according to an announcement in the House of Commons by Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Mines and Resources. They will be placed in good Canadian homes for the duration of the war.

Offers to take these children in and give them a comfortable home have been pouring in to the provincial organizations set up for that purpose. The number of offers far exceeds the demands for the present time.

The children are to be sent to Canada only with the full approval of their parents or guardians. The Dominion Government will use its medical officers for its immigration authorities overseas for examination of the children before sailing. It will take charge of their reception at Canadian ports, provide overland transportation and care en route to provincial distribution centres. Welfare organizations in the provinces will co-operate with the Dominion Government in their placement and after-supervision.

More than half of the initial consignment of children will be placed in Ontario and Quebec, the remainder being distributed in other provinces on a pro rata population basis.

A communication from the Canadian High Commissioner states that about 2,000 evacuees will arrive in Canada about the middle of July and a further 750 every five days thereafter to July 25.

FISH-SKINS PROVIDE GUT OR GREATCOAT

German propaganda is making strenuous effor to popularize fashions in fish-skins. Wool, cotton and leather running dangerously short, German technicians have been working on substitutes. Three special fashion institutes—one in Berlin, another in Vienna and a third in Prague—have designers working out new styles.

Reproductions in the Frankfurter Zeitung show gloves & coats made of fish-skins, shoes from herring sins and suits from substitute cloth.

EXTRACTS OF A LETTER RECENTLY RECEIVED BY MRS. A. W. ROBINSON FROM THE SOUTH OF ENGLAND

No doubt you have the European news just as well as I do and anyhow by the time you get this the whole situation may have changed, but I thought you might be interested in how it affects us personally. Have you any tips to offer on preserving and drying vegetables? As you know we do not do much of that but owing to the hardest weather for 100 years by very very short of vegetables this spring and it was very dear and next year the war will make it more so therefore I am going to store all I can.

So far we are alright here, but are preparing to face any or all of the things that are being done all across the water. I now have a small A. R. shelter in the garden as well as my indoor one and they are both stocked with food, water etc. for as much comfort as possible—the indoor one is (I hope) sun proof. I keep buckets of sand and water about the house for fire and like windows, open a little to prevent breakage by concussion. Also the way by which we are surrounded. Dozens of Germans believe me over our way, so altogether this would prove a hot spot for raiders, but also a most desirable one, as the whole district is stuffed with war apparatus, and at

THE FUTURE—

FARMERS EVERYWHERE on the North American continent are looking toward and seeking from their leaders some form of guidance as to a course of action leading toward the future. In previous periods of distress, national, economic or political there has generally been plenty of advice available. The farmer has, during other times of unrest, been advised to increase acreage, reduce acreage, raise more pigs, raise less pigs, until it would seem as if the average farmer was kept so busy changing his course, that he got no where. Of course farmers like men and women of other occupations desire to assist as far as possible in the nation's war effort, and are willing at the cost of personal sacrifice to help. This is all to the good, so long as they are reasonably well directed and their efforts work out to the benefit of all concerned.

However, the swiftly changing course of events in this war has in a large measure silenced the chorus of advice usually heard in difficult times. The truth is that the future of western agriculture is so uncertain as to make advice futile. Responsible statesmen hesitate to give advice and the run of the field politician is as much bewildered as anyone else. One could go on almost indefinitely quoting world and Canadian wheat carryovers, which are considerable; the difficulty due to cost, distance and shipping shortage of transporting wheat to Britain from Australia and the Argentine; but in the end if one were to be asked the question "What Next?" the reply if it were truthful would have to be "I don't know."

Yet, it is natural for people to look outward and upward for some form of guidance. Few of us, it is almost safe to say none of us carry on our every day normal activities without being influenced in some degree by what we read, hear over the radio, at public meetings and during general conversation with our neighbors. Consequently some form of guidance is absolutely necessary, the only alternative is just plain mental drifting. And mere drifting is more likely to lead to the rocks of despair than to the harbor of security. At the present time, economic experts, grain men and all those who study market trends, freely admit that any form of prediction as to prices of farm products is merely guess work. The vast forces at work, in conflict with each other in the world today, render any prediction merely a matter of opinion. The only advice that can be given, which in reality, has been given, is that farmers "Carry On". Certainly this is general enough and fits all cases.

We have felt for some little time that materialism has been stressed far too much during the past few decades. The measure of success has been how much an individual made and not how he made it. It mattered little whose effort went into the creation and accumulation of wealth, what did matter was who legally possessed it, and it was to him that people rendered homage. Certainly during the past ten years there has been some upheaval of thought in different areas regarding this matter, but in the main this could only be classed as an eruption, it could hardly be classed as genuine repair work.

We feel that as far as the future is concerned and as regards this the vision is very dim, the welfare of the farmer lies in his close proximity to the farm. The most important unit in the nation is the home unit and farmers can not be united or brought to a greater degree of excellence than on the farm. It is of course necessary to pay attention to economics, but clay is passed when Manna dropped from the skies, yet the ability to be contented with slow but steady progress is just as important as the ability to make rapid progress and lose contentment.

In reaching out for the shadow of material possessions, it is possible to lose the substance of happiness based on understanding. To-day the world is confused with fear, and schools of thought or method's of government. Britain stands as the champion of democracy, a political creed which in days gone by rendered men low enough of despair to the hills of hope. Dictatorship in any of its forms will, if allowed to flourish eventually lead men back to the tyranny of the dark ages. Farmers, their sons and daughters, and for that matter all thinking people, should understand this. And they should also understand that having democracy for democracy's sake is not enough either. The doctrine of democracy covers many faults, not the least of which is the willingness of many people to "Let George do the thinking". It is not possible to have a virile democracy and political complacency at the same time. Democracy imposes on the individual a responsibility from which there is no escape except through the road of neglect. Farmers, their sons and daughters should also strive to properly evaluate public men and their policies. They should learn to recognize genuine public service when it is given and also to recognize that the desire to obtain office often lead men on to curious beliefs. Economics will continue in the future as in the past to play a major part in the lives of Western Canadians, but the problem of government will become increasingly important as time goes on and for their own welfare Western Canadians should give it more than just selfish or passing attention.

WORK OF CANADA'S GRAIN HANDLING SYSTEM OUTLINED

Attractive Booklet Reviews Functions Of Country Elevator

"Prairie Sentinels" is the title of an attractive booklet which has just been issued. The booklet deals with the handling and movement of Canada's grain crop and should be in the library of every farmer's home.

In its opening pages "Prairie Sentinels" reviews the early history of wheat growing in Canada. The functions of the Board of Grain Commissioners are outlined and details are given concerning the methods which farmers may use in handling their grain at country elevators. The functions of the terminal elevator and the exporter in the movement of the wheat crop are reviewed, and information on the cost of handling and transporting grain is given. Salient facts taken from reports of various Royal Commissioners which have investigated the grain trade since 1880 are quoted as well as recommendations which have led to Canada's grain handling system by farm leaders.

An interesting section of "Prairie Sentinels" deals with the United Kingdom market, and the growing use of wheat in other lands. The booklet is attractively illustrated throughout. The Western Canada Publicity Association has made available to farmers in some information booklet of much value. In addition to being of use to the farmer, "Prairie Sentinels" should be in the hands of every school child. Copies may be obtained free of charge from any line elevator agent or by writing to Nor2-West Line Elevators Association, Winnipeg.

Oshawa, June 30—Three factories of General Motors have thrown their facilities into the gigantic war industry effort in collaboration with the War Supply Board and the British Purchasing Mission. This week an additional sum of $2,297,000 was appropriated by the company for factory rearrangements, bringing to $5,000,000 the amount spent on plant adjustment since February. A stream of Army trucks is being driven away, daily, by men in khaki, enormous daily shipments of munitions units, and tooling for production of munitions parts for the armored Universal carried (Bren gun) all documentaries the effectiveness of the Company's industrial contributions to date.

The new expansion program indicates the much higher production speeds of the immediate future when the larger units will roll off the assembly line every few minutes.

Harry J. Carmichael, vice-president and general manager of General Motors, today told an energy details at conscription would allow.

"We have transformed three mills into a speed up deliveries and production rates", he said in an interview. "In addition to the $5,000,000 for rearrangement of plants and machinery, $200,000 has gone into new assembly line for army trucks and $400,000 more for special tools for these facilities. The plants involved are at Oshawa, St. Catharines and Windsor. Within a year of this time alone will total $1,178,000 this year. Tooling at another plant is being added to the 36-hour week and seven days a week. I can't tell you what each department is doing."

At one factory, it was revealed, rates of delivery were stepped up in January, April and again in June. Another plant is delivering trucks at a rate of more than 100 a day, working two shifts of men for a seven-day week. Trucks are the drab colored, short-coupled 6-ton trucks frequently seen in convoys on the highway, or roaring over the country roads. Production is also in between for other military transport.

General Motors is at work on a rough military trucks to carry the whole Canadian army, although the orders were not necessarily placed by any one country.

Eight thousand Canadian employees in the General Motors plants now are engaged in fabricating war materials, but the army of labor involved altogether reaches the tens of thousands in the mills and mines and forests and local industries where scores of millions of dollars are being spent for reserve material, keeping payrolls on the march across the Dominion. Army truck bodies come from as far away as Winnipeg. Lumber comes from British Columbia and down East. The small contributors to the great automotive industry are working overtime.

A STATEMENT ON FORD WAR WORK IN CANADA

This Company is in the war to the full limit of its resources. Until the British Empire is victorious, until the battle for freedom of nations and liberty of peoples is won, we have pledged all the vast manufacturing facilities of our Canadian and overseas affiliated companies to the service of the Empire.

We regard this to be our simple duty as a Canadian institution, one of the industrial resources of the Dominion. The Ford employees in Canada as well as our wide-spread dealer and service organization from coast to coast are Canadian. The Company's shareholders include a large proportion of Canadians. No one individual, family or company has a majority control of our shares.

For these reasons, aside from our deep feeling of loyalty to the Empire and its high purposes, it is during this Ford Week of Victory, Limited that we should give whole-hearted support to the national war effort.

From the very beginning of this war we have been ready. Even before war was declared, in co-operation with officers of the Department of National Defence, we laid in our plans and machinery for production units for conversion to war work. These units have been brought to a greater degree of excellence than on the farm. It is of course necessary to pay attention to economics, but clay is passed when Manna dropped from the skies, yet the ability to be contented with slow but steady progress is just as important as the ability to make rapid progress and lose contentment.

Britain stands as the champion of democracy, a political creed which in days gone by rendered men low enough of despair to the hills of hope. Dictatorship in any of its forms will, if allowed to flourish eventually lead men back to the tyranny of the dark ages. Farmers, their sons and daughters, and for that matter all thinking people, should understand this. And they should also understand that having democracy for democracy's sake is not enough either. The doctrine of democracy covers many faults, not the least of which is the willingness of many people to "Let George do the thinking". It is not possible to have a virile democracy and political complacency at the same time. Democracy imposes on the individual a responsibility from which there is no escape except through the road of neglect. Farmers, their sons and daughters should also strive to properly evaluate public men and their policies. They should learn to recognize genuine public service when it is given and also to recognize that the desire to obtain office often lead men on to curious beliefs. Economics will continue in the future as in the past to play a major part in the lives of Western Canadians, but the problem of government will become increasingly important as time goes on and for their own welfare Western Canadians should give it more than just selfish or passing attention.

We are now constructing at our own expense a $700,000 plant addition to provide facilities for the building of Universal machine gun carriers of which we have undertaken to deliver 1,000 by a week to the Government as soon as production can be started. This addition will also enable us to increase production of other types of military equipment. Our additional companies with plants in South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, India and Malaya are similarly engaged.

Beyond our manufacturing facilities we have been fortunately able to contribute skilled man-power. From our Canadian and overseas organizations, engineers and men with special training in transport and other lines are rendering valuable service.

Major adjustments in our business have been necessary through loss of export trade and because of domestic taxation. We have made these adjustments cheerfully. Our one concern now is the successful prosecution of this war so that people of all nations may again be able to work in freedom and peace.

PRESIDENT

FORD MOTOR COMPANY OF CANADA, LIMITED

Statement in Parliament by the Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply

"The president of the Canadian Company has shown perhaps as keen a desire to assist in Canada's war effort as any citizen of this Dominion has done. His corporation since the outbreak of the war has done and is doing very important work for Canada and for the cause in the way of building army transport and Universal carriers. The company has placed itself entirely in the hands of the government as to the terms of the contract which it has had.

"The government has insisted on a fixed price as low as we could find any basis for asking, we worked out an overriding provision was inserted that the books of the company would be audited and if the stipulated price produced a profit more than a fair return on the capital employed, that price would be reduced accordingly. In other words the work of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, its attitude toward the war, and its ability to assist in Canada's war effort, have been so far as I have been able to observe, beyond criticism."

Statement in Senate by Senator Raoul Dandurand, Government Leader in the Senate

"Ford Motor Company of Canada is doing its utmost to serve the interests of the country, the War Supply Board and the Government."

Statement in the Senate by Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative Leader in the Senate

"They (Ford dealers in Canada) are numbered in the hundreds. And the number of employees of these dealers is very large. The ramifications are tremendous. For all the purposes concerning us, the Company is a Canadian company, and I was glad to the assurance given by the honourable leader of the House my own feeling that those at the head of the Ford Motor Company of Canada and throughout that Company's organization. They will assist us to the utmost in our war work."

LINDBROOK

The recent storms have played havoc with the gardens here, but the crops seem O.K.

The new Mennonite Church here is about completed, in fact far enough advanced to hold services in.

Mr. J. H. Bowes is also building a new modern house nearby so that corner will look like another little "burg" soon, especially if a few more buildings go up on that corner.

We hear that on Sunday night the electrical storm put the guitars out of commission on a car here on the highway necessitating it being hauled into town.

Mr. and Mrs. C. K stanson of Lashburn, Sask. motored here to visit Mr. C.'s brother Mr and Mrs. F. Kortzman and fam.; it was distrigt. Miss Thelma Kortzman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs F Kortzman returned with them to Lashburn on a visit.

Mrs. ——— (nee Miss Evelyn Glover) of McLaughlin, Alta. is here on a visit to her aunt and uncle Mr and Mrs. W. Glenn of Lindbrook

Mr Jas Bracegirdle and daughters Mair and Fanny left on Sunday on a visit to the coast.

The annual School picnic was held at Lake View on the same day as the Old Timers' Picnic, so the young and old purchased forces for a good time, rarce ete ete, in fact all enjoyed themselves and luckily the weather held fine for it

Last Friday night a double wedding dance was held at the home of Mr and Mrs. Ivan Sweden here. The dance was given in honor of Miss present.

Friday and Saturday Shows At Tofield Hereafter

Commencing Friday and Saturday, July 19th and 20th Sharp's Shows will present their weekly show at Tofield on Friday and Saturday of each week There will be no show on Tuesday July 16th.

This Friday and Saturday July 19th and 20th "Rulers of the Sea" will be shown. This is stirring sea story of the early days on the north Atlantic when the world said passage by steam power couldn't be done and three men proved that it could. A story of tender love and heroic deeds, in construction thrilling marine ture and talks by different Canadian ministers and statesmen every thing else, until I don't know whether to give them my old clothes for rags or wear them instead of buying and eats, money for war bonds. We have to save and use metal, rags, paper, stamps, silver paper and even food scraps for feed purposes.

We are now having our respirators fitted with another guyet against a new kind of gas.

Two nights ago we heard our first real bombs and it was a very interesting certain it was a bomb, but it was Germans and it very loud explosion. Flames and searchlights were in action and guns in the distance—I believe motored up to Edmonton to see what happened. All A.R.P. people were called out. (Later). I now know but must not tell.

All children are now being evacuated from London and I was sent to Wales—as from there round to Nottingham—as was to be the most dangerous part. Louis the King and Queen also were in Nottingham when we made a fresh evacuation is being arranged. She is very kind and as per her parents, but the long winter of suspense and more the very real anxiety, with prospects of a real invasion, have told on telling on them. I am well and sleep well, but each morning I thank God for another night's rest and I think how marvellous life will seem when this nightmare is over.

You will know how we are all looking out for Empire Day, and though on Englishman made a forced landing on some downs in Hampshire, the inhabitants were all armed with pistol forks, scythes, guns and any weapon they could get hold of. Many of the boys are in France etc. are appalling, and no one can say — At Dad on the south-east coast, the earth trembled with the fighting going on in France —it was the day the French tanks attacked the German ones. At Ramsgate they are now so near that but as yet it is the only Channel port they have not had any ships are there pounding them in somewhat spectacularly, as they have been withheld from us for days in order to give nothing away to the enemy, but I think we are gaining and the Royal Air Force is more hopeful, All these Cabinet changes and Army changes have been very disturbing, but at least as England is to wake up, she is now wide awake, and both ourselves and our property are at the disposal of the government, while our bulldog characteristics are aroused to the full — even I and women like me would gladly shoot Germans on the notion if the chance arose, and I have seven crates of practicals on the eyes of old people, at the arrival of the contingent of the boys from Canada. We are now up against it with our backs to the wall, but we shall conquer this evil and I don't think it will be so very long that this war-period will continue. One of our greatest dangers is complacency, although many have been lectured as to-day they are storming all Germany and Austrian women between 16 and 60, in the fields and Man. Lucky they are to get off so safely.

N. — don't let us give you a fallacy. — we are facing and preparing for all these possibilities, but they may never happen, though it is generally thought that some of it will. Outwardly life goes on as usual and parts of England are so peaceful as ever and not in much danger unless the enemy were in win which of course they will not do. You will probably remember I live at the very Hub of the preparations and defences and that these conditions don't exist over the greater part of England. Still the dangers are very real and it is only by the courage, endurance and sacrifice of the whole nation that England will be saved You know we have the Queen of Holland here with her cabinet, they visited ——— and we have many Dutch sailors here, as well as refugees of all nationalities. I suppose you know the Danes are real barbarians. Being a danger zone we do not have soldiers billeted on us, neither are we allowed to take in evacuated children. The whole idea is to prevent crowding where raids are likely. The poor mothers are again having to decide to send their children away or risk having them in raids. It is not only the chance of injury, the raids injure their nerves. During our blackout time last week, I noticed my Lupins in glorious bloom and quite spontaneously wondered how they could be

ALL BEHIND CANADA

ber Northwesters, Winnipeg, June 19, 1940, in an editorial on French Canada, we read the following:

"The people of all races who make up Canada's population stand firmly behind Canada. No one, either by word or deed, should work against this spirit of unity. That is of nation, al importance. Every Canadian who wishes to retain his personal and political freedom should know that this is the time for help.'

blooming. I hope soon to be able to give you the best of news, I think we shall soon have great victories. We are having our rations reduced this week to a pound butter, ½ pound sugar and less bacon per person, but that will enable the amount of butter we had during the last war.

Mr. R's sons are doing good work in the air force, Hector back again at battleship and I. is at the National Physical Laboratory testing new inventions and already has received some of the Canadian boys spoon on the wireless and I hope to be able to speak with the same accent as they. We are thankful to have them come and of course you are sending a big proportion according to your population. I was surprised to learn Canada had only 11,000,000 people and London has 4,000,000, for your planes. Our men have right on their side and they accomplish miracles. The pilots at the front have only a slogan "Ten before breakfast." They seem to use up Hurricanes and Spitfires. I wonder if you have them. God bless all the boys who come to our aid from overseas. Love from us all. Please write and tell you the worst is over.

WITH THE C.W.A. OVERSEAS

The vastly changed military situations overseas has naturally necessitated alterations in the Canadian Legion War Services' entire programme among the Canadian Forces there.

In this, the most crucial hour in the history of Britain, and the Empire, there can be no room for effort, no matter how commendable under other circumstances, unless aimed at the one target—to lick the Germans.

Legion officers overseas are as much in this fight as the rest of the population in the United Kingdom and are ready to do their share—as veterans of the first C.E.F. they will do it well—in helping to defend those shores behind which stands the last bulwark of democracy and Christian ideals.

Mr. Baker didn't normally call on the council, he desired to see Mr. Newbury regarding a piece of road, and this matter being disposed of, the member chatted with the council for a few minutes. THE RED CROSS

AT THE organization meeting of the Tofield Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society, the writer almost requested and was appointed "publicity agent." During the intervening period we have from time to time published news of local and district Red Cross doings. On occasion we have "spread" the story, at other times we have "soft pedalled" as regards Red Cross News. The sole object of this was, as far as our services helped, to obtain a steady and unfailing stream of support for the society, both as regards contributions of money, etc. and labor performed. It is so easy for the public to become very enthusiastic at first and then having enjoyed the thrill of helping, relax.

As long as this war lasts and for many months thereafter the Canadian Red Cross Society will have urgent work to do involving giving succor and aid to those in distress. This work can be made more effective and more complete if the citizens of Canada help the Red Cross now. At the very best the procedure of sending material out from the provinces and then to the districts and on to the homes, and then all the way back again is a slow one. It is only by continuous work on the part of all as long as the need remains, can a procedure of this kind ensure a steady unfailing stream of finished goods arriving at provincial centres or Eastern headquarters.

Already within the Tofield society quite a number of ladies have done really splendid work, as regards sewing and knitting. Organizations in the country too have more than proved their worth. At some future time we will be pleased to make more specific mention of some of the really excellent work done, but for the immediate present, our problem is to arouse interest to get more work done.

There recently was announced the formation of a Red Cross Sewing Group which is to meet at the Institute Rooms each Saturday night. Last Saturday night there were only three ladies present. Sewing by the ladies of the Red Cross where ever they may be, is probably the least efficient way of getting the maximum quantity of goods in the least possible time. But what the unselfish voluntary work of tens of thousands of Canada's women lack in factory precision efficiency, is more than made up by the inspiration created within themselves, and the inspiration given to the members of the different fighting services. For the time does come when the garment made in peaceful rural areas, is given to a wounded-man or a distressed refugee within the theatres of war. And knowing this, the maker of that garment cannot help but be lifted up by the service she is rendering. Moreover, the boys in the fighting services live with their heads and bodies where they are and their hearts where they came from. And they like to feel that their home folk is with them in the task they have undertaken.

As before mentioned the Institute Rooms have been placed at the disposal of ladies wishing to sew for the Red Cross on Saturday nights. Last Saturday night the attendance was three. Could it not be six this coming Saturday? And nine the next, and twelve the next and so on until about twenty attend? If so, the purpose of this article will be accomplished.

"Nurse Edith Cavell" Showing Friday and Saturday Next

Few Canadians will need introduction to the name Edith Cavell. Born in Norfolk, England, a nurse by profession, Miss Cavell worked consistantly for the British soldiers in the Great War. Hated by the Germans for her part in helping British soldiers to escape, she finally was captured, caught and despite frantic effort on the part of neutral ambassadors, was executed. No single act by the Germans did more to inflame the British mind or to align world opinion against Germany. We can assume no picture with greater appeal for any power or one which could scar far more deeply Starring Edna May Oliver with George Sanders, together with many other screen celebrities. Additional features include comedy, news reel etc. If you have not done so be sure to register for Dish night Friday. The award is now $15.00. You may be the lucky winner.

Show starts at 9:00 p.m. Friday night and Saturday night.

Tax Discount Off After July 31st

Wednesday, July 31, is the last day for the 10 per cent discount on Municipal District of Cornhill taxes. Owing to doubt to the ruling whether there has not been quite so many taking advantage of the discount this year as there were last year. But there are still several days and if the weather becomes fine bad allows travel, no doubt many will take advantage of the saving. The secretary would like these ratepayers who are intending taking the discount to come in as early as possible so as not to make the last day too heavy.

HOG PRODUCTION FIGURES

582,982 hogs were marketed in Alberta in the first 26 weeks of 1940 as compared to 375,172 marketed during the same period last year. The increase represents an advance of about 56 per cent.

Further analysis indicates that the quality of the hogs marketed is being maintained. Almost 85 per cent of the hogs graded alive to date have been selects.

Low grade hogs represent an actual loss to the producer. Alberta swine producers lost over $800,000.00 in 1939 through the sale of hogs that graded heavy or lower Quality and proper Finish is necessary.

ALBERTA HONEY

Alberta's honey production was valued at $170,000 according to figures released by Hon. D. B. Mullen, Minister of Agriculture. In 1937 when the industry got under way the valuation was $60,000. At that time there were 350 beekeepers in Alberta while in 1939 the number is given as 2,800.

CHANGE OF NAME

Names of 29 Alberta citizens have been changed since the beginning of the war, according to reports from the provincial secretary's department. These included enlisted men and university students. Since the Act was passed in 1916, 236 Albertans have taken advantage of its provisions. Applications for the change may be made only by British subjects by birth or by naturalization. Notice of such application must be published in the applicants local paper and in the Alberta Gazette. The original fee of $62 was reduced to $30 by the present government some years ago.

SCENIC SKYWAY

"As far as I know there is nothing in compare with it in scenic beauty on the North American continent." H. E. Rae, mayor of Hinsville, Ontario, and newly elected president of the Canadian Weekly and Newspaper Association, declared upon his return to Edmonton from the Banff Jasper highway. Mr. Rae boarded a group of one hundred editors from all over Canada who made the trip. It was the culminating feature in the program of the annual convention of the association, held at Calgary recently. Agreement in the soundness of the highway was voiced by others of the party.

QUALITY BUTTER

Alberta butter makers won more than half of the total prizes at the Calgary exhibition and stampede, according to word received by the provincial department of agriculture. This record is in keeping with the rapid advance made in the province during recent years. Alberta creameries won 51 per cent of the awards, Manitoba was next with 40.3 per cent. Saskatchewan took 2.4 per cent of the prizes while B.C. and Quebec followed with 2.7 and 2.1 per cent respectively.

VETERAN VOLUNTEERS

Formed under order in council of the provincial government to act as special constables and to help safeguard the province in wartime, two battalions each of 700 officers and men are to be organized as the Veterans' Volunteer Reserve in Edmonton. The order was passed at the request of the veterans and is being acted upon at 300 points in the province, it is reported. A force of 10,000 men is expected. The scheme is entirely voluntary and without pay. No age limit is being set and reasonable physical fitness will entry membership in the reserve.

DISTRIBUTION CENTRE

Confidence that the provincial Normal school building at Camrose will be in shape to handle British guest children this week was expressed by T. R. Blaine, Superintendent of the Child Welfare branch when it boarding the children. Provincial authorities announced recently that the Camrose building will be used as a distributing depot from which new arrivals will be sent out to approved homes throughout Alberta. Mr. Blaine described the school as "well set up for the purpose" and said that "no major alterations" would be necessary. Due to the postponement of child transport the building will not be immediately needed.

FIELD NOTES

Crop conditions in Alberta are good, according to Hon. D. B. Mullen, Minister of Agriculture in a department report. Recent rains benefitted crops in areas where drought conditions were becoming serious. Haying has begun and yields are reported as very satisfactory. Grasshoppers damaged certain areas in the extreme south-east of the province, while local hailstorms destroyed some crops in several districts, more rain is needed in some sections to properly fill the crop, though conditions of all field crops have improved greatly, said Mr. Mullen.

PROHIBITION STAYS

Charlottetown:—Prince Edward Island will continue to be Canada's only "dry" province. Complete returns in the liquor plebiscite held in June show 16,426 for retaining prohibition and 8,861 for sale of beer and wine. The soldiers' vote was 1626 to 26 in favour of repeal. Under legislation now in force, liquor can be purchased in government stores only with a doctor's prescription.

Edmonton:—Provincial employment service figures show a decrease of 527 in those seeking jobs for the week ending July 6 over the corresponding week of 1939. Registered with the bureau are 6,412 Alberta men and women. This includes 1,286 male applicants in Edmonton and 1,901 in Calgary.

Notice of such application must be published in the applicants local paper and in the Alberta Gazette. The original fee of $62 was reduced to $30 by the present government some years ago.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By W. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

Naul Germany, now has under its control, either directly or indirectly almost the whole of Western Europe; an area containing a population of about 200 million people. This area never has been self-sufficing in wheat or rye, or in feeding stuffs for stock; because of this, therefore, and because of the poor harvest this year, and the damage done to crops by armies, it is fully expected that most of these European countries will face a scarcity of foodstuffs this coming autumn.

Of one thing we can be quite certain: that vigorous and urgent appeals in the United States, in South America, and even in Canada and Australia, will be made by Germany to ship food to such countries as France, Belgium, Holland and Denmark, in order to relieve, if they can, the intense sufferings of the people from hunger.

These appeals will be strong and hard to deny, but if the more intense miseries and even greater sufferings of British people are not to be prolonged, and German aggression aided, then these appeals must always be firmly resisted; for it is as certain as night follows day that every shipment of wheat or flour sent by blockade-bursters to Germany embodies a weapon which will be used against Britain, which means, how does one say this, please."

The book offers numerous pieces of sound advice and cautions men not to be too impatient if they don't understand some of the Icelandic words and phrases. Briefly, the book is a guide to Icelandic people anywhere, on houses, in cafes, and anywhere — and their habits

RED CROSS BLANKETS NOT SENT TO FRANCE

Blankets contributed to the Canadian Red Cross Society during its recent appeal have not been sent to France, Dr. Fred W. Routley, said yesterday.

"Although these blankets were intended for the suffering refugees and wounded soldiers in France, we couldn't take a chance on their falling into German hands," the national commissioner said. "The first shipment had been authorized before the French Armistice, but we were able to divert the blankets to England, where they will be stored until needed. The remainder, about 60,000, will be held in Canada."

Dr. Routley gave assurance that every blanket contributed would be delivered in the days to come. Already, he said, the Canadian Red Cross had been asked by the Dominion Government to loan a quantity of blankets to equip the colossal trains carrying refugee children from Britain to destinations in Canada.

"We shall have blankets, sheets, pillow cases, towels, and so on waiting for the children at the port of arrival," Dr. Routley said.

Among the blankets contributed during the Canadian Red Cross appeal were 30,000 from the paper companies of Canada.

Lakeshore B.B. Team Wins Coveted Award

(Gen. G. Abernathy)

Seven or eight years ago Boys' Basketball was started or revived in Tofield, under the enthusiasm of Cuff Bintzmen and H. Swift, a league of several teams was formed. A year or later a group of boys from Lakeshore formed a team and entered the league making a local league of five teams. From these five teams members were chosen to attempt to obtain the Edmonton Exhibition B.B. Shield at the Tournament held each year during the Exhibition. After passing the local league brake up leaving the Lakeshore team as the only representative boys of Tofield Basketball who with the assistance of from one to three fans from Tofield who joined the team have contested the Shield at the Exhibition for the last five years. While they have had varying success, have come home each year with an alibi—"If" until July 18th, 1940 when they captured the coveted shield.

Basketball is the most popular sport game in the U.S.A. drawing more people to see the games, than Baseball and Foot ball both put together, last year. It is a game that challenges the best there is in physical fitness, without the danger of serious injury. It is fast, furious and thrilling.

The team is proud to bring the shield to Tofield but have one regret that there is not more interest in the game in the district. There should be one team North of town, one south of town and one or two in town, at least. Having a league from which to draw to play outside teams.

With a little support from the district there is no reason why the shield should not remain in Tofield for some time but with-it it possible some other town will get it for next year. So let's get behind the team and keep Tofield on the map for the most popular sport in North America.

Well Known Old Timer Passes On

On Monday of this week the Tofield district was pained and shocked to hear of the death in an Edmonton hospital of William L. Roberge Mr (Bill) Roberge was a familiar figure in Tofield and district for a number of years and there were few who did not know him. Kindly and hearty, he was one of the few typical old time western figures. Mr. Roberge had only been ill for about two weeks and the end came on Monday with shocking suddenness.

William L. Roberge was born at Winchester, Ontario in 87p and died at Royal Alexandra hospital Edmonton on Monday July 22nd, 1940 aged 61 years Will his parents became to Alberta in 1888 and to the Tofield district in 1902. In 1909 he was joined in matrimony at Vancouver to Miss Georgia McDaniel. He leaves to mourn his loss a loving wife; one son Charles, who is over seas with the Canadian Expedition-ary forces, one brother Albert of Edmonton, two sisters, Mrs. Cameron of Cessa B.C. and Mrs. Frank Harris of Langley Prairie, B.C.

The funeral was held on Wednesday, July 24th, service being held at the United Church, Rev. D. E. Allan officiating. Interment was made in the Tofield cemetery.

THUNDER FROM THE STANDS

by Vincent Richards

Chapter 1

It was spring. At first, emerging from the shade of the clubhouse into the brilliance of the Carolina sunshine, Lex Rollins saw the court and the surrounding stands slightly out of focus. He blinked as he went forward, drinking deeply of the still, cool air.

The patter of applause, at first slight, became louder as it approached to where referee, ball boys and officials were waiting grouped at one side of the court, near a small table. He peeled off his sweater, placed three of his racquets on a chair, examining one. The applause started again and he looked over his shoulder to see Don Clark, his thin figure outlined against the green background, coming forward.

"Howya, Rolly"? Clark asked.

"Rotten."

They laughed.

"To work"? Clark asked.

"Sooner we start, sooner we're through."

The thin young man made a gesture with one hand. "Hope that court's all dried up. Looks damp in that one corner."

Len shrugged. "It didn't rain much, just a couple of hours. We've played on worse."

"Save we have! Let's go."

They walked out on the sun-flooded court. Racquets fell noncha1antly, sure-ly; the ball danced back and forth between them as they warmed up.

Len was not afraid He had reached the final at Aiken. The tournament all the members of the Davis Cup team had played in, the toughest meet every Davis Cup hopeful had entered in an attempt to win recognition. And he had reached the final. Only this young thin man across the net from him—Don Clark—America's number one man in the world's number three, remained. Len was sure of a place on the team. They needed him to help try to wrest the historic Davis Cup away from the indomitable Frenchmen, bring it back to America.

He was a success! That's what Grace Ian wanted him to be. Only she—this was a hell of a time to be thinking about Grace Worthington. They were through, finished, washed up. And it was all her fault. She had let her fool ideas about his not playing tennis. As if a year or two of playing could affect his whole life. He was only twenty-two! His whole life lay before him. He'd never had anything—always had to work. Why couldn't she see him and understand that he had to have a year or two of fun before he settled down? And this sort of fun was innocent. If he batted around with other girls, or did a bit of drinking or anything like that —then she'd have something to kick about. But playing tennis, and playing it well enough to reach the Aiken final—

If it was as silly unimportant as Grace claimed, then why did standing out here with the unusual sound of the racquets in his ears with Don Clark across the net dancing nonchalantly to and fro, with the verbosonal thunder from the stands in his ears, with this bandleader rampant within him—why did all of this fill him out of himself and make him feel like God?

That last sense with Grace could it really have been six months ago?) returned clearly, vividly. It was the day before he was leaving to play on the Southern Championships in Florida. "Marry me now, Gracie," he had pleaded. "Right away. We'll go there together."

"No, Len," she had replied quietly. "I'm afraid. You've promised too many times to give up tennis— and you're still playing. You'll probably be playing for ever."

"But it isn't forever, Grace; can't you see that? I think I'm on my way to win a place on the Davis Cup team. That's something I've dreamed of ever since I first took a racquet in my hand. And now that my ambition may be realized I can't give it up, I can't. I'd be miserable, and you would too, knowing you were keeping me from something I wanted to do as much as I want to go to Europe and help win back the Cup."

He had wanted to take her in his arms but she had taken a step backward.

"No, Len. Not this time. You want to play tennis, big-time tennis. And I don't want you to. I don't want to be a tennis bum's wife, traveling all over the world living out of a suitcase. So this is good-bye forever —unless you change your mind. If you get a job and feel you still want me, send me word me a wire and I'll come."

And then she had turned quickly and run from him and he had thought that she was crying as she ran. . .

* * *

The voice from the top of the referee's ladder broke in on his thoughts.

"Len Rollins versus Don Clark for the Aiken Club championship. Best three sets out of five Mr. Rollins will serve. Are you ready, gentlemen? Linesmen ready?"

"Play."

Like a lord getting ready for flight Len paused on his left foot, served Clark's return of his service was weak. Len went quickly to the net for the kill. "Fifteen-love," came the voice of the referee from above.

Len forgot now, as he always did once a match was under way that people inhabited the earth and that there were grass and sky and air. The crowd in the surrounding stands fell away. A girl named Grace Worthington did not exist. The white ball flying back and forth, the boundaries of the court, the sloping net, Don Clark, crouching, running, swooping on the other side of it—of these only was he aware. The new was his only and only world.

They changed courts and Len relaxed, with cool elation, that he was leading two games to one. They paused at the table to sip lemon water and wipe the racquet handles. If he could break Clark's service, then he'd have a lead the Davis Cup star would never overcome. It was going to be a battle all right, but he would win.

He grasped his racquet tightly; the ball spun up off the grass. He crashed it to Clark's backhand. The return from Clark was to his own backhand. Drop-shot. Clark reaching frantically, but Len was able to assemble to do anything with it. Coolly Len banged it across.

Back it came, low and hard. Again the racquet flashed and again the server "aced" was good He was "on" to-day all right.

The lob was high and deep. He had to go back For back to his left —toward the corner. He ran excitedly in pursuit of the ball already over his head and quickly descending.

The ground suddenly opened under him. He fost no longer were on firm grass. He was straddling in the air. His arms flayed but failed to find anything to cling to. Don Clark's words flashed dazzlingly in his brain: "Hope the court's all dried up. Looks damp in that corner."

He went down heavily, trying desperately to keep his left leg free— and failing. A bomb of agony seemed to crash sharply, yet peculiarly not dull. And then his face went down. But only for a second it was dead. Then searing, wrenching pain—pain like thousands of nails being driven simultaneously trough the ankle— gripped him. A dull and merciful blanket shut out everything.

Getting the job hadn't been so difficult, after all. He had read in the newspaper that Princess Anne, princess who had found a position to do here zalready in an exclusive women's shop at fifty-seventh street. Why then, Len had decided, wouldn't a sporting goods shop appreciate having as Talbot's with stores throughout the country, possibly want to have someone like him serve their tennis department?

At nine-thirty the morning after his release from the hospital he presented himself at the executive offices of Talbot's Fifth Avenue store. After a short wait he was ushered into a large, luxurious office by a sleek young armchair facing the tall, heavy-set, grey-haired sporting manager.

"I read all about it in the papers," Justin said. "Most lamentable."

Len nodded glumly. "My left tough breaks, I guess. Naturally," he went on, "I want to work; forget about tennis now that I'll never be able to play again. I'm looking for a job, Mr. Justin, and I thought perhaps Talbot's might find me of some value."

Justin was silent for a long time. Len watched his face eagerly, but his expression was inscrutable. Only the soft staccato drumming of the well-kept fingernails relieved the tension.

Finally Justin nodded: "You could not be averse, Mr. Rollins, to working in the racquets department? Most of our salesmen start at twenty dollars a week, with commissions of course. But because of the value of your name associated with Talbot's tennis department we would start you with a slightly higher salary. Say twenty-five dollars.

Len leaned forward in his chair. "If it's all the same to you, Mr. Justin," he said evenly, "I'd just as soon start at twenty, like the rest of the beginners."

The sales manager's eyes widened slightly in surprise, but only for a instant. Then suddenly the tattoo against the blotter stopped. "You start at nine tomorrow, Mr. Rollins. Report to Mr. Weir in the racquets department on the fifth floor; he'll show you around."

Len's heart accelerated. "Thanks, Mr. Justin, I'll do my best."

The station he felt as he left the Talbot Building defied analysis. His step became springy despite the limp as he made his way to the nearest telegraph office and wrote on a pad a few blanks:

SECURED POSITION WITH TALBOT'S AT TWENTY PER WEEK MAY I EXPECT YOU TO ANSWER ST ANDREW HOTEL LEN

And as he dozed that evening on the modern and impressive St. Andrew, after a day of happy, fantastic dreams wherein he was buried under mountainous orders and rescued from lowly salesman to Henry Justin, the telegram arrived:

ARRIVING TOMORROW 6.15 PM MEET ME IF POSSIBLE MUCH LOVE GRACE

There were three other salesmen in the tennis department. Besides the youngest, named terribly inappropriately Lex Lamb, actually here in the flesh working at his side. He was a tennis enthusiast and had seen Len play more than once. The second salesman,Charley, was slightly condescending. Len could afford to be, as a pose more than anything else; Charley was known to be tried to get over on Len Rollins that for all his past glories he was, after all, just a salesman like the rest of them. The third clerk, Martens, was definitely unfriendly. The grip of his hand lacked warmth and his tone was curty as he was introduced. Len wondered if perhaps fear for his job prompted Martens's unfriendliness.

"Of course," Weir, the manager, explained, "you understand that any customers who come in and ask specifically for you are your customers. There's a notice in the morning paper."

Len procured a newspaper and clipped from the first four pages before he saw set in a small shining square, a dignified announcement:

TALBOTS

Takes pleasure in Announcing the Appointment of Mr. Leonard Rollins Amateur Tennis Champion

beginning today, June 27th

At first he felt a certain sense of resentment toward Talbot's for having publicized his position. But the advertisement was honest; no sneer plenty of customers his way, and they'd more than pay for their cost commission of the total sale. They'd even about sorry, very sorry —he and Grace.

Funny how love affected a girl Look what she'd given up to marry him. He wondered whether, if he were in Grace's place he would exchange an readily all the wealth and comfort and security that was Talbot's for poverty and the work truck racquet salesman job for love.

But he'd make it all up to her. He'd devote his life to making her happy; he'd never hurt her or cause her to shed a single tear. He'd love her as long as he lived.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan."

The "Crop Testing Plan" which is now busy work it's tenth year of work, will test for resistance-to-variety and for content or absence of mildews, some 30,000 individual farmers' fields of wheat.

At the first field day held this year in Manitoba, one farmer submitted a sample which he declared was pure Thatcher, and he had purchased this seed, and sown it on a large acreage on that he would not suffer any more losses from rust. The sample turned out to be pure Reward, which is not resistant to rust. If the farmer had not submitted this sample to the "Crop Testing Plan", he would have reseeded the same seed next year, and should next year be a rust year then unquestionably the farmer would stand to lose many hundred of dollars.

The "Crop Testing Plan" has served untold numbers of farmers from similar losses in the past and in the years to come; for it has been found that 10 percent of the samples submitted for testing proved on analysis to be entirely different varieties than the farmers thought they were growing.

I strongly recommend farmers who can to be attended one of the many "Crop Testing Plan" field days now being held throughout the West, and see this work with their own eyes.

Morale Rearmament

London, July 15:—National campaign for strengthening morale has been launched throughout Britain by the forces of Moral Rearmament, with the full co-operation of the civil home defence authorities in many centres.

A leaflet entitled "Morale—How to Play your part" has been issued by the lord mayors of York, Sheffield, and Nottingham, for distribution to every house, and the authorities through Britain are preparing to follow the lead. A new series of short articles is appearing in the provincial press, headed by "Mr. Sensible's" column, illustrating how M. R. A. people are spreading courage and confidence.

In opening the first civic assembly of the campaign, held recently, the Lord Mayor of York said: "Moral Rearmament shows us how to make a new world. M. R. A. workers are doing the duty which the country has required for years. If the morale of the people is maintained and strengthened, as Moral Rearmament is doing, it will bring about an early completion of the war." Chief constable of Nottingham, Captain Athony, Brigadier General Peter Winser, a major from the R.E.F., and girls from the Women's Land Army and mayor of Newcastle

SURPLUS NEEDED

Edmonton:—W. R. Dowsett, Winnipeg, general manager of C.M.S. western lines, isn't worried about the prospects of Canada's surplus wheat. There was every reason to expect that it would eventually prove an asset, he said, pointing to the possibility of Canadian wheat being needed after the war to stave Europe from near starvation. He added that the United Kingdom would continue to require a yearly average of five bushels per capita or roughly 250,000,000 bushels annually. Surplus wheat "gets used up, you know," smiled the railway-man.

IMPORTANT MATTERS—

THERE ARE TWO matters which are becoming increasingly important to Western Canada as each day passes, the storage of the coming wheat crop and the price to be paid for it. There is also a third matter of equal importance connected with the coming harvest, how to finance the farmer who, due to inability of elevators to accept his grain, must store it, yet is under obligation to meet the usual run of fall accounts. Already those connected with the grain trade, the Line Elevator Association, the Alberta Pool, and the Grain Growers Association have made contact with government authorities to the end that chaos should not reign when harvest time arrives, which is only a few short weeks distant.

At present it would appear as if only those who are fortunate enough to thresh early are going to be able to have their grain stored in the ordinary way, first at country elevators and then at the terminals. No doubt every improvement possible in storage conditions will be made before harvest, but unless some miraculous change occurs in the meantime, a large number of farmers who have not had to do so before will have to provide their own storage facilities for as, at present, unknown length of time.

Naturally this is going to raise the problem of advances, how much and by whom. There are really only two sources of funds from which farmers could obtain funds, the banks and the government. It is hardly likely the banks would embark unassisted upon such a wide scale loaning of funds accepting wheat on the farm as sole security, but it is unlikely that the government could perfect an organization in such a short time, capable of adequately handling it. Obviously then, the solution lies in using the banks' organization and the government's money. The banks could be paid a reasonable and adequate sum for their services, the loan or advance being purely a government risk.

Judging from present press announcements, it is likely that wheat will be pegged at 70c basis No. 1 at Fort William. If this is so any advance if it is going to of real assistance to the Western farmer can not be much less than the total. At the best farmers are going to be cramped financially and every cent less than the full pegged price will cramp them correspondingly more.

We are of the opinion that the pegged price is too low. Admitting that this figure is not considered an adequate amount even by those who give it, but rather is a sum fixed to prevent the price of wheat becoming less, we still believe that it is too low. The prices of most articles the farmer buys are out of line with the prices of the things he sells and while one does not expect absolute equality of income, the industrial life of the country cannot continue to enjoy prosperity at the expense of the agricultural half without at some time or another an untoward incident occurring.

TRADE ROUTES AND FREEDOM

By H.G.L. Strange
Director, Research Department, Saskatchewan Grain Company Limited.

China for hundreds of years, has been the most peaceful country in the world, and has ever believed in freedom of international trade. The integrity of her territory and her freedom of trade for years was guaranteed both indirectly and in some cases directly, by a number of leading nations, but in spite of these guarantees, China was forced in the last three years Japan has been invading Chinese territory, and finally has managed to cut off from China's Government and the Chinese armies all trade routes for wheat, other foodstuffs, munitions, materials, equipment and supplies, excepting the route through Indo-China.

The Japanese have now demanded of Great Britain that while the countries of the world shall still be permitted to ship war materials and supplies to China, no British subject shall not be permitted to ship and sell the same materials to China; and in order to enforce this prohibition against China, Japan has demanded that the British Government shall close the one remaining trade route left to China, that is the road from British Burma to Chungking, the new Chinese capital.

The British, it seems, have given way to this Japanese demand, and are making preparations to close the Burma route, then, of course, making it increasingly difficult for China to withstand the Japanese aggression.

The United States has protested to Great Britain against her proposed action, for the United States, says Mr. Hull, U.S.A. Secretary of State, now believes in the encouragement of international trade and as the United States has a keen interest in maintaining open all the trade routes in the world, including the trade route to China through British Burma.

The British explanation of their own action, in brief, is as follows:—"The British Empire is the one country which alone in the world is now actively fighting and pouring out its blood and treasure for the maintenance of liberty, freedom and democracy, and we are engaged at this moment in Europe to the full extent of our powers, opposing those who would deprive the whole world of these precious liberties. We are heavily interested, however, in maintaining trade with China and we believe too with the U.S.A., that China should receive all the war materials and munitions she can import, and on an equality with Japan, we find there is a limit to our own military powers, for we cannot all alone fight in Europe and Africa to defend freedom and democracy, and at the same time help another war to maintain free-dom of trade and trade routes in Asia."

Great Britain, too, might well add something else, which is that while she believes firmly in the preservation of liberty, of freedom, of democracy and of international trade, just as does the United States, and while we cannot defend these things without ammunitions by her own unaided efforts, yet if the United States would join forces with her, then perhaps both of them together could defend and preserve democracy, and in addition could maintain important trade routes not only through British Burma, but also most other parts of the world. -

The Genius

A new recruit was asked by his officer to find the ship's position.

The recruit returned after a long absence and handed the officer a piece of paper showing their position. The officer immediately came to attention and saluted. The new recruit said: "Why did you salute me, sir?"

The officer replied: "I did not salute you, I saluted the King. According to the position you have worked out, we are now in Buckingham Palace."

ROYAL CANADIAN AIR FORCE

A preparatory school for the future pilots, air gunners and air observers of the Royal Canadian Air Force, No. 1 initial training school at Toronto is operating at full capacity with twenty months ahead of the original schedule of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. Hundreds of young Canadians have taken the first week's course of basic air force training at this school since it opened to a small introductory class late in April. The graduates have passed on to the next phase of their training either as pilots, air observers, air gunners, or instructors.

The initial training school at Toronto is housed in the renovated and adapted premises of the Eglinton Hunt Club. Two similar schools will be organized elsewhere in Canada. Lounge rooms in the old Toronto hunt club headquarters have lost their history-filling to become lecture rooms with bare floors and blackboards around the walls.

The banquet hall contains long tables and benches; the arena is a drill ground and drill hall. In this big building, young men spend four concentrated weeks in the course which determine their aptitude for training as pilots, observer-navigators or gunners.

Elsewhere they spend much longer training period, yet here in four weeks they are observed most closely, far more than they realize, with the result that a bird's destiny may be determined to a great extent by his conduct during these weeks. And here they all learn the basic essentials of service as members of an air crew.

When a bird enters the school, with a R.A.F.C. badge on his sleeve, he is lowering whether he is to be pilot, air gunner or air observer. He is first indentured and entered in the station strength. He then gets an issue of clothing, drill, overalls, underwear, and into the school training strength and pedestal seat the moment he is enrolled. Then the Commanding Officer addresses the newcomers.

His address is brief and friendly. He reminds the lads that they have been chosen because of their high calibre, and that because of this fact much of the routine is based upon an honour system. He points out that the barbed-wire fence surrounds the station, and that leaves hours are exceptionally free. Men can leave the school any night until 11.30, can obtain passes for leave until midnight. But he stresses that studies are heavy and a man personally determines the work of his destiny by his use or abuse of privileges.

Thereupon the new classmates enter into school life. Homesick he may be, but he is cheered and encouraged ready for physical training at 6:56. Thereafter, with everyone reporting for work at 8 a.m. The day, until 4:30 p.m., is solid with studies in drills, Station Standing Orders, administration, duties of an R.A.F.C. personnel, (pay and casual arms), etc. There is much route marching and drill.

During these studies, the student finds himself undergoing regular physical tests, even more rigid than the original medical examinations prior to his acceptance into the R.C.A.F. Coupled with these are lectures and demonstrations on what to do in certain cases, but a great deal of aerial medicine. He is told of things that happen to airmen at high altitudes, of what happens when they dive too fast to low altitudes, and a great deal of scientific data. He is momentary loss of consciousness which faces a pilot or crew if a plane is forced to dive at terrific speeds, is told how to recognize approach of "blackout" and what to do to avoid it.

All these things he learns during the ground school, which is then followed by similarly such work he writes examinations in a number of either A, B, or C Flight No. 1 Squadron, or a member of D, E, or F Flight of No. 2 Squadron. Then comes another room, another flight follows his flight into B, in which every recruit is busy at every hour of the working day; no time is lost.

Then he reaches the stage where he gets a "trip" in the Link trainer. This is a full size aircraft cockpit, with stubby wings attached, equipped with normal flying instruments, and its movements are controlled mechanically from a real plane. It is connected with instruments at a table where an instructor can sit and watch the student's progress. But the table is outside the Link room, so that the student is alone on his "flight".

The Link trainer is placed in the centre of a circular room which is painted to represent open country. There are mountains, lakes, a storm at one side, open country on another. The objective is to teach the lad to learn how to "feel" the buttons level off his ship, and how to turn, bank, climb and dive.

In between times, the students trained in a nearby research institute or clinic where he is taught the use of oxygen, what effect it has on the human system, why it is used for high altitude flying, and so on. He is also told its dangers, if used to excess, and is given opportunity to have a whiff or two of it.

So, day after day, he travels the concentrated route of study and practical experience. During this period he does not know if he will be a pilot, an observer or a gunner. His enlistment allows his assignment to any of these 3 branches of air crew service. And, almost unknown to him, he is being carefully assigned by his instructors and officers. They call it "reasoning" the embryo officers

At nights he may study or go out. There is considerable freedom in granting late leave passes. He is left to determine his own desires in this course. If he stands high on examinations, stays out late, and conducts himself properly, he is not criticized in general report. But if he stays out late often and fails to exams, it is assumed he is showing little interest in his future. He may be warned once or twice. But, to a great extent, he is largely master of his own destiny. As one officer put it: "He is judged on his life here; he knows well he the sum of his actions here whether they be soft or on pounds, off or on duty."

There is plenty of wholesome entertainment and recreation for the student during his off-hours. There is a swimming pool, and the management of a former Canadian swimming champion. There are Y.M.C.A. tennis tables and a Rhumba band to flood the school with invitations to dances, and there are movies and free tickets. There is regular Sunday church service. Recreation facilities offered by nearby churches such as cocktail dances and so on.

There is much of high-class preparatory school atmosphere about the whole school. Discipline is strict and duty; officers are saluted and addressed with briskness and courtesy. But they smile as they return the salutes, and they try to get across an air of friendliness and camaraderie.

Their success in this regard is better than the boys themselves feel what is in like to be a long way from home among high-spirited companions who do a lot of kidding and ragging in leisure hours. If a lad seems to be too quiet or dependent, officers go out of their way to chat with him and the Y.M.C.A. organization quietly starts to work at interesting the lad in hobbies, games or talk. Incidentally, the whole syllabus of duties provides one full afternoon a week for games such as bowling, baseball, swimming and so on.

Under these conditions the lads work out their own future. They come to personality. But when they are paraded before the command and told they are being assigned to flying duties, whatever position or gunnery school. Ninety of every hundred want to be pilots. But the chief of the Air Force is "The best man for the job."

It's tough sometimes to tell a lad he is going to gunnery school when your heart is set on being dropped up in a pilot's job," said one officer. "But we try to break it gently. We explain that members of each group are essential to our future air forces, that they will make as good a cause. And we try to explain that in the particular lad has been categorized to another air grade. They take it like men, usually."

CANADIANA

HOME UNITY

Edmonton:—The visit of Their Majesties the King and Queen last year, and now the war have greatly increased the unity of Canada, according to Rt. Rev. Philip Carrington, Anglican Bishop of Quebec, who last week made his first visit to this city. The turn of events in France has been "a great shock to French Canadians," stated Bishop Carrington. "They have a closer tie now with Britain than with France and their unity is really wonderful."

FREEDOM WINS

Quebec:—It was not given to dictators to conquer the world, Sir Edward Beatty, head of the C.P.R. told a recent convention of railway men, because free men would always be able to meet their threat. In war, he continued, dictatorships were bound to be more efficient because they really are camps of armed slaves Sir Edward called the present conflict a struggle to preserve "all those things which we as North American regard as more precious than life itself."

DISAPPOINTED SENATOR

Ottawa:—Senator A. D. McRae of Vancouver is disappointed with proceedings in the red chamber. Business is rushed too much, he complained. "I am pleading for a different session next time from the kind of session we have had this year," he said. "So far as I am concerned I won't few. I have earned my board here." The senator indicated he was going home to look after his business at the coast.

BI MINERS UNCHANGED

Winnipeg:—Business conditions remained unchanged throughout Canada for the last week, according to the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association report. Calgary offers report appreciable improvement in building supplies, groceries and automobile accessories.

REHABILITATION

Ottawa.—The department of pensions and national health is studying and planning the care of fighting men after the present war, it was stated recently by Hon. Ian MacKenzie. Lakeshore Boys Win Basketball Shield

Each year for quite a number of years the Edmonton Exhibition Association have sponsored junior, senior, boys and girls basketball tournaments, held during the week of the annual exhibition. The competitions are only open to teams from country points, teams from Edmonton and other large centres being barred.

It must be twelve years since a Tofield team first appeared at this tournament. At that time Bert "Hiking" Swift was the main spring of basketball interest here and he had quite a time working up enthusiasm for the game. Then along came Cliff Stutzman and for a time basketball flourished. The team of those days made several attempts to bring the exhibition shield to Tofield but were unsuccessful. They had alibis of course, the most common one being that were up against a better team. On one occasion they were doing quite well in the tournament, ahead by—don't we say it now—Brenneman Brothers, when Cliff received the bum. Cliff was the spark plug of the team and that accident probably lost them the shield that year. On another occasion Cliff cracked a forward line all going only to have one of them unavailable during exhibition west. Out of this interest the Lakeshore team emerged. In Tofield itself, interest in local basketball has been at a very low ebb for years. But this one team at Lakeshore wouldn't quit. Year after year the team, without the "thunder from the stands," persistently practised, and for this alone they deserve the congratulations of the district.

For the past few years they have competed in the Edmonton Exhibition tournament and this year achieved their ambition and won the shield. They played Botha and Leder. Leder is a steady performer at the exhibition tournament and were the title winners last year. The team is practically 100 per cent country, only one member working in town.

Line- up:—Melvin Walker, Ronald Walker, John Moore, Frank Dunn, Oscar Ashley, Wesley Wasko.

EDMONTON MOVIE

Made last year by the Edmonton Junior Chamber of Commerce, a movie film is being shown in the Education Pavilion at the New York World's Fair. Stressing beauty spots and major attractions throughout the city, the film was shown to service clubs and other organizations during last year's beautification drive. Officials of the Junior Chamber are confident it will help promote interest in Alberta's capital city.

BUTTERFLY COLONY

Approached by the leaders of the Hutterite colony in Southern Alberta with a proposal to bring members of the sect from England, Canadian authorities told the delegation the matter would have to be referred to the Dominion Government. The proposal is said to involve the movement of more than 100 women and children. Hutterites of whom there are some 4,000 in Alberta, are exempt from military service. Originating in Germany, members of the sect first settled in the Provinces about thirty years ago.

THUNDER FROM THE STANDS

Chapter II

SYNOPSIS

Lee Rollins, tennis ace, is torn between two desires: His dreams of going to Europe with the Davis Cup team to help win the cup for America; and is in love with the rich Gracy Worthington, who is willing to defy her family and marry him if he will give up tennis. Lee's manager tells the matter for him when a match game he injures an ankle so seriously that the doctors say he can never play again. He gets a job at Talbot's sporting goods shop —selling tennis equipment — and sends for Grace.

There was sudden activity at the train gate. Lee's heart thumped against his chest. People were filing out. He scanned each individual eagerly, his height making it possible for him to peer far down the runway.

And then he saw her! She was dressed in chartreuse, a shade particularly becoming to her unusual coloring. Over one arm she carried a light coat. A porter followed her, a bag in each hand.

Then she saw him! She hesitated for the fraction of an instant, as if realizing that her next step was the most momentous of her life, then came quickly forward.

He held both her hands in his.

"Oh, Lee!" There were tears in her eyes.

"Grace, honey!" His voice was hoarse.

They walked, automatically, across the retreats toward the taxi-stand her hand tucked under his arm. Strangely silent, each wanted to speak, but, embarrassed, did not know how to begin.

"When I first saw you," he said in the taxi, "I thought you looked a trifle pale, but I guess it was just my imagination. You look marvelous, sweetheart."

She laughed, but her voice was serious. "You'd be a trifle pale, too, I suppose, if you were running away from home in gay surprise."

"So it's like that?"

She nodded. "Yes, like that. They were furious. Threatened to cut me off without a penny and all that sort of thing. I told them it didn't matter the least bit. And here I am. With two bags of clothes. But I'm not at all afraid, Lee. Funny, isn't it?"

He held her close to him. "You'll never regret it, Gracie. Never."

From his coat pocket he shyly extracted a little box, took the ring from it, hesitantly demanding that she close her eyes. Fumbling he slipped the tiny solitaire on her finger, allowed her to open her eyes.

They decided that the next day they would look for an apartment. Until something that was both comfortable and within their means was found Grace would stay at the St. Andrew. Lee saw her settled in a room two floors above his and then explained that because this was Saturday he had to be back on the job at seven. She insisted on having tea and a sandwich with him in the drug store at the corner.

They sat on high stools at the counter and made plans for the immediate future. During Lee's Monday lunch-hour they would dash down to the Municipal Building and get the license. They would go to the church not far from the hotel and arrange with the minister to be married sometime during the week. He kissed her and strode off toward Fifth Avenue and Talbot's, whistling merrily as he walked.

How good it was to have someone to him before going off to work! And to know she'd be there, waiting for him, when he came home. Something to work for.

At five minutes after ten, having finished serving a middle-aged dowager who had become a certain smile upon him, Lee took his hat from its locker and walked hurriedly back through the brightly illuminated New York City streets to the St. Andrew Hotel. Grace was waiting for him in the lobby.

The hours were crowded, but they finally got a top lunch and sat close together, hands interlocked, the touch of the small diamond giving him a sense of possessiveness. Shoulders touching, they rode then through the night.

When Lee returned from lunch on Monday, Casey said: "There's someone waiting for you up front. Wants Mr. Rollins and no one else but."

Panic at Lee's approach. Lee strode you've reached a position where you can take care of her as she's always been taken care of. Ask her to count lunch hour; give up this—gamble, Rollins."

Lee's eyes bored into Worthington's. "If you wish," he said grimly, "I'll tell you where Grace is staying. You can go to see her. We've already discussed the entire situation with Worthington, but the conclusion is always the same. We love each other. Somehow nothing seems to matter but that. And nothing in the universe, I'm sure, can change it."

"Nothing in the universe, Rollins? The words were slipped, derisively, consident. "Not even—thirty thousand?"

"Nothin'!" Hoarser, vibrant threatening.

But Dan Worthington was unmoved. He held Lee's gaze coolly, calmly and immovable, fascinated, as he watched the older man's jaw tighten quickly over the chest that was Lee's last emotion. Dan Worthington tore the card, folded it and thrust it into Lee's hand. Then he turned quickly and, disdaining the elevator, disappeared down the stairs.

Lee laughed. Why, it was just like movies. Yet here it was happening to him in real life. He could not be happy as I am now. Regardless of anything, you're all I have. Never, never stop loving me."

He kissed her, held her close, felt that I wouldn't try to change her mind because you are right. I'm fairly happy with things as they are. Lee's heart bounding against his. I'll be content to give up the thought of marriage if he'll keep coming to see you forever I'd have kicked him down the stairs. He pushed this behind his head as he left."

Lee took from his pocket the small folded paper, opened it over the table to Grace, handed himself light-hearted.

But of Grace at his side he was acutely conscious. Conscious of the soft, irregular rise and fall of her bosom; her shoulder touching his arm; the faint aroma of her perfume; the pressure of her hand.

Grace's hand found his as they rose to their feet. His thumb found the ring, realized that those two kisses—the one in the taxi and this one here in the church—were probably the most important acts of his life. He had married the girl he loved, a boy, he was leaving as a man, with all a man's responsibilities. A wife to look after, a home to maintain, perhaps in time children.

Side by side they made their way up the aisle. She was trembling. But the trembling ceased as they reached the vestibule. The taut was waiting. They ran again quickly through the driving rain, this time from the comfort and safety of the church to that of the interior of the cab. Thunder growled and lightning reached down toward them. But they laughed.

A little later the car stopped before the building which housed their three-for unfinished apartment. Lee paid the driver. They walked through the hall and up three flights of stairs. The door closed behind them. They were in their new home. Grace said, "Will we've done it, darling! We're married."

CANADA PLAN ADEQUATE DEFENCE

Summary

The problem is the defence of Canada.

1. The C.A.S.F. comprising as at today 128,572 men, from 19 to 45 years of age, who are serving at home and abroad. Pay—$2.50 per day plus allowances.

2. The Veterans' Home Guard comprises comprising veterans of the Great War, 55 years and under, who are doing full-time service and holding key points. There are authorized 32 companies of 250 men each. Pay is the same as C.A.S.F.

3. The Non-Permanent Active Militia (N.P.A.M.) comprising men, 19 to 45 years of age, who have volunteered for service in the militia and who do part time training. Pay $1.30 per day, without allowances. They are paid only for the time spent in training.

4. The Veterans' Home Guard Reserve, comprising veterans, over 45 years of age and under, who are doing part time training. Pay same as N.P.A.M.

The New Policy

Voluntary recruiting for the N.P.A.M., as distinct from the C.A.S.F., will be suspended on August 15 for the time being.

Provision will be made to bring into the militia the men who will be called for training, duty and service in Canada, under the National Resources Mobilization Act. The men thus recruited will be brought directly into the militia regiments throughout the country.

These men will be called for 30 days' training, beginning, as is expected, about October 1, 1940, in groups of approximately 30,000 per month. Single men in the home age categories will be called first. It is unlikely that married men will be called during the first year.
